Application: The June 11, 1998 draft regulations will add paras. 1100(1)(zg) and (zh), applicable to 1998 et seq.

Department of Finance News Release, June 11, 1998: GOVERNMENT PROVIDES TAX RELIEF TO SMALL BUSINESSES FOR YEAR 2000 COMPUTER COMPLIANCE

Finance Minister Paul Martin today announced tax relief for small- and medium-sized businesses to address the year 2000 computer compliance problem. This announcement falls within the wider context of the government's role in responding to the year 2000 challenge, which is being jointly co-ordinated by Industry Minister John Manley and Treasury Board President Marcel Massé. Under the tax relief announced today, accelerated capital cost allowance (CCA) deductions of up to $50,000 will be provided to small- and medium-sized firms for computer hardware and software acquired to replace systems that are not year 2000 compliant. This will allow smaller firms to deduct 100 per cent of eligible expenditures in the year in which they occur.

The year 2000 compliance problem is a design flaw in software applications and in certain microprocessors related to storage of the year designation that could play havoc when the calendar year changes from 1999 to 2000. Many software applications such as accounting systems and certain types of computer hardware — including desktop computers, networks, and the microprocessor chips that control transportation systems, machinery, elevators, office equipment, lights, building climate, and security systems — could be affected. Although many firms have taken action to ensure that their computer systems will be ready for the year 2000, a large number still have not addressed this issue. "The year 2000 computer problem presents a serious economic challenge for the Canadian economy. Businesses must act promptly if they are going to meet that challenge," Minister Martin said. "That's why we are providing targeted tax relief to help ease the financial constraints faced by small- and medium-sized businesses in addressing this issue."

Specifically, an accelerated CCA deduction will be provided to small- and medium-sized enterprises on the cost of computer hardware and software acquired between January 1, 1998 and June 30, 1999 in order to replace equipment that is not year 2000 compliant.

For eligible computer hardware and software, accelerated CCA deductions, combined with the regular CCA claims, will result in 100 per cent of the cost of eligible expenditures being deductible in the year of acquisition.

Tax relief for small- and medium-sized firms to help them address the year 2000 issue was one of the recommendations made by both the House of Commons Standing Committee on Industry and the Task Force Year 2000, a private sector-led group set up by Minister Manley. The Task Force of 14 chief executives was established in September 1997 to examine the preparedness of Canadian business to accommodate the transition to the year 2000.

Mr. Martin said he wanted to immediately announce the tax relief for small- and medium-sized businesses to give them maximum notice so they can take advantage of the assistance, as well as to encourage them to give top priority to the year 2000 computer compliance problem.

Attached is a Backgrounder that provides more details about how the program works, and Draft Regulations giving effect to this announcement.

Tax Treatment of Year 2000 Expenditures

The accelerated capital cost allowance deduction being provided to small- and medium-sized businesses builds upon statements made in the February 1998 budget and signals the government's continued concern about the year 2000 preparedness of businesses, especially smaller firms.

Current expenditures

The February 1998 budget clarified the tax treatment of certain year 2000 expenditures and Revenue Canada issued a technical bulletin on this issue (Technical News No. 12). Specifically, expenditures made only to ensure functionality in the year 2000 (i.e., a repair) are fully deductible in the year incurred. In these instances, taxpaying firms would be provided with immediate tax relief.

Computer chips and firmware

The government is also confirming that expenditures on computer chips and firmware (software that is embedded in a computer chip) will be treated like other year 2000-related costs. That is, expenditures on computer chips and firmware made only to ensure functionality in the year 2000 are fully deductible in the year incurred.

Capital expenditures

Concern has been expressed that small- and medium-sized businesses need to address the year 2000 problem on a priority basis, but may face certain financial constraints. This was one of the specific concerns raised by the House of Commons Standing Committee on Industry in its recent report on the year 2000 problem. The government proposes to provide additional immediate tax relief to small- and medium-sized firms by providing an immediate write off of 100 per cent of the cost of computer hardware and software acquired to address their year 2000 problem.

The write off will take the form of an accelerated CCA deduction claimable in the year of acquisition, thereby effectively permitting small- and medium-sized enterprises to deduct immediately CCA that would otherwise have only been deductible over future years:

- for eligible computer hardware and systems software (i.e., Class 10(f) assets) — the accelerated CCA deduction will be 85 per cent of cost (this, combined with the regular CCA claim, will result in a deduction of 100 per cent of the cost of eligible expenditures in the year of acquisition); and
- for eligible application software (i.e., Class 12(o) assets) — the accelerated CCA deduction will be 50 per cent of cost (this, combined with the regular CCA claim, will result in a deduction of 100 per cent of the cost of eligible expenditures in the year of acquisition).

In order to be eligible, the computer hardware and software must be year 2000 compliant and be acquired to replace non-compliant hardware and/or software acquired before 1998. To encourage small businesses to act in an expeditious manner, only expenditures for hardware and software acquired during the period January 1, 1998 to June 30, 1999 will be eligible.

Revenue Canada will accept an election, supported by a letter, filed with the tax return, that identifies the eligible property being acquired, its cost and the date of acquisition and a description of the property being replaced. This letter will fulfil the requirement to make an election in prescribed manner.

To focus the benefit on smaller businesses, the maximum additional deduction will be limited to $50,000 per taxpayer/partnership. In addition, only unincorporated firms and corporations not subject to the Large Corporations Tax will be eligible (i.e., incorporated firms with taxable capital of less than $10 million and unincorporated businesses). There will be special rules for corporate groups and partnerships that have corporate members.

(1.1) Notwithstanding subsections (1) and (3), the amount deductible by a taxpayer for a taxation year in respect of a property that is a specified leasing property at the end of the year is the lesser of

(a) the amount, if any, by which the aggregate of

(i) all amounts that would be considered to be repayments in the year or a preceding year on account of the principal amount of a loan made by the taxpayer if

(A) the taxpayer had made the loan at the time that the property last became a specified leasing property and in a principal amount equal to the fair market value of the property at that time,

(B) interest had been charged on the principal amount of the loan outstanding from time to time at the rate, determined in accordance with section 4302, in effect at the earlier of

(I) the time, if any, before the time referred to in subclause (II), at which the taxpayer last entered into an agreement to lease the property, and

(II) the time that the property last became a specified leasing property

(or, where a particular lease provides that the amount paid or payable by the lessee of the property for the use of, or the right to use, the property varies according to prevailing interest rates in effect from time to time, and the taxpayer so elects, in respect of all of the property that is the subject of the particular lease, in the taxpayer's return of income under Part I of the Act for the taxation year of the taxpayer in which the particular lease was entered into, the rate determined in accordance with section 4302 that is in effect at the beginning of the period for which the interest is being calculated), compounded semi-annually not in advance, and

(C) the amounts that were received or receivable by the taxpayer before the end of the year for the use of, or the right to use, the property before the end of the year and after the time it last became a specified leasing property were blended payments of principal and interest, calculated in accordance with clause (B), on the loan applied firstly on account of interest on principal, secondly on account of interest on unpaid interest, and thirdly on account of principal, and

(ii) the amount that would have been deductible under this section for the taxation year (in this subparagraph referred to as the "particular year") that includes the time (in this subparagraph referred to as the "particular time") at which the property last became a specified leasing property of the taxpayer, if

(A) the property had been transferred to a separate prescribed class at the later of

(I) the beginning of the particular year, and

(II) the time at which the property was acquired by the taxpayer,

(B) the particular year had ended immediately before the particular time, and

(C) where the property was not a specified leasing property immediately before the particular time, subsection (3) had applied,

exceeds

(iii) the aggregate of all amounts deducted by the taxpayer in respect of the property by reason of this subsection before the commencement of the year and after the time at which it last became a specified leasing property; and

(b) the amount, if any, by which,

(i) the aggregate of all amounts that would have been deducted by the taxpayer under this Part in respect of the property under paragraph 20(1)(a) of the Act in computing the income of the taxpayer for the year and all preceding taxation years had this subsection and subsections (11) and (15) not applied, and had the taxpayer, in each such year deducted under paragraph 20(1)(a) of the Act the maximum amount allowed under this Part, read without reference to this subsection and subsection (11) and (15), in respect of the property,

exceeds

(ii) the total depreciation allowed to the taxpayer before the commencement of the year in respect of the property.

(b) the subject of a lease at that time to a person with whom the taxpayer deals at arm's length and that, at the time the lease was entered into, was a lease for a term of more than one year, and

(c) the subject of a lease of property where the tangible property, other than exempt property, that was the subject of the lease had, at the time the lease was entered into, an aggregate fair market value in excess of $25,000, but, for greater certainty, does not include intangible property (including systems software and property referred to in paragraph (w) of Class 10 or paragraph (n) or (o) of Class 12 in Schedule II).

Related Provisions: Reg. 1100(1.12)–(1.3), (17.2) — Interpretation; Reg. 1101(5n) — Separate class.

(1.12) Notwithstanding subsections (1) and (1.1), where, in a taxation year, a taxpayer has acquired a property that was not used by the taxpayer for any purpose in that year and the first use of the property by the taxpayer is a lease of the property in respect of which subsection (1.1) applies, the amount allowed to the taxpayer under subsection (1) in respect of the property for the year shall be deemed to be nil.

(1.13) For the purposes of this section,

(a) "exempt property" means

(i) general purpose office furniture or office equipment included in Class 8 in Schedule II (including, for greater certainty, mobile office equipment such as cellular telephones and pagers) or general purpose electronic data processing equipment and ancillary data processing equipment, included in paragraph (f) of Class 10 in Schedule II, other than any individual piece thereof having a capital cost to the taxpayer in excess of $1,000,000,

(ii) furniture, appliances, television receivers, radio receivers, telephones, furnaces, hot-water heaters and other similar properties, designed for residential use,

(iii) a property that is a motor vehicle that is designed or adapted primarily to carry individuals on highways and streets and that has a seating capacity for not more than the driver and eight passengers, or a motor vehicle of a type commonly called a van or pick-up truck, or a similar vehicle,

(iv) a truck or tractor that is designed for hauling freight on highways,

(v) a trailer that is designed for hauling freight and to be hauled under normal operating conditions by a truck or tractor described in subparagraph (iv),

(vi) a building or part thereof included in Class 1, 3, 6, 20, 31 or 32 in Schedule II (including component parts such as electric wiring, plumbing, sprinkler systems, air-conditioning equipment, heating equipment, lighting fixtures, elevators and escalators) other than a building or part thereof leased primarily to a lessee that is

(A) a person who is exempt from tax by reason of section 149 of the Act,

(B) a person who uses the building in the course of carrying on a business the income from which is exempt from tax under Part I of the Act by reason of any provision of the Act, or

(C) a Canadian government, municipality or other Canadian public authority, who owned the building or part thereof at any time before the commencement of the lease (other than at any time during a period ending not later than one year after the later of the date the construction of the building or part thereof was completed and the date the building or part thereof was acquired by the lessee),

(vii) vessel mooring space, and

(viii) property that is included in Class 35 in Schedule II,

and for the purposes of subparagraph (i), where a property is owned by two or more persons or partnerships, or any combination thereof, the capital cost of the property to each such person or partnership shall be deemed to be the total of all amounts each of which is the capital cost of the property to such a person or partnership;

(b) property shall be deemed to be the subject of a lease for a term of more than one year at any time where, at that time

(i) the property had been leased by the lessee thereunder, a person with whom the lessee does not deal at arm's length, or any combination thereof, for a period of more than one year ending at that time, or

(ii) it is reasonable, having regard to all the circumstances, to conclude that the lessor thereunder knew or ought to have known that the lessee thereunder, a person with whom the lessee does not deal at arm's length, or any combination thereof, would lease the property for more than one year; and

(c) for the purposes of paragraph (1.11)(c), where it is reasonable, having regard to all the circumstances, to conclude that one of the main reasons for the existence of two or more leases was to avoid the application of subsection (1.1) by reason of each such lease being a lease of property where the tangible property, other than exempt property, that was the subject of the lease had an aggregate fair market value, at the time the lease was entered into, not in excess of $25,000, each such lease shall be deemed to be a lease of tangible property that had, at the time the lease was entered into, an aggregate fair market value in excess of $25,000.

(a) pursuant to an agreement in writing entered into before December 24, 1991, or

(b) that was under construction by or on behalf of the taxpayer on December 23, 1991.

(1.14) For the purposes of subsection (1.11) and notwithstanding subsection (1.13), where a taxpayer referred to in subsection (16) so elects in the taxpayer's return of income under Part I of the Act for a taxation year in respect of the year and all subsequent taxation years, all of the property of the taxpayer that is the subject of leases entered into in those years shall be deemed not to be exempt property for those years and the aggregate fair market value of all of the tangible property that is the subject of each such lease shall be deemed to have been, at the time the lease was entered into, in excess of $25,000.

(1.15) Subject to subsection (1.16) and for the purposes of subsection (1.11), where at any time a taxpayer acquires property that is the subject of a lease with a remaining term at that time of more than one year from a person with whom the taxpayer was dealing at arm's length, the taxpayer shall be deemed to have entered into a lease of the property at that time for a term of more than one year.

(1.16) Where, at any time, a taxpayer acquires from a person with whom the taxpayer is not dealing at arm's length, or by virtue of an amalgamation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1) of the Act), property that was specified leasing property of the person from whom the taxpayer acquired it, the taxpayer shall, for the purposes of paragraph (1.1)(a) and for the purpose of computing the income of the taxpayer in respect of the lease for any period after the particular time, be deemed to be the same person as, and a continuation of, that person.

(1.17) For the purposes of subsections (1.1) and (1.11), where at any particular time a property (in this subsection referred to as a "replacement property") is provided by a taxpayer to a lessee for the remaining term of a lease as a replacement for a similar property of the taxpayer (in this subsection referred to as the "original property") that was leased by the taxpayer to the lessee, and the amount payable by the lessee for the use of, or the right to use, the replacement property is the same as the amount that was so payable in respect of the original property, the following rules apply:

(a) the replacement property shall be deemed to have been leased by the taxpayer to the lessee at the same time and for the same term as the original property;

(b) the amount of the loan referred to in clause (1.1) (a) (i) (A) shall be deemed to be equal to the amount of that loan determined in respect of the original property;

(c) the amount determined under subparagraph (1.1)(a)(ii) in respect of the replacement property shall be deemed to be equal to the amount so determined in respect of the original property;

(d) all amounts received or receivable by the taxpayer for the use of, or the right to use, the original property before the particular time shall be deemed to have been received or receivable, as the case may be, by the taxpayer for the use of, or the right to use, the replacement property; and

(e) the original property shall be deemed to have ceased to be subject to the lease at the particular time.

(1.18) For the purposes of subsection (1.1), where for any period of time any amount that would have been received or receivable by a taxpayer during that period in respect of the use of, or the right to use, a property of the taxpayer during that period is not received or receivable by the taxpayer as a consequence of a breakdown of the property during that period and before the lease of that property is terminated, that amount shall be deemed to have been received or receivable, as the case may be, by the taxpayer.

(1.19) For the purposes of subsections (1.1) and (1.11), where at any particular time

(a) an addition or alteration (in this subsection referred to as "additional property") is made by a taxpayer to a property (in this subsection referred to as the "original property") of the taxpayer that is a specified leasing property at the particular time, and

(b) as a consequence of the addition or alteration, the aggregate amount receivable by the taxpayer after the particular time for the use of, or the right to use, the original property and the additional property exceeds the amount so receivable in respect of the original property,

the following rules apply:

(c) the taxpayer shall be deemed to have leased the additional property to the lessee at the particular time,

(d) the term of the lease of the additional property shall be deemed to be greater than one year,

(e) the prescribed rate in effect at the particular time in respect of the additional property shall be deemed to be equal to the prescribed rate in effect in respect of the lease of the original property at the particular time,

(f) subsection (1.11) shall be read without reference to paragraph (c) thereof in respect of the additional property, and

(g) the excess described in paragraph (b) shall be deemed to be an amount receivable by the taxpayer for the use of, or the right to use, the additional property.

(1.2) For the purposes of subsections (1.1) and (1.11), where at any time

(a) a lease (in this subsection referred to as the "original lease") of property is in the course of a bona fide renegotiation, and

(b) as a result of the renegotiation, the amount paid or payable by the lessee of the property for the use of, or the right to use, the property is altered in respect of a period after that time (otherwise than by reason of an addition or alteration to which subsection (1.19) applies),

the following rules apply:

(c) the original lease shall be deemed to have expired and the renegotiated lease shall be deemed to be a new lease of the property entered into at that time, and

(d) paragraph (1.13)(b) shall not apply in respect of any period before that time during which the property was leased by the lessee or a person with whom the lessee did not deal at arm's length.

(1.3) For the purposes of subsections (1.1) and (1.11), where a taxpayer leases to another person a building or part thereof that is not exempt property, the references to "one year" in paragraphs (1.11)(b) and (1.13)(b), subsection (1.15) and paragraph (1.19)(d) shall in respect of that building or part thereof be read as references to "three years".

(b) computer software tax shelter property, or

Application: The August 6, 1997 draft regulations, subsec. 1(1), will add para. 1100(17)(b), applicable generally to fiscal periods and taxation years of a taxpayer or partnership that end after August 5, 1997, but see the full application reproduced under new subsections 1100(20.1) and (20.2).

Technical Notes: Regulation 1100(17) defines "leasing property" for the purpose of restricting the amount of capital cost allowance ("CCA") that may be deducted in respect of such property. Under the leasing property rules, the amount of CCA that a taxpayer may deduct in respect of "leasing property" cannot exceed the taxpayer's rental, leasing or royalty income from leasing property (computed without reference to any CCA claim). Regulation 1100(17) is amended to exclude from the definition of "leasing property" computer software that is "computer software tax shelter property" (discussed below). Generally, this amendment applies to fiscal periods and taxation years of a taxpayer or partnership that end after August 5, 1997.

(c) property referred to in paragraph (w) of Class 10 or in paragraph (n) of Class 12 in Schedule II, where such property is owned by the taxpayer or the partnership, whether jointly with another person or otherwise, if, in the taxation year in respect of which the expression is being applied, the property was used by the taxpayer or the partnership principally for the purpose of gaining or producing gross revenue that is rent, royalty or leasing revenue, but for greater certainty, does not include a property leased by the taxpayer or the partnership to a lessee, in the ordinary course of the taxpayer's or partnership's business of selling goods or rendering services, under an agreement by which the lessee undertakes to use the property to carry on the business of selling, or promoting the sale of, the taxpayer's or partnership's goods or services.

Technical Notes: New Regulation 1100(20.1) provides that the amount of capital cost allowance ("CCA") that a taxpayer may deduct in respect of "computer software tax shelter property" cannot exceed the taxpayer's income from the business in which such property is used, computed without reference to any CCA deduction in respect of such property. Computer software tax shelter property is defined in new Regulation 1100(20.2) to be computer software that is depreciable property of a prescribed class of a person or partnership where

- the person's or partnership's interest in the property is a tax shelter investment, or
- an interest in the person or partnership is a tax shelter investment.

Generally, these amendments apply to fiscal periods and taxation years of a taxpayer or partnership that end after August 5, 1997.

Department of Finance news release, August 6, 1997:
New Rules Proposed for Computer Software Tax Shelters

Finance Minister Paul Martin and National Revenue Minister Herb Dhaliwal today issued a joint announcement that will improve the fairness of the tax system and prevent abuses related to computer software tax shelters.

Minister Martin today proposed to amend the Income Tax Regulations governing "leasing property rules" and to enact new "computer software tax shelter property rules". The "computer software tax shelter property rules" will restrict the deductibility of capital cost allowance for computer software that is not otherwise already subject to the leasing property rules; the deductibility will generally be limited to the amount of income earned by the business in which the software is used.

Mr. Dhaliwal stated that "Revenue Canada has been reviewing and auditing tax shelter arrangements, including computer software promotions, to ensure that they meet the requirements of the tax law". An increase in the auditing of tax shelters was announced by the Minister of National Revenue in a joint press release with Finance Minister Paul Martin on December 1, 1994.

Further information on the changes to the Income Tax Regulations and details of the various tax rules used by Revenue Canada in issuing reassessments is provided in the attached Backgrounder. Copies of the draft Income Tax Regulations together with detailed explanatory notes are available from the Department of Finance Distribution Centre (613) 943-8665 at a cost of $10.

Backgrounder

A tax shelter is any property promoted to an investor on the basis that losses or other deductions, or benefits such as tax credits or revenue guarantees, will be available to the taxpayer within four years, the total of which equals or exceeds the amount the investor pays for the property.

Potential investors in tax shelters should be cautious and exercise due diligence before investing in a tax shelter. In particular, the existence of a tax shelter registration number in respect of a promotion should not be taken as government approval for the promotion. Tax shelter selling documents are required to display a tax shelter identification number and to indicate that the identification number is for administrative proposes only and does not in any way confirm the entitlement of an investor to claim any tax benefit associated with the tax shelter. Revenue Canada uses tax shelter identification numbers to, for example, identify for audit purposes investors participating in tax shelter arrangements. It is prudent, therefore, for investors to examine all documents carefully and consult an independent tax advisor before purchasing a tax shelter. Matters that should be considered include, for example, whether the tax shelter features:

- a lack of business activity, or an activity with no reasonable expectation of profit;
- unreasonable or inflated expenses, or overvalued assets; or
- limited-recourse financing, including promises that debts will be forgiven or not be collected, or offers of financing arrangements that indefinitely defer an investor's payment.

Over the last four years, the government has implemented a number of measures countering the proliferation of transactions designed primarily to sell income tax shelters to investors, including the "limited-recourse debt" rules, the "matchable expenditure" rules and the broadening of the "minimum tax" base to include all tax shelter losses. Nevertheless, the government remains concerned about "computer software tax shelter promotions" being marketed to investors. In particular, computer software tax shelters registered under the "tax shelter identification rules" exceeded $1 billion in 1996 with $190 million in actual sales. A typical software tax shelter is as follows:

Investment

Cash (over 2 years)	$ 45,000
Long-term note (often for a 10-year term)	$105,000
Total Purchase Price of Tax Shelter	$150,000

Tax Benefits being Claimed

	Tax Loss	Tax Rate	Tax Savings
The first taxation year:	$ 75,000	.5	$37,500
The second taxation year:	$ 75,000	.5	$37,500
Total	$150,000	.5	$75,000

Revenue Canada Audits:

Concurrent with the announcement of the "limited-recourse debt" rules on December 1, 1994 (Press Release 94-112), the Minister of National Revenue indicated that Revenue Canada would increase its audits of "computer software" tax shelter promotions. In audits completed to date, Revenue Canada has identified a number of non-compliance issues with these tax shelters with resulting reassessments in excess of $20 million. As well, audits involving up to $230 million in computer software tax shelter losses are in various stages of progress.

Losses in respect of these tax shelter promotions are normally not deductible, in whole or part, if:

1. The proposed activity does not have a reasonable expectation of profit;

2. The value of the software is inflated or unreasonable;

3. The notes payable as part of the purchase price are not genuine, are contingent liabilities, or their value is inflated;

4. The investors claim losses for which they are not truly at risk;

5. The tax shelter promotion does not comply with the capital cost allowance leasing property rules that preclude capital cost allowance claims that would otherwise create or increase an investor's loss;

6. The software has not been acquired by the entity in question or it is not available for use in the relevant taxation year;

7. The tax shelter was sold before a tax shelter identification number was obtained by the promoter; or

8. The general anti-avoidance rule (GAAR) applies to the tax shelter promotion.

Some computer software promotions are currently being marketed to investors on the assumption that the computer software will be used to produce non-software products for sale rather than to earn rent, royalty or leasing income from the licensing or distribution of copies of the software (i.e., marketed on the basis that the property is not "leasing property"). Even in cases where the software is not a leasing property, however, the other above- mentioned non-compliance issues may arise during the course of an audit and result in a reassessment of an investor's tax return.

The changes in the Income Tax Regulations proposed by the Minister of Finance will resolve disputes on many of these issues for the future by, in effect, extending stop-loss rules similar to the leasing loss rules to all computer software tax shelters regardless of whether the computer software comes within the conventional concept of "leasing property". In this way disputes between Revenue Canada and taxpayers on the effectiveness of these tax shelters will be reduced and potential investors will be protected from those promoting computer software tax shelters which are determined to be ineffective under the tax law.

Department of Finance news release, October 28, 1997

Finance Minister Paul Martin today announced further transitional relief from the rules announced on August 6, 1997 (Finance Canada News Release 97-069), which restrict the deduction of capital cost allowance in respect of computer software tax shelters.

Minister Martin indicated that the extended relief will apply to certain public offerings of computer software tax shelters, namely those that would have been eligible for transitional relief under the rules released August 6, 1997, but for the fact that

- the computer software was not identified in the public document; or
- the 10% minimum sales threshold had not been met.

The new restrictions will not apply to these tax shelters where

- the computer software upon which the tax shelter is based is acquired by the tax shelter before November 29, 1997 from a person resident in Canada who developed the software; and
- the total amount raised pursuant to the particular prospectus or offering memorandum does not exceed $100 million and is raised before 1998.

In this way, most of those offerings that were under serious contemplation as of the date the new rules were announced will be allowed to proceed, subject to all existing legislative requirements. In this context, the Minister emphasized that this transitional relief should not be taken to indicate government approval of these tax shelters. All computer software tax shelters will be closely audited by Revenue Canada. The Minister noted that the public should be aware that many of the investors in computer software tax shelters that Revenue Canada has audited to date have been reassessed to deny all or a portion of the deductions claimed.

As well, the Minister indicated that in the attached revised transitional rules, the references in the August 6, 1997, press release to "November 1997" have been changed to refer to 1998.

(b) para. 1100(21)(e) applies after 1994 in respect of property acquired after February 21, 1994 and before 1995 by a partnership pursuant to an agreement in writing entered into by the partnership after February 21, 1994 and before 1995, where

(vii) the producer of the production receives before 1995 a commitment for funding or other government assistance (or an advance ruling or active status letter in respect of eligibility for such funding or other government assistance) for the production from a federal or provincial government agency the mandate of which is related to the provision of assistance to film productions in Canada, or

(viii) the production is a continuation of a television series an episode of which satisfies the requirements of subpara. (vi).

Technical Notes: Subsection 1100(21) requires that the depreciable cost of a taxpayer's interest in a certified feature film or certified production be reduced by certain amounts, including certain revenue guarantees provided in respect of the investment.

Subsection 1100(21) is amended to require that the depreciable cost of such an interest be reduced by the portion of any debt obligation of the investor outstanding at the end of a particular year that is convertible into an interest in the film or tape or the taxpayer.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, February 22, 1994: The federal government is committed to the continued viability of the Canadian film industry. Currently, assistance is provided to the industry through direct expenditure programs as well as income tax incentives for certified Canadian films. The government is concerned, however, that film financing mechanisms have been developed to provide tax benefits to investors in excess of those contemplated when the incentives were introduced and in a manner inconsistent with the limited partnership at-risk rules. Generally, these financings depend on an overallocation of benefits to investors through the use of convertible debt.

In particular, some film limited partnerships have raised debt that is convertible into interests in the partnership. After the tax benefits and cash distributions have been allocated to the original limited partners, the lender converts its loan into a partnership interest. In effect, proceeds from convertible loans are used to acquire films or video tapes at a capital cost which is, when allocated to the original limited partners in the form of capital cost allowance (CCA), in excess of the amount that would otherwise be allocated to such limited partners if the lender were considered to be a partner from the time the loan was made. The combination of this excess allocation of CCA to the original limited partners and the distribution of revenue to those partners ensures that the original limited partners have little or no investment risk.

Accordingly, this budget proposes to amend the Income Tax Regulations to reduce the capital cost of a film or video tape acquired after February 22, 1994 by the amount of any loan that is convertible into an interest in the film or a partnership that holds the film or video tape until such time as the convertible loan is exchanged for a partnership interest or repaid. Transitional relief will be provided for property acquired pursuant to an agreement in writing entered into before February 22, 1994 or pursuant to a prospectus, preliminary prospectus, registration statement or offering memorandum filed before February 22, 1994 and where required by law, accepted for filing by a public authority in Canada pursuant to and in accordance with securities legislation of Canada or of any province.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 1100(21)

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, February 27, 1995: The elements of the existing film tax incentive to be eliminated for films acquired after 1995 (and films acquired in 1995 in respect of which the new credit is claimed) include the following:

- exemption from the reduction of CCA in respect of certain revenue guarantees under Income Tax Regulation 1100(21).

vertible into an interest in the property or the taxpayer.

Division III — Property Rules

1102. (1) Property not included — The classes of property described in this Part and in Schedule II shall be deemed not to include property

(a) the cost of which is deductible in computing the taxpayer's income;

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 1102(1)(a)

(a) the cost of which would be deductible in computing the taxpayer's income if the Act were read without reference to sections 66 to 66.4 of the Act;

Application: The December 5, 1996 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (Appendix A), subsec. 2(1), will amend para. 1102(1)(a) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after March 6, 1996.

Technical Notes: Subsection 1102(1) provides that certain properties are excluded as depreciable properties under Schedule II to the Regulations. Under paragraph 1102(1)(a), a taxpayer's property is excluded for this purpose if its cost is deductible in computing the taxpayer's income.

Paragraph 1102(1)(a) is amended to provide that it does not apply to a property the cost of which is deductible under any of sections 66 to 66.4 of the Act. This amendment is made in order to resolve any circularity between the resource provisions and the depreciable property provisions. In this regard, it is noted that there are a number of references in these sections to depreciable property, including new references in the amended definitions "Canadian exploration expense" and "Canadian development expense" in subsections 66.1(6) and 66.2(5) of the Act. The amendment to paragraph 1102(1)(a) ensures that the determination of whether property is depreciable property is generally made before determining whether the cost the property is eligible for deduction under any of sections 66 to 66.4 of the Act.

A further proposed amendment to subsection 1102(1) is contained in Appendix E to these explanatory notes.

Proposed Addition — Reg. 1102(1)(a.1)

(a.1) the cost of which is included in the taxpayer's Canadian renewable and conservation expense (within the meaning assigned by section 1219);

Application: The September 16, 1997 draft regulations, s. 1, will add para. 1102(1)(a.1), applicable to expenses incurred after December 5, 1996.

Technical Notes: [The following Technical Notes were released with the December 5, 1996 draft regulations.]

The 1996 budget proposed the introduction of a new category of expenditures, Canadian renewable and conservation expenses (CRCE), which would include intangible costs for projects the equipment for which is included in Capital Cost Allowance Class 43.1. The budget proposed that the tax treatment of these expenses would be analogous to that of Canadian Exploration Expenses. In particular, the budget proposed that CRCE would be fully deductible and capable of being renounced to shareholders who have entered into a flow-through share agreement. The budget also stated that CRCE would take effect only after the definition of eligible costs had been developed in consultation with Natural Resources Canada and industry representatives. The proposed regulations contained in this Appendix, in conjunction with certain amendments to sections 66 and 66.1 of the Act, give effect to this budget announcement.

Part XI sets out rules for the deduction of capital cost allowance. Subsection 1102(1) provides that certain properties are excluded from the classes of depreciable property in Schedule II to the Regulations.

Subsection 1102(1) is amended to add proposed paragraph (a.1), consequential on the introduction of the definition CRCE in subsection 66.1(6) of the Act, in order to ensure that an expenditure which is deductible as CRCE is not also included as the capital cost of depreciable property.

Department of Finance news release (accompanying federal budget), March 6, 1996: Draft Amendments Relating to the Resource Allowance and Other Matters

Finance Minister Paul Martin today released draft legislation and revised draft regulations dealing with the resource allowance and related matters.

The draft amendments include new measures designed to provide for a more stable interim resource allowance structure until further changes come into effect after 1996, as outlined in the Budget. There are also new rules providing for depreciable property treatment in connection with certain assets built by taxpayers. New rules also clarify the treatment of refund interest for corporations that engage in resource activities and the determination of Canadian exploration expenses, Canadian development expenses and foreign exploration and development expenses.

Most of the draft amendments relate directly to the resource allowance, which is provided to taxpayers instead of allowing for the deduction of provincial Crown royalties and mining taxes in computing income. These amendments clarify original draft regulations issued in July 1992 and further draft regulations, issued in March 1993, dealing with the calculation of the resource allowance for members of partnerships.

The 1992 draft regulations were issued in response to a court case (The Queen v. Gulf Canada Limited [[1992] 1 C.T.C. 183 — ed.]) which has resulted in substantial tax refunds, together with interest, becoming payable in the mining and oil and gas sectors. The Government took steps to reduce its future risks with respect to the adverse interpretation of the law by passing legislation in June 1995 which requires all large corporations to specify and quantify their outstanding tax issues.

The draft regulations will be processed as soon as possible. The draft amendments to the Act will be included as part of the package of income tax amendments needed to implement the proposals in the Budget.

The draft amendments, together with an overview and detailed explanatory notes, are attached [reproduced under 13(7.5), 66(15), 66.1(6), 66.2(5), Reg. 1102, 1104, 1204, 1205, 1206, 1210, 5202, 5203 and Sch. II, Cl. 8 and 17 — ed.].

Overview

The draft amendments released today cover a number of issues, but primarily affect taxpayers in the mining and oil and gas sectors. The issues of most interest to taxpayers outside these sectors are the draft amendments affecting the tax treatment of certain roads and other properties funded, but not owned, by taxpayers. An overview of the proposed amendments is provided below. These amendments are described in detail in the accompanying explanatory notes.

1. Terminology: "Gross Resource Profits", "Resource Profits" and "Adjusted Resource Profits"

Under the existing Income Tax Regulations, "resource profits" are determined under subsection 1204(1) of the Regulations. 25% of "resource profits" (after a number of adjustments) may be deducted under paragraph 20(1)(v.1) of the Act in computing income. The deduction is known as the "resource allowance". The determination of resource profits is also relevant in computing the special depletion deductions available to taxpayers under section 65 of the Act.

Under the amendments, "resource profits" will be determined under subsection 1204(1.1) of the Regulations, rather than subsection 1204(1). Instead, the amount determined under subsection 1204(1) will be referred to as "gross resource profits" in recognition of the fact that the Courts determined in the Gulf case that the existing regulations were not sufficiently broad to require the allocation of certain deductions (specifically, certain capital cost allowance claims and scientific research expenditures). The resource allowance will be determined with reference to 25% of "adjusted resource profits", which is defined in subsection 1210(2) of the Regulations.

2. Allocation of Deductions to "Resource Profits" and "Adjusted Resource Profits"

Every amount that is deducted in computing a taxpayer's income for a taxation year will also be required to be deducted in computing the taxpayer's "resource profits" and "adjusted resource profits" for the year unless there is an exemption provided.

The exemptions are designed to preserve the existing treatment of a number of specified deductions (including depletion deductions, exploration and development expenditures, deductions in respect of resource properties and interest deductions) and to allow for the reasonable allocation of deductions to profit-earning activities that fall outside the scope of activities covered by the "resource profits" and "adjusted resource profits" definitions.

The revised amendments in this regard clarify the draft amendments released in July 1992 in response to the Gulf case and apply to taxation years that end after July 23, 1992.

3. Resource Allowance and Partnerships

The Act no longer allows the resource allowance to be used to increase the loss or reduce the income that is allocated by a partnership to its members. Instead, a partnership's adjusted resource profits or losses will be allocated under the draft amendments to partners for the purpose of determining each partner's own resource allowance. These rules are designed to prevent partnerships from being used to maximize the resource allowance through the isolation of profit-earning and loss-producing resource properties.

The current draft amendments clarify those released in March 1993 to deal with the resource allowance and partnerships.

4. Treatment of Net Profit Interests

Under the existing resource allowance rules, royalty payments made by a taxpayer with a working interest in a resource property to a taxpayer who holds a net profit interest in that property do not result in any reduction of the payer's resource allowance. Conversely, royalties received on net profits interests are not allowed to increase resource allowance.

This treatment has given rise to a number of financing arrangements under which net profit interests are used to significantly increase the overall resource allowance that is available. By carving out a net profit interest from a working interest, the holder of the working interest can substantially decrease the amount paid for depreciable properties associated with the working interest. As a consequence, the amount of the resource profits that qualify for the resource allowance can be inappropriately increased.

To address this issue in a manner which minimizes complexity, it is proposed to make a further adjustment in the way in which adjusted resource profits are computed. A royalty on a net profit interest — referred to in the law as a "specified net royalty" — paid by the holder of a working interest will now be required to be deducted in computing the payer's adjusted resource profits. However, the recipient will be allowed to include 1/2 of the royalty in computing the recipient's adjusted resource profits. This adjustment is to apply to royalties paid on net profit interests created after March 5, 1996.

5. Treatment of Service Income

The draft amendments clarify that, in general, income from services rendered is not treated as resource profits for the purposes of the resource allowance and the capital cost allowance rules. This recognizes that the providers of services are not required to bear the cost of Crown royalties or mining taxes. These amendments are contained in draft paragraphs 1102(1)(a) and 1204(3)(e) of the Regulations.

6. Anti-Avoidance

The draft amendments contain an anti-avoidance rule that is designed to prevent taxpayers from entering into arrangements with non-arm's length parties in order to minimize the costs that are allocated to resource profits and adjusted resource profits. In these circumstances, the draft amendments generally require the reduction of a taxpayer's resource profits and adjusted resource profits to the extent that the amount charged is less than the fair market value of any property or services provided to the taxpayer. For further details, see amended paragraph 1204(1.1)(c) and new subsection 1204(1.2) of the Regulations.

7. Refund Interest

The draft amendments ensure that corporations in the mining and oil and gas sectors will not be entitled to increase their entitlement to the manufacturing and processing tax credit because of the receipt of refund interest. These amendments should not be construed as implying that the receipt of refund interest previously had the result of increasing such entitlement. Refund interest is defined in draft subsection 5203(4) of the Regulations as interest arising from the overpayment of income and mining taxes, Crown royalties and similar amounts.

8. Canadian Exploration Expense, Canadian Development Expense and Foreign Exploration and Development Expenses

The definitions of these expressions in sections 66 to 66.2 of the Act will be amended to clarify that they do not reflect the capital cost of depreciable property. These definitions are relevant for the purpose of the resource allowance rules because such resource expenditures generally do not result in a reduction of adjusted resource profits.

9. Special Rules for Roads and Other Properties not Owned by a Taxpayer

In a number of cases, taxpayers may incur costs or make expenditures relating to the building or use of roads or similar properties where the taxpayer does not actually acquire ownership of the property. New subsection 13(7.5) of the Act generally will provide for depreciable property treatment in these circumstances. This amendment is linked to the changes to the resource allowance rules because capital cost allowance deducted in respect of depreciable property is required to reduce resource profits and adjusted resource profits.

bly be attributed to a service rendered by the taxpayer; and

(b) for the purpose of Class 10 in Schedule II, "income from a mine" does not include income that can reasonably be attributed to a service rendered by the taxpayer other than the processing of ore.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 1104(6.1)

(6.1) ["Income from a mine"] — Notwithstanding subsections (5) and (6),

(a) for the purposes of paragraphs 1100(1)(w) to (ya), subsections 1101(4a) to (4d) and Classes 28 and 41 in Schedule II, "income from a mine", or any expression referring to a taxpayer's income from a mine, does not include income that can reasonably be attributed to a service rendered by the taxpayer (other than a service rendered by the taxpayer as a coal mine operator); and

(b) for the purpose of Class 10 in Schedule II, "income from a mine" does not include income that can reasonably be attributed to a service rendered by the taxpayer (other than a service that is the processing of ore or that is rendered by the taxpayer as a coal mine operator).

Application: The December 5, 1996 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (Appendix A), subsec. 3(2), will amend subsec. 1104(6.1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after March 6, 1996.

Technical Notes: Subsections 1104(5) and (6) provide that, for specified purposes, the expression "income from a mine" includes income from listed activities. The definition is primarily relevant for the purpose of determining the capital cost allowance to which taxpayers engaged in mining activities are entitled. Taxpayers who operate mines are generally entitled to capital cost allowance of up to the amount of income from each eligible mine.

Subsection 1104(6.1) provides that, for these purposes, a taxpayer's mining income does not include income that can reasonably be attributed to a service rendered by the taxpayer. The only current exception to this rule applies for the purpose of Class 10. This exception allows those who process ore as a service to others access to the higher capital cost allowance rates provided for depreciable property under Class 10.

Subsection 1104(6.1) is amended so that an exception is also provided with respect to services rendered by a taxpayer as a "coal mine operator", as defined in subsection 1104(2).

Subsection 1104(6.1) is also amended so that the rule also applies for the purposes of Class 41, as a consequence of proposed paragraph (a.1) of Class 41 set out in Appendix D to these explanatory notes.

Related Provisions: Reg. 1104(2) — Definition of "coal mine operator".

(7) [Mine] — For the purposes of paragraphs 1100(1)(w) to (ya), subsections 1101(4a) to (4d) and 1102(8) and (9), section 1107 and Classes 12, 28 and 41 of Schedule II,

(a) "mine" includes

(i) a well for the extraction of material from a deposit of bituminous sands or oil shales or from a deposit of calcium chloride, halite or sylvite, and

(ii) a pit for the extraction of kaolin or tar sands ore,

but does not include

(iii) an oil or gas well, or

(iv) a sand pit, gravel pit, clay pit, shale pit, peat bog, deposit of peat or a stone quarry (other than a kaolin pit or a deposit of bituminous sands or oil shales);

(b) all wells of a taxpayer for the extraction of material from one or more deposits of calcium chloride, halite or sylvite, the material produced from which is sent to the same plant for processing, are deemed to be one mine of the taxpayer; and

(c) all wells of a taxpayer for the extraction of material from a deposit of bituminous sands or oil shales that the Minister, in consultation with the Minister of Natural Resources, determines constitute one project, are deemed to be one mine of the taxpayer.

Proposed Addition — Reg. 1106

Division VII — Certificates Issued by Minister of Canadian Heritage

1106. (1) Definitions — For the purposes of this section and paragraph (x) of Class 10 in Schedule II,

"Canadian" means a person that is

(a) a Canadian citizen as defined in the Citizenship Act,

(b) a permanent resident within the meaning assigned by the Immigration Act, or

(c) a corporation that is Canadian-controlled, as determined for the purposes of sections 26 to 28 of the Investment Canada Act;

"Canadian government film agency" means a federal or provincial government agency the mandate of which is related to the provision of assistance to film productions in Canada;

"excluded production" means a film or video production of a prescribed taxable Canadian corporation

(a) in respect of which

(i) the Minister of Canadian Heritage has not issued a certificate of completion, within 30 months after the end of the corporation's taxation year in which the production's principal photography began, certifying that the production was completed within two years after the end of the year,

(ii) where the production is not a treaty co-production, neither the corporation nor another prescribed taxable Canadian corporation related to the corporation

(A) is, except to the extent of an interest in the production held by a prescribed taxable Canadian corporation as a co-producer of the production or by a prescribed person (within the meaning assigned by subsection 1106(7)), the exclusive worldwide copyright owner in the production for all commercial exploitation purposes for the 25-year period that begins at the first time the production had been completed and is commercially exploitable,

(B) controls the initial licensing of commercial exploitation, and

(C) retains a share of revenues, that is acceptable to the Minister of Canadian Heritage, from the exploitation of the production in non-Canadian markets,

(iii) there is not an agreement in writing for consideration at the fair market value with

(A) a corporation that is a Canadian and is a distributor of film or video productions, or

(B) a corporation that holds a broadcasting license issued by the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission for television markets, to have the production shown in Canada within the two-year period that begins at the first time the production has been completed and is commercially exploitable, or

(iv) a distribution is made in Canada within that two-year period by a person who is not a Canadian, or

(b) that is

(xi) a production, other than a documentary, all or substantially all of which consists of stock footage, or

(xii) a production for which public financial support would, in the opinion of the Minister of Canadian Heritage, be contrary to public policy;

Technical Notes: June 20, 1996: Proposed Regulation 1106(1) provides the definition of "excluded production", which is a film or video production that is not considered to be an eligible production for the purposes of the Canadian film or video production tax credit regime. Generally, propose clause (a)(ii)(A) of that definition provides that a prescribed taxable Canadian corporation's film or video production will be an excluded production if the corporation (or a related prescribed taxable Canadian corporation) is not the exclusive worldwide copyright owner of the production for 5 years. This amendment would lengthen the required ownership period to 25 years. However, an exception from the exclusive worldwide copyright rule in respect of a production is made for copyright in the production held by a co-producer of the production that is a prescribed taxable Canadian corporation or by a prescribed person (see the commentary to proposed Regulation 1106(7)).

This amendment applies to the 1995 and subsequent taxation years except that the reference to the "25-year period" in that clause shall be read as a "5-year period" in the case of a film or video production for which a Canadian film or video production certificate is obtained before 1997. The change to a 25-year ownership requirement has been made upon recommendation of the Department of Canadian Heritage.

Related Provisions: Reg. 1106(1) — Definitions; Reg. 1106(5) — Lead performer/screenwriter; Reg. 1106(6) — Documentary production.

(5) Lead performer/screenwriter — For the purposes of subsections (4) and (6),

(a) a lead performer in respect of a production is an actor or actress who has a leading role in the production having regard to the performer's remuneration, billing and time on screen;

(b) a lead voice in respect of an animation production is the voice of the individual who has a leading role in the production having regard to the length of time that the individual's voice is heard in the production and the individual's remuneration;

(c) the principal screenwriter of a production is not a Canadian unless

(i) each individual involved in the preparation of the screenplay for the production is otherwise a Canadian, or

(ii) the principal screenwriter is an individual who otherwise is a Canadian and

(A) the screenplay for the production is based upon a work authored by a Canadian, and

(B) the work is published in Canada.

(6) Documentary production — Notwithstanding subsection (4), a documentary production that is not an excluded production is deemed to be a Canadian film or video production if all creative positions in respect of the production are occupied by individuals who are Canadians.

(7) Prescribed person — For the purpose of section 125.4 of the Act, "prescribed person" means

(a) a corporation that holds a television broadcasting licence issued by the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission,

(b) a person to whom paragraph 149(1)(l) of the Act applies where the person has a fund which is used to finance Canadian film or video productions,

(c) a Canadian government film agency, or

(d) in respect of a film or video production, a non-resident person who does not carry on a business in Canada where the person's interest in the production is acquired to comply with the certificate requirements of a treaty co-production twinning arrangement.

Technical Notes: June 20, 1996: Draft Regulation 1106(7), which defines "prescribed person" for the purposes of the proposed Canadian film or video production tax credit ("CFVPTC"), is relevant for two purposes. First, a prescribed person is not considered to be an "investor" under subsection 125.4(1). A qualifying corporation will, therefore, not be precluded by subsection 125.4(4) from claiming a CFVPTC in respect of a film or video production solely because a "prescribed person" has an interest in the production.

Second, the definition "prescribed person" is relevant for the purpose of determining whether a production is an "excluded production" under proposed Regulation 1106(1). Subsection 1106(7) of the Regulations applies to the 1995 and subsequent taxation years.

Related Provisions: ITA 253 — Extended meaning of "carry on business in Canada".

Application: The December 12, 1995 draft regulations (Canadian film tax credit), s. 3, will add s. 1106 (Div. VII), applicable to 1995 et seq. The June 20, 1996 Notice of Ways and Means Motion amended cl. (a)(ii)(A) of the definition "excluded production" in subsec. 1106(1) and added subsec. 1106(7), applicable to 1995 et seq., except that the reference to the "25-year period" in cl. (a)(ii)(A) shall be read as a "5-year period" in the case of a film or video production for which a Canadian film or video production certificate is obtained before 1997.

Division VIII — Determination of Viscosity and Density

1107. (1) For the purpose of the definition "bituminous sands" in section 248(1) of the Act, viscosity or density of hydrocarbons shall be determined using a number of individual samples (constituting a representative sampling of that deposit or those deposits, as the case may be, from which the taxpayer is committed to produce by means of one mine) tested

(a) at atmospheric pressure;

(b) at a temperature of 15.6 degrees Celsius; and

(c) free of solution gas.

(a) the earned depletion base of the original owner immediately after the original owner disposed of the particular property (determined as if, in the case of a disposition after April 28, 1978 as a result of an amalgamation described in section 87 of the Act, the original owner existed after the time of disposition and no property was acquired or disposed of in the course of the amalgamation) to the extent of the amount thereof that was not

(i) deducted by the original owner or any predecessor owner of the particular property in computing income for any taxation year,

(ii) deducted by the successor in computing income for a preceding taxation year, or

(iii) otherwise deducted by the successor in computing income for the taxation year, and

(b) the amount, if any, by which the aggregate of

(i) 25 per cent of the part of the successor's income for the year that may reasonably be regarded as attributable to

(A) the amount included in computing its income for the year under paragraph 59(3.2)(c) of the Act that may reasonably be regarded as attributable to the disposition by it in the year or a preceding taxation year of any interest in or right to the particular property, to the extent that the proceeds of the disposition have not been included in determining an amount under this clause, paragraph (7)(g), clause

29(25)(d)(i)(A) of the Income Tax Application Rules, clause 66.7(1)(b)(i)(A) or (3)(b)(i)(A) of the Act or paragraph 66.7(10)(g) of the Act for a preceding taxation year,

(3) Where in a taxation year ending after February 17, 1987 an original owner of a property disposes of the property in circumstances in which subsection (2) applies,

(a) the amount of the earned depletion base of the original owner determined immediately after the time of that disposition shall be deducted in determining the earned depletion base of the original owner at any time after the time that is immediately after the disposition;

(b) for the purposes of paragraph (2)(a), the earned depletion base of the original owner determined immediately after the original owner disposed of the property that was deducted in computing the original owner's income for the year shall be deemed to be equal to the lesser of Advance Tax Ruling: ATR-19: Earned depletion base and cumulative Canadian development expense.

(5) Subsections (2), 1203(3), 1207(7) and 1212(4) do not apply

(b) to permit, in respect of the acquisition by a corporation before February 18, 1987 of a property, a deduction by the corporation of an amount that the corporation would not have been entitled to deduct under this Part, if this Part, as it read in its application to taxation years ending before February 18, 1987, applied to taxation years ending after February 17, 1987; or

(c) in respect of a property acquired at any time after July 19, 1985, by purchase, amalgamation, merger, winding-up or otherwise, from a person who is exempt from tax under Part I of the Act on that person's taxable income (other than a corporation that is referred to in paragraph 149(1)(d) of the Act and that is a principal-business corporation), except where the property was acquired before 1987 pursuant to an agreement in writing made before July 20, 1985.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 1202(5)(c)

(c) in respect of a property acquired at any time by purchase, amalgamation, merger, winding-up or otherwise, from a person who is exempt from tax under Part I of the Act on that person's taxable income.

Application: The June 20, 1996 Notice of Ways and Means Motion will amend para. 1202(5)(c) to read as above, applicable to acquisitions that take place after April 26, 1995, other than an acquisition that takes place before 1996 and that was required by an agreement in writing entered into before April 26, 1995.

Technical Notes: Part XII of the Income Tax Regulations sets out a number of rules with respect to resource and processing allowances. These rules include provision for the inheritance by a corporation (the "successor") of another taxpayer's earned depletion allowances, mining exploration base, frontier exploration base and supplementary depletion allowances. Subsection 1202(5) provides that this successoring is not available in certain circumstances, including (in paragraph 1202(5)(c)) the acquisition of property from a person that is exempt from tax under Part I of the Act. The paragraph includes an exception, however: where the exempt person from whom the property is acquired is a corporation described in paragraph 149(1)(d) — broadly, a Crown or municipal corporation — that is also a principal-business corporation, the successor rules will apply. Paragraph 1202(5)(c) is amended to remove this exception.

(6) Subsections (2), 1203(3), 1207(7) and 1212(4) apply only to a corporation that has acquired a particular property

(a) where it acquired the particular property in a taxation year commencing before 1985 and, at the time it acquired the particular property, the corporation acquired the specified property of the person from whom it acquired the particular property;

(b) where it acquired the particular property from a person in a taxation year commencing after 1984 and, at the time it acquired the particular property, the corporation acquired

(i) all or substantially all of the Canadian resource properties of that person, or

(ii) where subparagraph (i) does not apply, the specified property of the person;

(c) where it acquired (other than in circumstances in which subparagraph (b)(ii) applies) the particular property after November 16, 1978 and in a taxation year ending before February 18, 1987 by any means other than by way of an amalgamation or winding-up and it and the person from whom it acquired the particular property have filed with the Minister a joint election under and in accordance with any of subsections 66(6), 66.1(4), 66.1(5), 66.2(3), 66.2(4), 66.4(3), and 66.4(4) of the Act as those subsections read in their application to that year;

(d) where it acquired the particular property after June 5, 1987 by way of an amalgamation or winding-up (other than in circumstances in which subparagraph (b)(ii) applies) and it has filed an election in the form prescribed for the purposes of paragraph 66.7(7)(c) of the Act with the Minister on or before the day on or before which the corporation is required to file a return of income pursuant to section 150 of the Act for its taxation year in which it acquired the particular property;

(e) where it acquired the particular property (other than by means of an amalgamation or winding-up or in circumstances in which subparagraph (b)(ii) applies) in a taxation year ending after February 17, 1987 and it and the person from whom it acquired the particular property have filed a joint election in the form prescribed for the purposes of paragraph 66.7(7)(e) of the Act with the Minister on or before the earlier of the days on or before which either of them is required to file a return of income pursuant to section 150 of the Act in respect of their respective taxation years that include the time of acquisition of the particular property; and

(f) where it acquired (other than by way of an amalgamation or winding-up) the particular property in circumstances in which subparagraph (b)(ii) applies and it and the person from whom it acquired the particular property agree to have subsection (2), 1203(3), 1207(7) or 1212(4), as the case may be, apply to them and notify the Minister in writing of the agreement in their returns of income under Part I of the Act for their respective taxation years that include the time of acquisition of the particular property.

(7) Where at any time after November 12, 1981

(a) control of a corporation is considered for the purposes of subsection 66.7(10) of the Act to have been acquired by a person or group of persons, or

(b) a corporation ceases to be exempt from tax under Part I of the Act on its taxable income, for the purposes of section 1201, this section and section 1205,

(c) the corporation shall be deemed after that time to be a successor (within the meaning assigned by subsection (2)) that had, at that time, acquired all the properties owned by the corporation immediately before that time from an original owner thereof;

(d) a joint election shall be deemed to have been filed in accordance with subsection (6) in respect of the acquisition;

(e) the earned depletion base of the corporation immediately before that time shall be deemed not to be the earned depletion base of the corporation immediately after that time but to be the earned depletion base of the original owner immediately after that time;

(f) [Revoked]

(g) where the corporation (in this paragraph referred to as the "transferee") was, immediately before and at that time,

(i) a parent corporation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1.4) of the Act), or

(ii) a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1.4) of the Act) of a particular corporation (in this paragraph referred to as the "transferor"), if both corporations agree to have this paragraph apply to them in respect of a taxation year of the transferor ending after that time and notify the Minister in writing of the agreement in the return of income under Part I of the Act of the transferor for that year, the transferor may, if throughout that year the transferee was such a parent corporation or subsidiary wholly-owned corporation of the transferor, designate in favour of the transferee, in respect of that year, for the purpose of making a deduction under subsection (2) in respect of expenditures incurred by the transferee before that time and when it was such a parent corporation or subsidiary wholly-owned corporation of the transferor, an amount not exceeding such portion of the amount that would be its income for the year, if no deductions were allowed under any of section 29 of the Income Tax Application Rules and sections 65 to 66.7 of the Act, [as] may reasonably be regarded as being attributable to

(iii) the production from Canadian resource properties owned by the transferor immediately before that time,

(iv) the disposition in the year of any Canadian resource properties owned by the transferor immediately before that time, and

(v) such processing as is described in subparagraph 1204(1)(b)(iii), (iv), or (v) with property owned by the transferor immediately before that time to the extent that such portion of the amount so designated is not designated under this paragraph in favour of any other taxpayer or under paragraph 66.7(10)(g) of the Act in favour of any taxpayer, and the amount so designated shall be deemed, for the purposes of determining the amount under subsection (2),

(vi) to be income from the sources described in subparagraph (iii), (iv) or (v), as the case may be, of the transferee for its taxation year in which that taxation year of the transferor ends, and

(vii) not to be income from the sources described in subparagraph (iii), (iv) or (v), as the case may be, of the transferor for that year;

(h) where, immediately before and at that time, the corporation (in this paragraph referred to as the "transferee") and another corporation (in this paragraph referred to as the "transferor") were both subsidiary wholly-owned corporations (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1.4) of the Act) of a particular parent corporation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1.4) of the Act), if the transferee and the transferor agree to have this paragraph apply to them in respect of a taxation year of the transferor ending after that time and notify the Minister in writing of the agreement in the return of income under Part I of the Act of the transferor for that year, paragraph (g) shall apply for that year to the transferee and transferor as though one were the parent corporation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1.4) of the Act) of the other; and

(i) where that time is after January 15, 1987 and at that time the corporation was a member of a partnership that owned a property at that time,

(i) for the purposes of paragraph (c), the corporation shall be deemed to have owned immediately before that time that portion of the property owned by the partnership at that time that is equal to its percentage share of the aggregate of amounts that would be paid to all members of the partnership if it were wound up at that time, and

(ii) for the purposes of clauses (2)(b)(i)(C) and (D) for a taxation year ending after that time, the lesser of

(A) its share of the part of the income of the partnership for the fiscal period of the partnership ending in the year that may reasonably be regarded as being attributable to the production from the property or to such processing as is described in subparagraph 1204(1)(b)(iii), (iv) or (v) with the property, and

(B) an amount that would be determined under clause (A) for the year if its share of the income of the partnership for the fiscal year of the partnership were determined on the basis of the percentage share referred to in subparagraph (i) shall be deemed to be income of the corporation for the year that may reasonably be attributable to production from the property or to such processing as is described in subparagraph 1204(1)(b)(iii), (iv) or (v) with the property.

(8) For the purposes of subsections (1) and (7), where a corporation acquired control of another corporation after November 12, 1981 and before 1983 by reason of the acquisition of shares of the other corporation pursuant to an agreement in writing concluded on or before November 12, 1981, the corporation shall be deemed to have acquired such control on or before November 12, 1981.

(9) Where, at any time,

(a) control of a taxpayer that is a corporation has been acquired by a person or group of persons,

(b) a taxpayer has disposed of all or substantially all of the taxpayer's Canadian resource properties, or

(c) a taxpayer has disposed of the specified property of the taxpayer, and, before that time, the taxpayer or a partnership of which the taxpayer was a member acquired a property and it may reasonably be considered that one of the main purposes of the acquisition was to avoid any limitation provided in subsection (2) on the deduction in respect of the earned depletion base of the taxpayer or of a corporation referred to as a transferee in paragraph (7)(g) or (h), the taxpayer or the partnership, as the case may be, shall be deemed, for the purposes of applying subsection (2) to or in respect of the taxpayer, not to have acquired the property.

(10) Where in a particular taxation year a predecessor owner of a property disposes of it to a corporation in circumstances in which subsection (2) applies, for the purposes of applying subsection (2) to the predecessor owner for a taxation year ending after February 17, 1987 in respect of its acquisition of the property, the predecessor owner shall be deemed, after the disposition, never to have acquired the property except for the purposes of making a deduction under subsection (2) for the particular year.

(11) Where at any time a property is acquired by a person in circumstances in which subsection (2) does not apply, every person who was an original owner or predecessor owner of the property by reason of having disposed of the property before that time shall, for the purposes of applying this Part to or in respect of the person or any other person who after that time acquires the property, be deemed after that time not to be an original owner or predecessor owner of the property by reason of having disposed of the property before that time.

History: Cl. 1202(2)(b)(i)(A) amended by P.C. 1994-1817, s. 48, November 1, 1994, Canada Gazette, Part II, November 30, 1994.

That portion of subpara. 1202(2)(b)(i) following cl. (D) substituted, and para. 1202(7)(f) revoked, by P.C. 1993-415, subsecs. 1(1) and (3) March 9, 1993, Canada Gazette, Part II, March 24, 1993, applicable to taxation years ending after February 17, 1987.

Para. 1202(4)(a) substituted by subsec. 1(2) of the said P.C. 1993-415, applicable with respect to dispositions occurring in taxation years commencing after March 23, 1993; and with respect to a disposition of a property made by a taxpayer in a taxation year commencing before March 24, 1993 and ending after February 17, 1987 where

(a) the taxpayer, and

(b) each corporation that, before the end of the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the date of publication, acquired the property or any other property that was disposed of by the taxpayer in a taxation year ending after February 17, 1987 as part of a transaction or an event as a consequence of which that corporation was or, but for that subsection, would be entitled to deduct an amount under subsec. 1202(2) in respect of an expenditure of the taxpayer,

Technical Notes: The expression "resource activity", defined in subsection 1206(1), is relevant for the purposes of subsections 1210(1.2) and 1210(2). Under those subsections, the general rule is that a taxpayer's deductions for a taxation year that relate to a "resource activity" must be deducted in computing the taxpayer's resource profits and adjusted resource profits.

The definition "resource activity" is amended so that "Canadian field processing" carried on by a taxpayer is now included as a "resource activity". This is strictly consequential on the introduction of subparagraph 1204(1)(b)(vi).

Proposed Addition — Reg. 1206(1)"specified royalty"

"specified royalty" means a royalty created after December 5, 1996 (otherwise than pursuant to an agreement in writing made before on or before that date) where

(a) the cost of the royalty was a Canadian development expense, and

(b) the royalty was created as part of a transaction or event or series of transactions or events as a consequence of which depreciable property was acquired at a capital cost that was less than its fair market value (determined without regard to the royalty);

Application: The December 5, 1996 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (Appendix A), subsec. 5(4), will add the definition "specified royalty" to subsec. 1206(1), applicable after March 6, 1996 except that, with respect to a royalty created after March 6, 1996 and before December 6, 1996 (or after March 6, 1996 and before 1998 pursuant to an agreement in writing made on or before December 5, 1996) where any of the parties to the royalty so elect in writing filed with the Minister of National Revenue before July 1998, the definition "specified royalty" shall be read as follows in respect of the royalty:

"specified royalty" means a royalty (other than a production royalty) created after March 6, 1996 (otherwise than pursuant to an agreement in writing made before March 7, 1996) where

(a) any amount paid or payable to the holder of the royalty because of the holder's interest in the royalty is calculated with reference to any expense, or

(b) an arrangement involving the reimbursement of, contribution to or allowance for, any expense has been made after March 6, 1996 and it is reasonable to consider that one of the reasons for the arrangement is to avoid the application of paragraph (a) in respect of the royalty;

Technical Notes: Subsection 1206(1) is being amended to introduce the expression "specified royalty". (This amendment replaces a proposed amendment released on March 6, 1996, that would have introduced the expression "specified net royalty".)

A "specified royalty" is defined as a royalty created after December 5, 1996 (otherwise than pursuant to an agreement in writing made before December 6, 1996) where

- the cost of the royalty was a Canadian development expense, and
- the royalty was created as part of a transaction or event or series of transactions or events as a consequence of which depreciable property was acquired at a capital cost that was less than its fair market value (determined without regard to the royalty).

Under proposed amendments to subsection 1210(2), payments made by a taxpayer under a "specified royalty" result in a reduction of the taxpayer's "adjusted resource profits" and, as a consequence, the taxpayer's resource allowance. However, only 50% of payments received by a taxpayer under a "specified royalty" are included in computing the taxpayer's adjusted resource profits.

The impetus for these proposed amendments is that the existing resource allowance rules have given rise to the opportunity to create certain royalties (especially net profit interests), which can be used to significantly increase the overall resource allowance that is available. By carving out a net profit interest from a working interest, the holder of the working interest can substantially decrease the amount paid for depreciable properties associated with the working interest. As a consequence, the amount of the resource profits that qualify for the resource allowance can be increased because of overall lower resulting amounts of capital cost allowance (which does reduce adjusted resource profits) and overall higher amounts of CDE (which generally does not reduce adjusted resource profits). Where the cost of a royalty is COGPE (rather than CDE) and is consequently not treated as a "specified royalty", there is not a concern in this context because the rate of write-off for COGPE (10%) tends to be significantly less than the rate of write-off with respect to depreciable properties in the oil and gas sector.

"tar sands ore" means ore extracted, other than through a well, from a mineral resource that is a deposit of bituminous sand, oil sand or oil shale;

History: "Tar sands ore" added by P.C. 1985-465, s. 7, February 14, 1985, Canada Gazette, Part II, March 6, 1985, applicable to taxation years commencing after November 12, 1981.

(a) is, or but for Class 41 in Schedule II would be, included in Class 10 in Schedule II by virtue of paragraph (j) of the description of that Class,

(2) For the purposes of this section, "adjusted resource profits" of a taxpayer for a taxation year is the amount, which may be positive or negative, determined by the formula

where

A is the amount that would be the taxpayer's resource profits for the year if the following assumptions were made:

(a) the amount determined under paragraph 1204(1)(a) were nil,

(b) subsection 1204(1) were read without reference to subparagraph 1204(1)(b)(iv) and the definition "resource activity" in subsection 1206(1) were read without reference to paragraph (d) of that definition,

(c) the following amounts were not deducted in computing the taxpayer's gross resource profits for the year and were not deducted in computing the taxpayer's resource profits for the year:

(i) each amount deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for the year in respect of a rental or royalty paid or payable by the taxpayer (other than an amount prescribed in section 1211 or an amount that is a production royalty) computed by reference to the amount or value of petroleum, natural gas or related hydrocarbons

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 1210(2)A(c)(i)

(i) each amount deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for the year in respect of a rental or royalty paid or payable by the taxpayer (other than an amount prescribed by section 1211, an amount that is a production royalty and an amount paid or payable in respect of a specified royalty) computed by reference to the amount or value of petroleum, natural gas or related hydrocarbons

Application: The December 5, 1996 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (Appendix A), subsec. 6(1), will amend the opening words of subpara. (c)(i) in the description of A in subsec. 1210(2) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after March 6, 1996.

Technical Notes: Subsection 1210(2) defines the expression "adjusted resource profits", on which the resource allowance is based under subsection 1210(1). Subsection 1210(2) is amended to provide for the treatment of "specified royalties" that is explained in the commentary on the new definition "specified royalty" in subsection 1206(1).

(A) produced from a natural accumulation (other than a resource) of petroleum or natural gas in Canada or an oil or gas well in Canada, or

(B) produced from a resource that is a bituminous sands deposit, oil sands deposit or oil shale deposit,

(ii) each amount deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for the year

(A) under any of paragraphs 20(1)(e), (e.1), (e.2) and (f) of the Act, or

(B) as, on account of or in lieu of, interest in respect of a debt owed by the taxpayer, and

(iii) each amount deducted under any of paragraph 20(1)(v.1) and sections 65 to 66.7 of the Act and subsections 17(2) and (6) and section 29 of the Income Tax Application Rules,

(e) subsections 1204(1) and (1.1) provided for the computation of negative amounts where the amounts subtracted in computing gross resource profits and resource profits exceed the amounts added in computing those amounts;

B is the total of all amounts each of which is the taxpayer's share of the adjusted resource profits of a partnership for the year, as determined under subsection (3) or (4); and

C is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount included in the taxpayer's gross resource profits for the year as a rental or royalty (other than a production royalty) computed by reference to the amount or value of petroleum, natural gas or related hydrocarbons produced from

(i) a natural accumulation (other than a resource) of petroleum or natural gas in Canada or an oil or gas well in Canada, or

(ii) a resource that is a bituminous sands deposit, oil sands deposit or oil shale deposit

exceeds

(b) where the year ends after March 6, 1996, the total of all outlays and expenses that were made or incurred in respect of the total described in paragraph (a) to the extent that the outlays and expenses were deducted in computing the taxpayer's gross resource profits for the year.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 1210(2)C

C is the amount, if any, by which the total of

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount included in the taxpayer's gross resource profits for the year as a rental or royalty (other than a production royalty or a specified royalty) computed by reference to the amount or value of petroleum, natural gas or related hydrocarbons produced from

Application: The December 5, 1996 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (Appendix A), subsec. 6(2), will amend the description of C in subsec. 1210(2) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after March 6, 1996.

Technical Notes: See under Reg. 1210(2)A(c)(i).

History: S. 1210 substituted by P.C. 1996-1488, s. 5, September 24, 1996, Canada Gazette, Part II, October 16, 1996; subsec. (2) applicable to taxation years that begin after December 20, 1991 except that, where the year began before March 19, 1993, subparagraph (c)(ii) of the description of A shall be read as follows:

(ii) each amount in respect of financing deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for the year,

(3) Where a taxpayer is a member of a partnership in a fiscal period of the partnership that ends in a taxation year of the taxpayer, the taxpayer's share of the partnership's adjusted resource profits for the year is

(a) nil, where the fiscal period began before December 21, 1991; and

(b) in any other case, the amount, which may be positive or negative, that could, if this subsection did not apply, reasonably be considered to represent the taxpayer's share of the partnership's adjusted resource profits for the fiscal period, determined on the assumption that each partnership is a taxpayer the fiscal period of which is a taxation year.

History: S. 1210 substituted by P.C. 1996-1488, s. 5, September 24, 1996, Canada Gazette, Part II, October 16, 1996; subsec. (3) applicable to taxation years that begin after December 20, 1991.

(4) Notwithstanding subsection (3), where a taxpayer is a member of an exempt partnership in a fiscal period of the partnership that begins before 2000 and ends in a taxation year of the taxpayer and the taxpayer's share of the partnership's adjusted resource profits for the year would, if this subsection did not apply, be a negative amount, the taxpayer's share of the partnership's adjusted resource profits for the year is the amount, which may be positive or negative, determined by the formula

where

A is the amount that would, if this subsection did not apply, be the taxpayer's share of the partnership's adjusted resource profits for the year; and

(a) nil, where

(i) the partnership is an exempt partnership in respect of the taxpayer at the end of the fiscal period, and

(ii) at the end of the fiscal period, all or substantially all of the assets of the partnership were held in connection with one or more working interests

(A) the production from which began in reasonable commercial quantities before December 21, 1991, or

(B) the production from which was to begin in reasonable commercial quantities after December 20, 1991 in accordance with an agreement in writing made before December 21, 1991, and

(b) in any other case, the lesser of one and the amount determined by the formula

$$\frac{C}{D}$$

where

C is the amount that would be the partnership's adjusted resource profits for the fiscal period if the partnership did not have any working interest described in subparagraph (a)(ii), and

D is the partnership's adjusted resource profits for the fiscal period.

History: S. 1210 substituted by P.C. 1996-1488, s. 5, September 24, 1996, Canada Gazette, Part II, October 16, 1996; subsec. (4) applicable to taxation years that begin after December 20, 1991.

Proposed Addition — Reg. 1210.1

1210.1 [Prescribed resource loss] — For the purpose of paragraph 12(1)(z.5) of the Act, a taxpayer's prescribed resource loss for a taxation year is the amount determined by the formula

$$A - B$$

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is a Canadian exploration and development overhead expense made or incurred by the taxpayer in the year, other than an amount included therein because of subsection 21(2) or (4) of the Act; and

B is the taxpayer's adjusted resource profits for the year (as defined by subsection 1210(2)).

Application: The December 5, 1996 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (Appendix A), s. 7, will add s. 1210.1, applicable to taxation years that begin after 1996.

Technical Notes: New section 1210.1 prescribes a taxpayer's resource loss for a taxation year for the purposes of paragraph 12(1)(z.5) of the Act. Under paragraph 12(1)(z.5) of the Act, 25% of the prescribed loss is added in computing a taxpayer's income for the year.

In conjunction with paragraph 12(1)(z.5) of the Act, the purpose of this provision is to provide symmetrical treatment for a taxpayer with respect to the taxpayer's "adjusted resource profits" and the taxpayer's losses from resource activities. Before taking into consideration adjustments for Canadian exploration and development overhead expenses (CEDOE) and earned depletion, 25% of a taxpayer's adjusted resource profits for a taxation year can be deducted as the taxpayer's resource allowance for the year. Symmetrical treatment requires that 25% of any "negative" amount of such adjusted resource profits be added in computing the taxpayer's income for the year.

More specifically, the prescribed resource loss of a taxpayer for a taxation year is determined as follows:

- ADD the CEDOE incurred by the taxpayer in the year, other than capitalized interest included because of subsection 21(2) or (4) of the Act, and
- SUBTRACT the adjusted resource profits of the taxpayer for the year.

A taxpayer's prescribed resource loss for a taxation year will only be a positive amount in the event that its adjusted resource profits are negative (as contemplated by subsection 1210(2)) or a positive amount that is less than its CEDOE for the year. Note that, in the event that the formula provided under new subsection 1210(2) would otherwise result in the calculation of a negative number, the amount determined under the formula is nil because of the operation of section 257 of the Act.

1211. Prescribed amounts — The following amounts are hereby prescribed for the purposes of paragraphs 12(1)(o) and 18(1)(m) of the Act:

(a) an amount paid to, an amount that became payable to, or an amount that became receivable by

(i) Her Majesty in right of Canada for the use and benefit of a band or bands as defined in the Indian Act, or

(ii) Petro-Canada;

(b) an amount paid to, an amount that became payable to, or an amount that became receivable by any of the persons referred to in any of subparagraphs 18(1)(m)(i) to (iii) of the Act

(ii) that was paid, became payable, or became receivable prior to the commencement of production of minerals from the property referred to in subparagraph (i) in reasonable commercial quantities, and

(c) an amount paid to, an amount that became payable to, or an amount that became receivable by any of the persons referred to in any of subparagraphs 18(1)(m)(i) to (iii) of the Act

(i) that may reasonably be regarded as being in respect of a rental for a right, licence or privilege to store underground petroleum, natural gas or other related hydrocarbons in Canada, and

(ii) that was paid, became payable, or became receivable, after December 11, 1979, in respect of a period commencing after that date;

(d) an amount equal to the lesser of

(i) an amount that

(A) became payable to or receivable by any of the persons referred to in any of subparagraphs 18(1)(m)(i) to (iii) of the Act as a rental for property described in subparagraph 66(15)(c)(i) [66(15)"Canadian resource property"(a)] of the Act or for a portion of such property, and

(B) became payable or receivable

(I) in a taxation year in which there was no taking of petroleum, natural gas or related hydrocarbons in relation to the property or portion thereof, as the case may be, to which the rental relates, if the amount became payable or receivable after 1984, or

(II) prior to the taking of petroleum, natural gas or related hydrocarbons in relation to the property or portion thereof, as the case may be, to which the rental relates, if the amount became payable or receivable after October 31, 1982 and before 1985, and

1212. Supplementary depletion allowances — (1) In computing a taxpayer's income for a taxation year there may be deducted

(a) where the taxpayer is a corporation, such amount as it may claim not exceeding the lesser of

(i) the aggregate of

(A) 50 per cent of its income for the year, computed in accordance with Part I of the Act without reference to paragraphs 59(3.3)(c) and (d) thereof, if no deduction were allowed under this subsection or subsection 1207(1), and

(B) the amount, if any, included in its income for the year by virtue of paragraphs 59(3.3)(c) and (d) of the Act, and

(ii) its supplementary depletion base as of the end of the year (before making any deduction under this subsection for the year); and

(b) where the taxpayer is not a corporation, such amount as he may claim not exceeding the lesser of

(i) the aggregate of

(A) 25 per cent of the amount, if any, by which his resource profits for the year exceed four times the amount, if any, deducted by virtue of subparagraph 1201(a)(i) in computing his income for the year, and

(B) the amount, if any, included in his income for the year by virtue of paragraphs 59(3.3)(c) and (d) of the Act, and

(ii) his supplementary depletion base as of the end of the year (before making any deduction under this subsection for the year).

History: Subparas. 1212(1)(a)(i), (b)(i) substituted by P.C. 1981-3329, subsecs. 11(1), (2), November 26, 1981, Canada Gazette, Part II, December 9, 1981.

(2) For the purpose of computing the supplementary depletion base of a corporation, where, after the corporation last ceased to carry on active business, control of the corporation is considered, for the purposes of subsection 66(11) of the Act, to have been acquired by a person or persons who did not control the corporation at the time when it so ceased to carry on active business, the amount by which the supplementary depletion base of the corporation at the time it last ceased to carry on active business exceeds the aggregate of amounts otherwise deducted under subsection (1) in computing its income for taxation years ending after that time and before control was so acquired, shall be deemed to have been deducted under subsection (1) by the corporation in computing its income for taxation years ending before control was so acquired.

(3) For the purposes of this section, "supplementary depletion base" of a taxpayer as of a particular time means the amount by which the aggregate of

(a) 50 per cent of the aggregate of all expenditures each of which was incurred by him before the particular time and each of which was the capital cost to him of property that is enhanced recovery equipment,

(c) where the taxpayer is a successor corporation, any amount required by paragraph (4)(a) to be added before the particular time in computing the taxpayer's supplementary depletion base,

(i) the proceeds of disposition of the property, and

(ii) the capital cost of the property to the taxpayer or the predecessor, as the case may be, computed as if no amount had been included therein that is a cost of borrowing capital, including a cost incurred prior to the commencement of carrying on a business;

(h) 33⅓ per cent of the aggregate of all amounts, each of which is an amount in respect of a disposition of property (other than a disposition of property, that had been used by the taxpayer, to any person with whom the taxpayer was not dealing at arm's length) of the taxpayer before the earlier of December 12, 1979 and the particular time, the capital cost of which was added in computing the taxpayer's supplementary depletion base by virtue of paragraph (b) or in computing the supplementary depletion base of a predecessor by virtue of paragraph (b) as it applied to the predecessor where the taxpayer is a successor corporation to the predecessor, as the case may be, and each of which is the amount that is equal to the lesser of

(i) the proceeds of disposition of the property, and

(a) for the purpose of making a service connection to the project for the transmission of electricity to a purchaser of the electricity, to the extent that the expense so incurred was not incurred to acquire property of the taxpayer;

(b) for the construction of a temporary access road to the project site;

(c) for a right of access to the project site in respect of the period ending at the earliest time at which a property described in Class 43.1 of

Schedule II is used in the project for the purpose of earning income;

(e) for process engineering for the project, including

(i) collection and analysis of site data,

(ii) calculation of energy, mass, water, or air balances,

(iv) selection of the optimum process design;

(f) for the drilling or completion of a well for the project; or

(g) for the acquisition and installation of the taxpayer's test wind turbine for the project.

(2) A Canadian renewable and conservation expense does not include any expense incurred by a taxpayer that is directly or indirectly

(a) for the acquisition of, or the use of or the right to use, land, except as provided by paragraph (1)(b), (c) or (d);

(b) for grading or levelling land or for landscaping, except as provided by paragraph (1)(b);

(c) payable to a non-resident person or a partnership other than a Canadian partnership (other than an expense described in paragraph (1)(g));

(g) an expenditure on or in respect of scientific research and experimental development;

(h) a Canadian development expense or a Canadian oil and gas property expense;

(k) described in paragraphs 20(1)(c), (d), (e) or (e.1) of the Act; or

(l) a cost attributable to the period of the construction, renovation or alteration of depreciable property, other than property described in Class 43.1 of Schedule II, that relates to

(i) the construction, renovation or alteration of the property (except as provided by paragraph (1)(b), (f), or (g)), or

(ii) the ownership of land during the period (except as provided by paragraph (1)(b), (c) or (d)).

(a) the device will be the first such device installed at the taxpayer's site for a proposed wind energy generation facility, and

(b) the primary purpose of the device is to test the level of energy production at the site.

Related Provisions: Reg. 1102(1)(a.1) — CRCE ineligible for capital cost allowance.

Application: The September 16, 1997 draft regulations, s. 3, will add s. 1219, applicable to expenses incurred after December 5, 1996.

Technical Notes: [The following Technical Notes were released with the December 5, 1996 draft legislation.]

Proposed amendments to subsection 66.1(6) of the Act define "Canadian renewable and conservation expense" (CRCE) as having the meaning assigned by regulation. For this purpose, the Technical Guide on this topic published by the Department of Natural Resources is to apply conclusively with respect to engineering and scientific matters in the determination of whether an expense meets the criteria set out in the Regulations.

New section 1219 assigns the meaning of the term "Canadian renewable and conservation expense" for the purpose of the definition of that term in subsection 66.1(6) of the Act.

Subsection 1219(1) states, generally, that CRCE means an expense incurred in respect of the development of projects for which it is expected that at least half the depreciable property to be used in the project will be described in Class 43.1 of Schedule II to the Regulations. The determination of the proportion of depreciable property that is described in Class 43.1 is to be made by reference to capital cost.

Subsection 1219(1) goes on to list six types of expenditure which are specifically included in CRCE and which, because of the exclusions listed in subsection 1219(2), might otherwise have been ineligible for treatment as CRCE.

Subsection 1219(2) lists expenses which are specifically excluded from the CRCE definition.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, February 18, 1997: Canadian renewable and conservation expenses (CRCEs)

Regulations detailing the expenses that are eligible for inclusion in the CRCE category were released on December 5, 1996. This budget proposes one additional modification to the definition of a CRCE.

Canadian renewable and conservation expense (CRCE) category

Canadian renewable and conservation expenses include certain intangible development costs associated with projects primarily using equipment eligible for Class 43.1.

The CRCE category is similar in concept to the definition of expenses used in the non-renewable energy sector. These expenses generally include all intangible expenses incurred to determine the existence, location, extent or quality of certain non-renewable resources such as crude oil and natural gas.

CRCE was introduced to encourage investment in the pre-production development phases of energy conservation and renewable energy projects. CRCE deductions can be accumulated from December 5, 1996, when the legislation implementing the 1996 budget changes was tabled in Parliament.

Expenditures eligible for CRCE treatment are fully deductible and can be carried forward indefinitely. These expenditures can also be renounced to shareholders who have entered into a flow-through share agreement. The CRCE definition also provides taxpayers investing in renewable energy and energy conservation projects with more rapid deductions for certain other types of expenses which would normally be treated as capital in nature.

Test wind turbines

Following upon recent consultations with industry associations, this budget proposes to modify the CRCE definition released on December 5, 1996 to include the costs of acquiring and installing test wind turbines. Favourable prior opinions must be issued by the Minister of Natural Resources for each test wind turbine installation.

Proposed Amendment — Insurers' earthquake reserves

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, February 24, 1998: [See under ITA 20(7) — ed.]

Proposed Amendment — Part XIV

Department of Finance press release, October 7, 1996: Draft Legislation on Insurers' Policy Reserves

Finance Minister Paul Martin today released draft amendments to the Income Tax Act and the Income Tax Regulations dealing with insurers' policy reserves.

The draft amendments are the result of extensive consultations on the reform of the taxation of life insurers. The amendments respond to a number of issues raised during consultations on the draft legislation released to the industry in April this year.

The amendments are primarily concerned with the tax treatment of life insurance policy reserves. In broad terms, the draft legislation provides that an insurer's policy reserves in respect of its policies issued after 1995 will now generally be calculated in the manner in which they are calculated for regulatory purposes. For policies issued before 1996, the insurer will generally continue to calculate policy reserves using the existing rules in Part XIV of the Income Tax Regulations.

It should be noted that the draft amendments also deal with non-life insurance policy reserves and other insurance taxation matters. A detailed description of the amendments is contained in the explanatory notes which are being released with the draft amendments.

The Minister indicated that the draft amendments to the Income Tax Act would be included in the bill containing this year's budget measures, which is expected to be tabled in the fall.

For further information: Brian Bloom, Tax Legislation Division, (613) 992-5634

Technical Notes: Part XIV of the Regulations provides rules for determining the amount that may be deducted by an insurer in computing its income for a taxation year under Part I as a reserve in respect of liabilities under insurance policies. Part XIV is modified by the creation of four separate divisions. Division I of Part XIV will provide for the determination of the policy reserves for insurance policies other than life insurance policies. Division II will provide for the determination of the policy reserves for life insurance policies that are "pre-1996 life insurance policies". Division III will provide for the determination of the policy reserves for life insurance policies that are post-1995 life insurance policies. Division IV will provide definitions and rules of interpretation for the purposes of Divisions I to III.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, March 6, 1996: Taxation of life insurance companies

A number of changes to the taxation of life insurance companies will take effect in the 1996 taxation year. These changes are the result of extensive consultations with the industry. The objective is to improve the income tax rules so that the dependence on capital taxes will eventually be reduced and more revenues will be raised through income taxes.

The changes will affect both the calculation of life insurers' reserves and the calculation of the Canadian component of the income of multinational insurers. Specifically:

- Most reserves on life insurance policies issued after 1995 will be equal to the reserves reported in financial statements. Pre-1996 policies will be fully grandfathered.
- The method of measuring Canadian income will be improved by using a full balance sheet approach.
- To ensure that tax revenues are not reduced in the short-term, the additional capital tax currently levied on life insurance companies will be extended for a further three years.

The changes are intended to be revenue neutral. Over time, life insurance companies will pay more income taxes and less capital taxes. Draft legislation and regulations giving effect to the changes will be released later this year.

1400. Non-life insurance businesses — For the purposes of paragraph 20(7)(c) of the Act, an insurance corporation in computing its income for a taxation year may deduct, in accordance with the following rules, in respect of

1400. Non-life insurance business — (1) For the purpose of paragraph 20(7)(c) of the Act, the amount prescribed in respect of an insurer for a taxation year is

(a) the amount determined under subsection (3) in respect of the insurer for the year, where that amount is greater than nil, and

(b) nil, in any other case.

Technical Notes: Section 1400 establishes the amount an insurer may deduct under paragraph 20(7)(c) as policy reserves in respect of insurance policies other than life insurance policies. Section 1400 is replaced by four new subsections.

New subsection 1400(1) provides that, for the purposes of paragraph 20(7)(c) of the Act, the amount prescribed in respect of an insurer's other than life businesses is the amount determined under subsection 1400(3), where that amount is a positive number. Where, however, that amount is equal to or less than nil, the prescribed amount is nil.

(2) For the purpose of paragraph 12(1)(e.1) of the Act, the amount prescribed in respect of an insurer for a taxation year is

(a) the absolute value of the amount determined under subsection (3) in respect of the insurer for the year, where that amount is less than nil, and

(b) nil, in any other case.

Technical Notes: New subsection 1400(2) provides that, for the purposes of new paragraph 12(1)(e.1) of the Act, the amount prescribed in respect of an insurer's other than life businesses is the absolute value of the amount determined under subsection 1400(3), where that amount is less than nil. Where, however, the amount determined under subsection 1400(3) is equal to or greater than nil, the prescribed amount is nil.

Therefore, where the amount determined under subsection 1400(3) is positive, that is the amount prescribed for the purposes of paragraph 20(7)(c) of the Act. According to paragraph 20(7)(c), an amount not exceeding such prescribed amount may be deducted as a policy reserve in respect of an insurer's other than life businesses. Where, however, the amount determined under subsection 1400(3) is negative, then the absolute value of that amount is the amount prescribed for the purpose of paragraph 12(1)(e.1) of the Act. This "negative policy reserve" must be included in computing the insurer's income from its other than life businesses pursuant to new paragraph 12(1)(e.1), and may be deducted in the following taxation year pursuant to new subsection 20(22) of the Act.

(3) For the purposes of paragraphs (1)(a) and (2)(a), the amount determined under this subsection in respect of an insurer for a taxation year is the amount, which may be positive or negative, determined by the formula

$$A + B + C + D + E + F + G + H + I + J + K$$

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the unearned portion at the end of the year of the net premium for a policy, (other than a policy that insures a risk in respect of

(a) a financial loss of a lender on a loan made on the security of real property,

(b) a home warranty,

(c) a lease guarantee, or

(d) an extended motor vehicle warranty), determined by apportioning the net premium equally over the period to which that premium relates;

B is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount determined in respect of a policy referred to in paragraph (a), (b), (c) or (d) of the description of A equal to the lesser of

(a) the amount of the reported reserve of the insurer at the end of the year in respect of the unearned portion at the end of the year of the net premium for the policy, and

(b) a reasonable amount as a reserve determined as at the end of the year in respect of the unearned portion at the end of the year of the net premium for the policy;

C is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount in respect of a policy, where all or a portion of a risk under the policy was reinsured, equal to the unearned portion at the end of the year of a reinsurance commission in respect of the policy determined by apportioning the reinsurance commission equally over the period to which it relates;

D is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount determined by the formula

$$V \times W$$

in respect of a policy under which a claim was reported to the insurer before the end of the year and in respect of which the insurer is, or may be, required to make a payment or incur an expense after the year, where

V is

(a) where the claim is in respect of damages for personal injury or death and the insurer has agreed to a structured settlement of the claim, 100 per cent, and

(b) in any other case, 95 per cent, and

W is the lesser of

(a) the amount of the reported reserve of the insurer at the end of the year in respect of the claim, and

(b) the amount of the claim liability of the insurer at the end of the year in respect of the claim;

E is the amount, in respect of policies under which there may be claims incurred before the end of the year that have not been reported to the insurer before the end of the year, equal to 95% of the lesser of

(a) the total of the reported reserves of the insurer at the end of the year in respect of the possibility that there are such claims, and

(b) the total of the claim liabilities of the insurer at the end of the year in respect of the possibility that there are such claims;

F is an additional amount in respect of policies that insure

(a) a fidelity risk,

(b) a surety risk,

(c) a nuclear risk, or

(d) a risk related to a financial loss of a lender on a loan made on the security of real property, equal to the lesser of

(e) the total of the reported reserves of the insurer at the end of the year in respect of such risks (other than an amount included in determining the value of A, B, C, D, E, G, H, I, J or K), and

(f) a reasonable amount as a reserve determined as at the end of the year in respect of such risks (other than an amount included in determining the value of A, B, C, D, E, G, H, I, J or K);

G is the amount of a guarantee fund at the end of the year provided for under an agreement in writing between the insurer and Her Majesty in right of Canada under which Her Majesty has agreed to guarantee the obligations of the insurer under a policy that insures a risk related to a financial loss of a lender on a loan made on the security of real property;

H is the amount in respect of risks under pre-1996 non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policies equal to

(a) where the amounts determined under subparagraphs (i) and (ii) are greater than nil, the lesser of

(i) the total of the reported reserves of the insurer at the end of the year in respect of such risks (other than an amount included in determining the value of A, B, C, D, E, F, G, I, J or K), and

(ii) a reasonable amount as a reserve determined as at the end of the year in respect of such risks (other than an amount included in determining the value of A, B, C, D, E, F, G, I, J or K); and

(b) nil, in any other case;

I is, subject to subsection (5), the amount in respect of risks under non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policies that are not pre-1996 non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policies, equal to the lesser of

(a) the total of the reported reserves of the insurer at the end of the year in respect of such risks (other than an amount included in determining the value of A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, J or K), and

(b) the total of the policy liabilities of the insurer at the end of the year in respect of such risks (other than an amount included in determining the value of A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, J or K);

J is the total of all amounts (other than an amount deductible under subsection 140(1) of the Act) each of which is the amount that is the least of

in respect of a dividend, refund of premiums or refund of premium deposits provided for under the terms of a group accident and sickness insurance policy that will be

(a) used by the insurer to reduce or eliminate a future adverse claims experience under the policy,

(b) paid or unconditionally credited to the policyholder by the insurer, or

(c) applied in discharge, in whole or in part, of a liability of the policyholder to pay premiums to the insurer under the policy,

where

P is a reasonable amount as a reserve determined as at the end of the year in respect of the dividend, refund of premiums or refund of premium deposits,

Q is 25 per cent of the amount of the premium payable under the terms of the policy for the 12-month period ending

(i) if the policy is terminated in the year, on the day the policy is terminated, and

(ii) in any other case, at the end of the year, and

R is the reported reserve of the insurer at the end of the year in respect of the dividend, refund of premiums or refund of premium deposits;

K is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, in respect of a policy under which a portion of the amount paid or payable by the policyholder for the policy before the end of the year is deducted under paragraph 1408(4)(b), equal to the portion of that amount that the insurer has determined will, after the end of the year, be returned to, or credited to the account of, the policyholder on the termination of the policy.

Technical Notes: New subsection 1400(3) sets out a formula for determining the amount prescribed for the purposes of subsections 1400(1) and (2) of the Regulations. The total amount determined under this formula in subsection 1400(3), as well as the individual amounts determined under each of the components of the formula, may be equal to, greater or less than, nil (see new section 1402.1 of the Regulations).

The description of A in new subsection 1400(3) replaces existing paragraph 1400(a) of the Regulations. In general terms, "A" is equal to the total unearned premiums at the end of the taxation year in respect of insurance policies other than those listed in paragraphs (a), (b), (c) and (d) of the description of A.

The description of B in new subsection 1400(3) replaces existing paragraph 1400(b) of the Regulations. Paragraph 1400(b) provides a reserve for unearned premiums in respect of policies excluded from the application of paragraph 1400(a). Similarly, the description of B provides a reserve for unearned premiums in respect of policies excluded from the description of A, namely, policies that insure a risk in respect of mortgages, home warranties, lease guarantees and extended motor vehicle warranties. "B" is, in general terms, equal to the lesser of the insurer's reported reserve in respect of the unearned portion at the end of the year of the net premium for the policy and a reasonable amount in respect of such unearned premiums.

A "reported reserve" of an insurer at the end of a taxation year in respect of an insurance policy or a claim, possible claim or risk under an insurance policy is defined in new subsection 1408(1). Where the insurer is subject to the supervision of the "relevant authority" throughout a taxation year, it is defined as the positive or negative amount of the reserve that would have been reported in the insurer's annual report for the year to the "relevant authority" in respect of that policy, claim, possible claim or risk if the reserve has been determined without reference to projected income and capital taxes of the insurer (other than the tax payable under Part XII.3 of the Act). Where the insurer is subject to the supervision of the relevant authority throughout its taxation year but is not required to file a report for a period ending coincidentally with the year, or the insurer is the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation (CMHC) or a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada, it is the amount of the reserve that would have been reported in the insurer's financial statements if they had been prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles (GAAP) and without reference to income and capital taxes (other than the tax payable under Part XII.3 of the Act). In any other case, the reported reserve is nil.

The description of C in new subsection 1400(3) replaces existing paragraphs 1400(c) and (d) of the Regulations. Paragraph 1400(c) provides a reserve for the unearned portion of reinsurance commissions in respect of policies where all or a portion of the risk under the policies has been reinsured. Similarly, paragraph 1400(d) provides a reserve for the unearned portion of reinsurance commissions in respect of policies where all or a portion of the risk under the policies was assumed by the insurer and all or a portion of the risk assumed was subsequently reinsured. No substantive changes have been made to these reserves.

The description of D in new subsection 1400(3) replaces existing paragraph 1400(e) of the Regulations. Paragraph 1400(e) provides for a reserve in respect of an insurer's unpaid claims. In general terms, the reserve is equal to 95% of the lesser of the insurer's reported reserve for unpaid claims and the insurer's actuarial liability in respect of such claims. The description of E modifies this reserve by making it 95% of the lesser of the insurer's reported reserve and the insurer's claim liability in respect of such claims. Where the insurer has agreed to a structured settlement of a claim that is in respect of personal injury or death, the reserve remains at 100% of the claim.

A "reported reserve" of an insurer at the end of a taxation year in respect of an insurance policy or a claim, possible claim or risk under an insurance policy is defined in new subsection 1408(1). Where the insurer is subject to the supervision of the "relevant authority" throughout a taxation year, it is defined as the positive or negative amount of the reserve that would have been reported in the insurer's annual report for the year to the relevant authority in respect of that policy, claim, possible claim or risk if the reserve had been determined without reference to projected income and capital taxes of the insurer (other than the tax payable under Part XII.3 of the Act). Where the insurer is subject to the supervision of the relevant authority throughout its taxation year but is not required to file a report for a period ending coincidentally with the year, or the insurer is the CMHC or a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada, it is the amount of the reserve that would have been reported in the insurer's financial statements if they had been prepared in accordance with GAAP and without reference to income and capital taxes (other than the tax payable under Part XII.3 of the Act). In any other case, the reported reserve is nil.

New subsection 1408(1) defines the "claim liability" (which term has been substituted for the term "actuarial liability") of an insurer at the end of a taxation year in respect of an unpaid claim as a reasonable estimate, determined in accordance with accepted actuarial practice, of the present value of future payments and claims adjustment expenses in respect of the claim, over the present value of amounts to be recovered in respect of the claim because of salvage, subrogation or any other reason.

The description of E in new subsection 1400(3) replaces existing paragraph 1400(e.1) of the Regulations. Paragraph 1400(e.1) provides a reserve in respect of the possibility that claims have been incurred under a policy before the end of a taxation year but not reported to the insurer. In general terms, the reserve is 95% of the lesser of the insurer's actuarial liability for incurred but not reported (IBNR) claims and its reported reserve for IBNR claims. The description of E modifies this reserve by making it 95% of the lesser of the insurer's reported reserve and the insurer's claim liability in respect of the possibility that there are such claims. The terms "reported reserve" and "claim liability" are defined in new subsection 1408(1) and described in the commentary therefor.

The description of F in new subsection 1400(3) replaces existing paragraph 1400(f) of the Regulations. Paragraph 1400(f) provides a supplementary reserve for policies insuring a risk listed in that paragraph, such as a fidelity risk. Under the description of F, the new reserve in respect of such policies becomes the lesser of the insurer's reported reserve and a reasonable amount in respect of that reserve. The term "reported reserve" is defined in new subsection 1408(1) and described in the commentary therefor.

The description of G in new subsection 1400(3) replaces existing paragraph 1400(f.1) of the Regulations. This reserve is currently under review by the Department.

The description of H in new subsection 1400(3) replaces existing paragraph 1400(g) of the Regulations. Paragraph 1400(g) provides for a reserve in respect of a risk under non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policies. The reserve under the description of H may only be claimed in respect of non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policies that are "pre-1996 non-cancellable or guaranteed accident and sickness policies". Otherwise, the reserve is essentially unchanged. Non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policies that are "post-1995 non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policies" are governed by the description of I.

A "pre-1996 non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy" is defined by new subsection 1408(1) to mean a non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy that was issued before 1996 and in respect of which there has been no change to the amount or number of premium payments or the amount of benefits under the policy after 1995 except in accordance with the provisions of the policy as they existed on December 31, 1995. However, if such a change occurred pursuant to a "general amending provision" of the policy, it will lose its status as a pre-1996 policy. The term "general amending provision" is defined in new subsection 1408(1) as a provision of a policy that allows it to be amended with the consent of the policyholder.

The description of I provides a reserve in respect of risks under non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policies that are post-1995 non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policies, that is, non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policies that are not pre-1996 non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policies. The reserve is the lesser of the reported reserve and the policy liability of the insurer in respect of such risks. The terms "reported reserve" and "policy liability" are defined in new subsection 1408(1) and described in the commentary therefor.

The description of J in new subsection 1400(3) replaces existing paragraph 1400(g.1) of the Regulations. In general terms, paragraph 1400(g.1) provides a reserve for future adverse claims experience under group accident and sickness insurance policies. This reserve is essentially unchanged.

Existing paragraph 1400(h) is repealed. Paragraph 1400(h) is a transitional provision applicable in respect of the 1977 to 1986 taxation years of an insurer. It effectively provides an insurer with a ten-year period in which to include in income the amount of any contingency reserve claimed by the insurer for its 1977 taxation year, which was the last year in respect of which such a reserve could be claimed.

The description of K in new subsection 1400(3) replaces existing paragraph 1400(i) of the Regulations. Paragraph 1400(i) provides a reserve, in lieu of the reserve under paragraph 1400(a) for unearned premiums, in respect of amounts deposited under a policy that will be returned to the policyholder upon termination of the policy. This reserve is essentially unchanged.

(4) Where the relevant authority does not require an insurer to determine its liabilities in respect of claims referred to in the description of D or E in subsection (3) in accordance with actuarial principles,

(a) the value of W in subsection (3) is deemed to be the amount determined under paragraph

(a) of the description of W in that subsection, and

(b) the value of E in subsection (3) is deemed to be the amount determined under paragraph (a) of the description of E in that subsection.

Technical Notes: New subsection 1400(4) provides a special rule where the relevant authority does not require an insurer to determine its reserves in respect of unpaid claims in accordance with actuarial principles. The unpaid claim reserves under the descriptions of D or E of subsection 1400(3), in such cases, will simply be the reported reserve under those descriptions. This rule is intended to relieve small property and casualty insurers from having to seek an "outside" opinion as to the reasonableness of their reserves for unpaid claims.

Application: The October 7, 1996 draft regulations (insurers' policy reserves), s. 1, will amend s. 1400 and the heading of Division I to read as above, applicable to 1996 et seq.

Application: The October 7, 1996 draft regulations (insurers' policy reserves), subsec. 2(2), will amend the heading of Division II and the opening words of subsec. 1401(1) to read as above, applicable to 1996 et seq.

Technical Notes: Amended subsection 1401(1) establishes the amount which an insurer is permitted to deduct as a policy reserve under subparagraph 138(3)(a)(i) in respect of its life insurance policies. New subsection 1401(1.1) is added in order to restrict the application of subsection 1401(1) to life insurance policies in Canada that are "pre-1996 life insurance policies". Life insurance policies in Canada that are "post-1995 life insurance policies" will be subject to the new policy reserve rules in Division III of Part XIV of the Regulations.

Subsection 1408(1) defines "pre-1996 life insurance policy" to mean a life insurance policy that was issued before 1996 and in respect of which there has been no change to the amount or number of premiums payments or the amount of benefits under the policy after 1995 except in accordance with the provisions of the policy as they existed on December 31, 1995. However, if such a change occurs pursuant to a "general amending provision" of the policy, it will lose its status as a pre-1996 policy. The term "general amending provision" is defined in new subsection 1408(1) as a provision of a policy that allows it to be amended with the consent of the policyholder. New subsection 1408(7) provides that, for the purpose of the definition "pre-1996 life insurance policy" in subsection 1408(1), changes in the amount of any benefit or in the amount or number of any premiums payable under a life insurance policy are deemed not to have occurred where they have resulted from:

- a change in underwriting class,
- a change in frequency of premium payments within a year that does not alter the present value, at the beginning of the year, of the total premiums to be paid under the policy in the year,
- the deletion of a rider,
- the correction of erroneous information,
- the reinstatement of the policy after its lapse, provided the policy is reinstated not later than 60 days after end of the calendar year in which the lapse occurred,
- the redating of the policy for policy loan indebtedness, and
- an increase in a benefit under the policy granted by the insurer on a class basis without consideration and not pursuant to any term of the policy.

To summarize, an existing life insurance policy will not lose its status as a pre-1996 life insurance policy, and, therefore, will continue to be governed by section 1401 of the Regulations, where the change in its benefits or premiums results from a transaction or event that is either pre-determined or set out in new subsection 1408(7). However, where such a change is the result of any other transaction or event, the policy will no longer be a pre-1996 life insurance policy, and, accordingly, will be subject to the new policy reserve rules in respect of post-1995 life insurance policies set out in Division III of Part XIV of the Regulations.

(a) deposit administration fund policies, such amount as the insurer may claim that is a reasonable amount in respect of the aggregate of the insurer's liabilities under the policies as at the end of the year and does not exceed the aggregate of the insurer's liabilities under those policies calculated in the manner required for the purposes of the insurer's annual report to the relevant authority for the year or, where the insurer was throughout the year subject to the supervision of the relevant authority but was not required to file an annual report with the relevant authority for the year, in its financial statements for the year;

(b) a group term life insurance policy that provides coverage for a period not exceeding 12 months, such amount as the insurer may claim not exceeding the unearned portion of the net premium for the policy at the end of the year determined by apportioning the net premium equally over the period to which that premium pertains;

(i) a reasonable amount in respect of such a dividend, refund of premiums or refund of premium deposits,

(ii) 25 per cent of the amount of the premium payable under the terms of the policy for the 12-month period ending

(A) if the policy is terminated in the year, on the day the policy is terminated, and

(i) an accidental death benefit,

(ii) a disability benefit,

(iii) an additional risk as a result of insuring a substandard life,

(iv) an additional risk in respect of the conversion of a term policy or the conversion of the benefits under a group policy into another policy after the end of the year,

(v) an additional risk under a settlement option,

(vi) an additional risk under a guaranteed insurability benefit,

(vii) a guarantee in respect of a segregated fund policy, or

(ii) 95 per cent of the amount of the reserve in respect of the claim reported by the insurer in its annual report to the relevant authority for the year or, where the insurer was throughout the year subject to the supervision of the relevant authority for the year but was not required to file an annual report with the relevant authority for the year, in its financial statements for the year;

(ii) 95 per cent of the amount of the reserve in respect of the claim reported by the insurer in its annual report to the relevant authority for the year or, where the insurer was throughout the year subject to the supervision of the relevant authority but was not required to file an annual report with the relevant authority for the year, in its financial statements for the year; and

(e) a qualified annuity, such amount as the insurer may claim not exceeding the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount that would have been determined pursuant to paragraph (c) for the year if the rate of interest used (or deemed by section 1403 to have been used) by the insurer in determining the premium for the annuity were reduced by one-half of one percentage point,

exceeds

(ii) the maximum amount that may be claimed by the insurer in respect of the annuity under paragraph (c).

Proposed Addition — Reg. 1401(1.1)

(1.1) An amount may be deducted because of subsection (1) only in respect of a life insurance policy in Canada that is a pre-1996 life insurance policy.

Application: The October 7, 1996 draft regulations (insurers' policy reserves), subsec. 2(4), will add subsec. 1401(1.1), applicable to 1996 et seq.

Technical Notes: See under Reg. 1401(1).

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1), (except in respect of subparagraph (d)(vii) thereof), any amount claimed by an insurer for the year shall not include an amount in respect of a liability of a segregated fund (within the meaning assigned "segregated fund" by section 138.1 of the Act).

(3) In computing the amount that a life insurer may deduct under subparagraph 138(3)(a)(i) of the Act in computing its taxable income for a taxation year, there shall be deducted from the aggregate of the amounts determined under subsection (1), the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the lesser of the following amounts determined in respect of a life insurance policy referred to in paragraph (1)(c):

(a) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount that would be determined under subclause (1)(c)(i)(B) in respect of the policy

exceeds

(ii) the amount that would be determined under subclause (1)(c)(i)(A) in respect of the policy, and

(b) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the aggregate of the amounts that would be determined under subclauses (1)(c)(ii)(B) and (C) in respect of the policy

exceeds

(ii) the amount that would be determined under subclause (1)(c)(ii)(A) in respect of the policy.

(4) For the purposes of subparagraph 138(3)(a)(ii) of the Act, a life insurer may, in computing its income for a taxation year, deduct an amount as a reserve in respect of unpaid claims under life insurance policies in Canada at the end of the year received by the insurer before the end of the year equal to the present value at the end of the year, computed using a rate of interest that is reasonable in the circumstances, of a reasonable amount in respect of such claims.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 1401(4)

(4) For the purpose of subparagraph 138(3)(a)(ii) of the Act, there may be deducted, in computing a life insurer's income for a taxation year, the amount it claims as a reserve in respect of unpaid claims received by it before the end of the year under life insurance policies in Canada that are pre-1996 life insurance policies, not exceeding the present value at the end of the year, computed using a rate of interest that is reasonable in the circumstances, of a reasonable amount in respect of those unpaid claims.

Application: The October 7, 1996 draft regulations (insurers' policy reserves), subsec. 2(5), will amend subsec. 1401(4) to read as above, applicable to 1996 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 1401(4) sets out the basis for determining the amount an insurer is permitted to deduct pursuant to subparagraph 138(3)(a)(ii) as a reserve in respect of its reported unpaid claims under its life insurance policies in Canada. Subsection 1401(4) is amended in order to limit its application to life insurance policies that are "pre-1996 life insurance policies". Policies that are not pre-1996 life insurance policies, that is, "post-1995 life insurance policies", will be subject to the rules regarding unpaid claims reserves in new Division III of Part XIV of the Regulations. The terms "post-1995 life insurance policy" and "pre-1996 life insurance policy" are defined in subsection 1408(1) of the Regulations.

(2) For the purposes of sections 1400 and 1401, where an insurer is a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada and the amounts to be determined under those sections are in respect of a business that is

(a) an investment business of the affiliate, as defined in subsection 95(1) of the Act, or

(b) a separate business, other than an active business, of the affiliate that the affiliate is deemed, under paragraph 95(2)(a.2) or (b) of the Act, to carry on, the amounts determined under those sections in respect of the business shall not exceed an amount that is reasonable having regard to all the circumstances and shall be determined as if the business were carried on in Canada and the affiliate were subject to the supervision of the Superintendent of Financial Institutions.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 1402

Special Rules

1402. Non-life and life insurance businesses — Any amount determined under section 1400 or 1401 shall be determined on a net of reinsurance ceded basis.

Application: The October 7, 1996 draft regulations (insurers' policy reserves), s. 3, will amend s. 1402 to read as above, applicable to 1996 et seq.

Technical Notes: Clause 3 simply changes the heading before section 1402 of the Regulations.

Existing subsection 1402(1) ensures that the reserves claimed under sections 1400 and 1401 are net of any reinsurance ceded by the insurer. Subsection 1402(2) is intended to provide an insurer that is a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada with the authority to claim reserves of a reasonable amount in respect of its insurance business that is deemed to be carried on in Canada under the Foreign Accrual Property Income (FAPI) rules in subdivision i of the Act. Where an insurer that is a foreign affiliate carries on a business that is subject to the FAPI rules, it must compute the income from that business in accordance with the rules of the Act (see paragraph 95(2)(k)), including the rules respecting policy reserves in paragraph 20(7)(c) and section 138 and the regulations made thereunder. Because of the existence of paragraph 95(2)(k) and the definition of reported reserve in new subsection 1408(1), subsection 1402(2) is considered to be unnecessary and is therefore repealed.

History: S. 1402 amended by P.C. 1997-1670, s. 1, November 20, 1997, Canada Gazette, Part II, December 10, 1997, applicable to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that begin after 1994, except that

(a) the subsecs. apply to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that end after 1994 where there has been a change in the taxation year of the foreign affiliate in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, unless

(i) the foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation, or

(ii) the first taxation year of the foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time when that taxation year would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation year of the foreign affiliate.

Proposed Addition — Reg. 1402.1

1402.1 For greater certainty, any amount referred to or determined under section 1400 may be equal to, or less than, nil.

Application: The October 7, 1996 draft regulations (insurers' policy reserves), s. 4, will add s. 1402.1, applicable to 1996 et seq.

Technical Notes: New section 1402.1 provides, for greater certainty, that amounts referred to or determined under section 1400 may be negative.

1403. (1) For the purposes of paragraph 1401(1)(c) and subject to subsections (2) and (3), a modified net premium and an amount claimed by an insurer for a taxation year shall be computed

(a) in the case of a lapse-supported policy effected after 1990, based on rates of interest, mortality and policy lapse only, and

(b) in any other case, based on rates of interest and mortality only,

using

(c) in respect of the modified net premiums and benefits (other than a benefit described in paragraph (d)) of a participating life insurance policy (other than an annuity contract) under the terms of which the policyholder is entitled to receive a specified amount in respect of the policy's cash surrender value, the rates used by the insurer when the policy was issued in computing the cash surrender values of the policy;

(d) in respect of any benefit provided

(i) in lieu of a cash settlement on the termination or maturity of a policy, or

(ii) in satisfaction of a dividend on a policy, the rates used by the insurer in determining the amount of such benefit; and

(e) in respect of all or part of any other policy, the rates used by the insurer in determining the premiums for the policy.

History: That portion of subsec. 1403(1) before para. (c) replaced by P.C. 1994-940, s. 6, June 2, 1994, Canada Gazette, Part II, June 15, 1994, applicable

(a) to taxation years beginning after 1990; and

(b) where an insurer so elected by notifying the Minister of National Revenue in writing before July, 1991, to the insurer's taxation years beginning after 1987, 1988 or 1989 (as specified in the election) and before 1991, and where such an election has been made

(i) if the insurer so indicated in the election, para. 1403(1)(a) shall be read without reference to the words "effected after 1990", and

(ii) in any other case, the reference in para. 1403(1)(a) to "1990" shall be read as a reference to the calendar year immediately preceding the first taxation year to which the election relates.

Para. 1403(1)(b) substituted by P.C. 1980-2089, s. 4, July 31, 1980, Canada Gazette, Part II, August 13, 1980, effective in respect of 1978 et seq.

Paras. 1403(1)(c), (d) substituted, (e) added, by P.C. 1980-1484, subsec. 2(1), June 5, 1980, Canada Gazette, Part II, June 25, 1980, effective for 1978 et seq.

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1), where a rate of mortality or other probability used by an insurer in determining the premium for a policy is not reasonable in the circumstances, the Minister on the advice of the Superintendent of Insurance for Canada may make such revision to the rate as is reasonable in the circumstances and the revised rate shall be deemed to have been used by the insurer in determining the premium.

(3) For the purposes of subsection (1), where the present value of the premiums for a policy as at the date of issue of the policy is less than the aggregate of

(a) the present value, at that date, of the benefits provided for by the policy, and

(b) the present value, at that date, of all outlays and expenses made or incurred by the insurer or outlays and expenses that the insurer reasonably estimates it will make or incur in respect of the policy (except outlays and expenses to maintain the policy after all premiums under the policy have been paid and for which explicit provision has not been made in calculating the premiums) and such part of any other outlays and expenses made or incurred by the insurer that may reasonably be regarded as applicable thereto, an increased rate of interest shall be determined by multiplying the rate of interest used in determining the premiums by a constant factor so that when the increased rate of interest is used,

(c) the present value of the premiums at the date of issue of the policy shall equal

(d) the aggregate of the present values of the benefits, outlays and expenses referred to in paragraphs (a) and (b), and the increased rate of interest shall be deemed to have been used by the insurer in determining the premiums for the policy.

(4) For the purposes of subsection (3), a "present value" referred to in that subsection shall be computed by using the rates of mortality and other probabilities used by the insurer in determining its premiums, after making any revision required by subsection (2).

(5) For the purposes of subsection (1), where a record of the rate of interest or mortality used by an insurer in determining the premiums for a policy is not available,

(a) the insurer may, if the policy was issued before 1978, make a reasonable estimate of the rate; and

(b) the Minister, on the advice of the Superintendent of Insurance for Canada, may

(i) if the policy was issued before 1978 and the insurer has not made the estimate referred to in paragraph (a), or

(ii) if the policy was issued after 1977,

make a reasonable estimate of the rate.

(6) Notwithstanding paragraph 1401(1)(c), a life insurer in computing its income for a taxation year may, in respect of any class of life insurance policies issued before its 1988 taxation year, other than policies referred to in paragraph 1401(1)(a) or (b), use a method of approximation to convert the reserve in respect of such policies reported by the insurer in its annual report to the relevant authority for the year to an amount that is a reasonable estimate of the amount that would otherwise be determined for such policies under paragraph 1401(1)(c), provided that that method of approximation is acceptable to the Minister on the advice of the relevant authority.

(7) For the purposes of subsection (1) and notwithstanding any other provision of this section, where

(a) an individual annuity contract was issued prior to 1969 by a life insurer, or

(b) a benefit was purchased prior to 1969 under a group annuity contract issued by a life insurer, and the contract

(c) is a policy in respect of which the provisions of paragraph 1401(1)(c) as it read in its application to the insurer's 1977 taxation year applied, the rates of interest and mortality used by the insurer in computing its reserve for the policy under that paragraph for its 1977 taxation year shall be used by the insurer in respect of that policy.

(8) For the purposes of subsection (1), where

(a) in a taxation year of an insurer, there has been a disposition to the insurer by another person with whom the insurer was dealing at arm's length in respect of which subsection 138(11.92) of the Act applied,

(b) as a result of the disposition, the insurer assumed obligations under life insurance policies (in this subsection referred to as the "transferred policies") in respect of which an amount may be claimed by the insurer as a reserve under paragraph 1401(1)(c) for the taxation year,

(c) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the aggregate of all amounts received or receivable by the insurer from the other person in respect of the transferred policies referred to in paragraph (b)

exceeds

(ii) the aggregate of all amounts paid or payable by the insurer to the other person in respect of commissions in respect of the amounts referred to in subparagraph (i)

exceeds the total of the maximum amounts that may be claimed by the insurer as a reserve under paragraph 1401(1)(c) (determined without reference to this subsection) in respect of the transferred policies for the taxation year, and

(d) the amount determined under paragraph (c) (in this subsection referred to as "reserve deficiency") can reasonably be attributed to the fact that the rates of interest or mortality used by the issuer of the transferred policies in determining the cash surrender values or premiums under such policies are no longer reasonable in the circumstances, the Minister, on the request of the insurer and with the advice of the relevant authority, may make such revision to the rates of interest or mortality to eliminate all or any part of that reserve deficiency, and those revised rates shall be deemed to have been used by the issuer of the transferred policies in determining the cash surrender value or premiums under the policies.

Subsec. 1403(8) added by subsec. 4(2) of the said P.C. 1990-2002, applicable in respect of dispositions of an insurance business or a line of business of an insurance business occurring after December 15, 1987.

1404. Interpretation — (1) In this Part "amount payable", "life insurance policy in Canada", "participating life insurance policy" and "policy loan" have the meanings assigned by subsection 138(12) of the Act.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 1404

[See after Reg. 1406 — ed.]

(2) In this Part,

"acquisition costs" of a policy for a taxation year means, where the policy

(a) is a policy other than

(i) a group policy,

(ii) a policy that insures a risk described in subparagraph 1400(a)(i),

(iii) a policy issued under an arrangement with a person (other than an insurer or an insurance agent or broker) with whom the insurer does not deal at arm's length whereby a customer of that person is referred to the insurer,

(iii.1) a policy issued to a member of a credit union as a consequence of an arrangement with a credit union, where

(A) the insurer was established primarily to provide insurance to members of credit unions,

Proposed Amendment — Regs. 1404–1408

Division III — Policy Reserves for Post-1995 Policies

1404. Life insurance business — (1) For the purpose of subparagraph 138(3)(a)(i) of the Act, there may be deducted in computing a life insurer's income from carrying on its life insurance business in Canada for a taxation year in respect of its life insurance policies in Canada that are post-1995 life insurance policies, the amount the insurer claims, not exceeding

(a) the amount determined under subsection (3) in respect of the insurer for the year, where that amount is greater than nil, and

(b) nil, in any other case.

Technical Notes: New section 1404 establishes the basis for determining the amount an insurer may deduct under subparagraph 138(3)(a)(i) of the Act as a policy reserve in respect of its life insurance policies that are post-1995 life insurance policies. A "post-1995 life insurance policy" is defined by subsection 1408(1) of the Regulations. Section 1404 is divided into four subsections.

New subsection 1404(1) provides that, for the purpose of subparagraph 138(3)(a)(i) of the Act, the amount that may be deducted by an insurer as a policy reserve in respect of its life insurance policies in Canada that are post-1995 life insurance policies is the amount determined under the formula in subsection 1404(3) of the Regulations. Where that amount is a positive number, new subsection 1404(1) provides that that amount is the deductible amount; however, where that amount is equal to or less than nil, the amount deductible is nil.

(2) For the purpose of paragraph 138(4)(b) of the Act, the amount prescribed in respect of an insurer for a taxation year, in respect of its life insurance policies in Canada that are post-1995 life insurance policies, is

(a) the absolute value of the amount determined under subsection (3) in respect of the insurer for the year, where that amount is less than nil, and

(b) nil, in any other case.

Technical Notes: New subsection 1404(2) provides that, for the purposes of paragraph 138(4)(b) of the Act, the amount prescribed in respect of life insurance policies that are post-1995 life insurance policies is the absolute value of the amount determined under the formula in subsection 1404(3) of the Regulations, where that amount is less than nil. Where, however, the amount determined under subsection 1404(3) is equal to or greater than nil, the prescribed amount is nil.

To summarize, where the amount determined under subsection 1404(3) is positive, that is the amount deductible under subparagraph 138(3)(a)(i) of the Act. Under subparagraph 138(3)(a)(i) of the Act, an amount not exceeding such prescribed amount may be deducted as a policy reserve in respect of an insurer's life insurance policies that are post-1995 life insurance policies. Where, however, the amount determined under subsection 1404(3) is negative, then the absolute value of that "negative reserve" is (subject to the transitional relief provided in new subsection 1404(4)) the prescribed amount for the purpose of paragraph 138(4)(b) of the Act.

(3) For the purposes of paragraphs (1)(a) and (2)(a), the amount determined under this subsection in respect of an insurer for a taxation year, in respect of its life insurance policies in Canada that are post-1995 life insurance policies, is the amount, which may be positive or negative, determined by the formula

$$A + B + C + D - M$$

where

A is the amount (except to the extent the amount is determined in respect of a policy, claim, premium, dividend or refund in respect of which an amount is included in determining the value of B, C or D), in respect of the insurer's life insurance policies in Canada that are post-1995 life insurance policies, equal to the lesser of

(a) the total of the reported reserves of the insurer at the end of the year in respect of those policies, and

(b) the total of the policy liabilities of the insurer at the end of the year in respect of those policies;

B is the amount, in respect of the insurer's life insurance policies in Canada that are post-1995 life insurance policies under which there may be claims incurred before the end of the year that have not been reported to the insurer before the end of the year, equal to 95% of the lesser of

(a) the total of the reported reserves of the insurer at the end of the year in respect of the possibility that there are such claims, and

(b) the total of the policy liabilities of the insurer at the end of the year in respect of the possibility that there are such claims;

C is the total of all amounts each of which is the unearned portion at the end of the year of the net premium for the policy where the policy is a group term life insurance policy that

(a) provides coverage for a period that does not exceed 12 months,

(b) is a life insurance policy in Canada, and

(c) is a post-1995 life insurance policy, determined by apportioning the net premium equally over the period to which that premium relates;

D is the total of all amounts (other than an amount deductible under subsection 138(3)(a)(v) of the Act) each of which is the amount that is the least of

in respect of a dividend, refund of premiums or refund of premium deposits provided for under the terms of a group life insurance policy that is a life insurance policy in Canada that is a post-1995 life insurance policy that will be

(a) used by the insurer to reduce or eliminate a future adverse claims experience under the policy,

(b) paid or unconditionally credited to the policyholder by the insurer, or

(c) applied in discharge, in whole or in part, of a liability of the policyholder to pay premiums to the insurer under the policy,

where

P is a reasonable amount as a reserve as at the end of the year in respect of the dividend, refund of premiums or refund of premium deposits provided for under the terms of the policy,

Q is 25 per cent of the amount of the premium under the terms of the policy for the 12-month period ending

(i) on the day the policy is terminated, if the policy is terminated in the year, and

(ii) at the end of the year, in any other case, and

R is the amount of the reported reserve of the insurer at the end of the year in respect of the dividend, refund of premiums or refund of premium deposits provided for under the terms of the policy; and

M is the total of all amounts determined in respect of a life insurance policy in Canada that is a post-1995 life insurance policy each of which is

(a) an amount payable in respect of a policy loan under the policy, or

(b) interest that has accrued to the insurer to the end of the year in respect of a policy loan under the policy.

Technical Notes: New subsection 1404(3) sets out a formula for determining the amount prescribed for the purposes of subsections 1404(1) and (2) of the Regulations. The total amount determined under this formula in subsection 1404(3), as well as the individual amounts determined under each of the components of the formula, may be equal to, greater or less than, nil (see new section 1407 of the Regulations).

The general policy reserve in respect of life insurance policies that are post-1995 life insurance policies is found in the description for A of the formula in subsection 1404(3) of the Regulations. This reserve replaces the existing reserves for such policies contained in paragraphs (a), (c) and (d) of subsection 1401(1) of the Regulations, the application of which, for the 1996 and subsequent taxation years, is limited to pre-1996 life insurance policies. The reserves contained in paragraphs (a), (c) and (d) of subsection 1401(1) are for, respectively, deposit administration fund policies, actuarial liabilities in respect of policies other than deposit administration fund policies and group term life policies with a term of up to 12 months, and policies that provide for certain additional benefits and guarantees under life insurance policies.

In general terms, the amount of the reserve determined under the description of A is equal to the lesser of two amounts: (1) the total of the reported reserves of the insurer at the end of the year in respect of post-1995 life insurance policies and (2) the total of the policy liabilities of the insurer at the end of the year in respect of such policies.

The terms "reported reserve" and "policy liability" are defined in new subsection 1408(1) of the Regulations.

Where an insurer is subject to the supervision of the "relevant authority" throughout a taxation year, the "reported reserve" of the insurer at the end of that year in respect of a life insurance policy or a claim, possible claim or risk under a life insurance policy means the positive or negative amount of the reserve that would have been reported in the insurer's annual report to the "relevant authority" in respect of that policy, claim, possible claim or risk if the reserve had been determined without reference to projected income and capital taxes of the insurer (other than the tax payable under Part XII.3 of the Act). Where the insurer is subject to the supervision of the relevant authority throughout its taxation year but is not required to file a report for a period ending coincidentally with the year, or the insurer is the CMHC or a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada, it is the amount of the reserve that would have been reported in the insurer's financial statements if they had been prepared in accordance with GAAP and without reference to income and capital taxes (other than the tax payable under Part XII.3 of the Act). In any other case, the reported reserve is nil.

The "policy liability" of an insurer at the end of a taxation year in respect of a life insurance policy or a claim, possible claim or risk under a life insurance policy means the positive or negative amount of the reserve in respect of the insurer's liability in respect of the policy, claim, possible claim or risk determined in accordance with accepted actuarial practice, but without reference to income and capital taxes (other than the tax payable under Part XII.3 of the Act).

The description of B in new subsection 1404(3) provides a reserve in respect of the possibility that there may be claims under post-1995 life insurance policies that have not been reported to the insurer. Existing paragraphs 1401(1)(d.1) and (d.2) provide a reserve for such incurred but not reported claims in respect of pre-1996 life insurance policies.

The reserve under "B" in respect of a life insurance policy is equal to 95% of the lesser of two amounts: (1) the total of the insurer's reported reserves in respect of possible claims under the policy and (2) the total of the insurer's policy liabilities in respect of such claims. The terms "reported reserve" and "policy liability" are defined in new subsection 1408(1) and described in the commentary therefor.

The description of C in new subsection 1404(3) provides for the determination of a reserve amount for unearned premiums in respect of group term life insurance policies that provide coverage for a period of up to 12 months. The description of C parallels the reserve in paragraph 1401(1)(b) of the Regulations, the application of which, for the 1996 and subsequent taxation years, is restricted to group term life insurance policies that are pre-1996 life insurance policies.

The description of D in new subsection 1404(3) provides for the determination of a reserve amount for, in general terms, future adverse claims experience in respect of group life insurance policies that are post-1995 life insurance policies. The description of D parallels the reserve in paragraph 1401(1)(c.1) of the Regulations, the application of which, for the 1996 and subsequent taxation years, is restricted to group life insurance policies that are pre-1996 life insurance policies.

The additional reserve provided under paragraph 1401(1)(e) in respect of qualified annuities of an insurer has no corollary under the new policy reserve rules in Division III of Part XIV, as these rules are solely applicable to life insurance policies that are not pre-1996 life insurance policies, that is, post-1995 life insurance policies.

The description of M in new subsection 1404(3) provides a deduction for outstanding policy loans and interest accrued thereon in the computation of the reserve amount under that subsection. This is in keeping with the view that policy loans represent a prepayment of benefits.

(4) Notwithstanding subsection (3), the amount determined under that subsection in respect of an insurer for a taxation year that ends before 2001 is deemed to be the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount that would, but for this subsection, be the amount determined under subsection (3) in respect of the insurer for the year;

B is, where the year ends in

(a) 1996, 100%,

(b) 1997, 80%,

(c) 1998, 60%,

(d) 1999, 40%, and

C is the total of all amounts each of which is the absolute value of any amount that is less than nil and that is used in computing

(a) the amount that is the lesser of the totals determined for the year under the description of I in subsection 1400(3), in respect of a risk under a non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy of the insurer that is a post-1995 non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy, or

(b) the amount that is the lesser of the totals determined for the year under the description of A in subsection (3), in respect of a liability or risk under a life insurance policy in Canada of the insurer that is a post-1995 life insurance policy; and

D is the lesser of

(a) 5% of the total of all amounts each of which is a premium received by the insurer in the year or any preceding taxation year ending after 1995 in respect of

(i) a non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy, or

(ii) a life insurance policy in Canada, and

(b) the value of C.

Technical Notes: New subsection 1404(4) is a transitional measure which provides relief, in certain circumstances, for negative reserves arising under the description of I in new subsection 1400(3) or the description of A in new subsection 1404(3). Those provisions provide for reserves in respect of an insurer's non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policies that are post-1995 non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policies and in respect of its life insurance policies in Canada that are post-1995 life insurance policies. More specifically, new subsection 1404(4) may operate to increase a life insurer's total policy reserve (or, if such a reserve is negative, decrease the amount by which it is negative) otherwise determined under subsection 1404(3), for its taxation years ending after 1995 and before 2001, by a decreasing percentage of an amount. That amount is the amount, if any, by which the absolute value of the total of the negative reserves used in the computation of the reserve amount under the descriptions of I or A in, respectively, subsection 1400(3) or 1404(3) for the year, exceeds 5% of the total of the premiums received by the insurer in each of those years in respect of its non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policies and its life insurance policies in Canada (including "pre-1996" policies). The following example illustrates the mechanics of the rule.

Assume that a life insurer with a December 31 year-end issues insurance policies in 1996 and 1997. Certain of these policies (the "I policies") are subject to the reserve rules under the description of I in subsection 1400(3), while the rest (the "A policies") are subject to the rules under the description of A in subsection 1404(3). Assume further that no other reserves may be claimed in respect of the policies. The total amount of premiums received by the insurer in respect of all policies (including "pre-1996" policies) is $10,000 in 1996 and $14,000 in 1997. The following reserves, both positive and negative, were computed in respect of the A and I policies for those years:

Policies	A Policies		I Policies
Reserves	1996	1997	1996	1997
— negative	(800)	(600)	(200)	(100)
— net	200	600	(200)	(100)

— net	400	800	(100)	0

Therefore, the lesser of the totals determined under the descriptions of A in subsection 1404(3) and I in subsection 1400(3) in respect of the A and I policies for the insurer's 1996 taxation year, is the total of the reported reserves for those policies. Given the above, the amount deemed by subsection 1404(4) to be the insurer's policy reserve under subsection 1404(3) for its 1996 taxation year is computed as follows:

A + (B × (C – D)) [with the term (C–D) never less than zero]

where

A is 200, that is, the total of the reported reserves in respect of the A policies for the insurer's 1996 taxation year;

B is 100%, as the insurer's taxation year ends in 1996;

C is 1,000, that is, the absolute value of the negative amounts (800 + 200), determined on a policy by policy basis, used in computing the insurer's reported reserves (as the total reported reserves is the least of the totals determined under the descriptions of A in subsection 1404(3) and I in subsection 1400(3)) in respect of the A and I policies for the insurer's 1996 taxation year; and

D is 500 or 5% of the $10,000 premiums received by the insurer in its 1996 taxation year in respect of all policies.

200 + (100% × (1,000 – 500)) = 700

Therefore, the insurer's policy reserve under subsection 1404(3) for its 1996 taxation year is $700.

For the insurer's 1997 taxation year, the amount deemed by subsection 1404(4) to be the insurer's policy reserve under subsection 1404(3) is computed as follows:

A + (B × (C – D)) [with the term (C–D) never less than zero]

where

A is 600, that is, the total of the reported reserves in respect of the A policies for the insurer's 1997 taxation year;

B is 80%, as the insurer's taxation year ends in 1997;

C is 700, that is, the total of all amounts each of which is the absolute value of the negative amounts used in computing the reported reserves for 1997 (600) in respect of the A policies, and the reported reserves for 1997 (100) in respect of the I policies; and

D is the lesser of 1,200 (5% × ($10,000 premiums received in 1996 + $14,000 premiums received in 1997)), and (in order to avoid a negative amount) the value of C or 700.

Therefore, the insurer's policy reserve under subsection 1404(3) for its 1997 taxation year is $600.

1405. For the purpose of subparagraph 138(3)(a)(ii) of the Act, there may be deducted in computing a life insurer's income for a taxation year the amount it claims as a reserve in respect of an unpaid claim received by the insurer before the end of the year under a life insurance policy in Canada that is a post-1995 life insurance policy, not exceeding the lesser of

(a) the reported reserve of the insurer at the end of the year in respect of the claim; and

(b) the policy liability of the insurer at the end of the year in respect of the claim.

Technical Notes: New section 1405 sets out the basis for determining the amount an insurer is permitted to deduct pursuant to subparagraph 138(3)(a)(ii) of the Act as a reserve in respect of its reported unpaid claims at the end of a taxation year under its life insurance policies in Canada that are post-1995 life insurance policies. Policies that are pre-1996 life insurance policies will continue to be governed by the rules in subsection 1401(4) of the Regulations.

The reserve under section 1405 is equal to the lesser of two amounts: (1) the insurer's reported reserve in respect of a reported unpaid claim and (2) the insurer's policy liability in respect of that claim. The terms "reported reserve" and "policy liability" are defined in new subsection 1408(1) and described in the commentary therefor.

1406. Any amount determined under section 1404 or 1405 shall be determined

(a) on a net of reinsurance ceded basis; and

(b) without reference to any liability in respect of a segregated fund (other than a liability in respect of a guarantee in respect of a segregated fund policy).

Technical Notes: New sections 1406 and 1407 provide rules for the purpose of computing the policy reserves under new sections 1404 and 1405 in respect of life insurance policies that are post-1995 life insurance policies.

New section 1406 provides that any amounts determined under sections 1404 and 1405 shall be determined

- on a net of reinsurance ceded basis, and
- without reference to a liability in respect of a segregated fund.

1407. For greater certainty, any amount referred to or determined under section 1404 or 1405 may be equal to, or less than, nil.

Technical Notes: New section 1407 clarifies that any amounts referred to or determined under sections 1404 and 1405 of the Regulations, in connection with an insurer's reserves in respect of its life insurance policies that are post-1995 life insurance policies, may be negative amounts. A parallel rule is provided in new section 1402.1 for the purposes of the existing reserve provisions in section 1400 of the Regulations.

Division IV — Interpretation

1408. Insurance businesses — (1) The definitions in this subsection apply in this Part.

"acquisition costs" of a policy means

(a) 5 per cent of the premium paid by the policyholder for the policy where the policy is

(i) a group policy,

(ii) a policy that insures a risk in respect of a financial loss of a lender on a loan made on the security of real property,

(iii) a policy issued under an arrangement with a person (other than an insurer or an insurance agent or broker) with whom the insurer does not deal at arm's length whereby a customer of the person is referred to the insurer,

(iv) a policy issued to a member of a credit union as a consequence of an arrangement with a credit union, where

(v) a policy issued to a policyholder that is a corporation with which the insurer does not deal at arm's length, and

(b) in any other case, 20 per cent of the premium paid by the policyholder for the policy.

Technical Notes: New section 1408 of Division IV of Part XIV provides a number of definitions and interpretative rules (some of which were previously found in section 1404) for the purposes of the rules in Divisions I, II and III of Part XIV dealing with the determination of insurance reserves. Those definitions and rules which are new or that have undergone significant amendments are dealt with below.

The term "acquisition costs" of a policy for a taxation year is amended in order to delete the transitional provisions in subparagraphs 1404(2)(a)(v) and (vi) of that definition.

"amount payable", in respect of a policy loan at a particular time, means the amount of the policy loan and the interest thereon that is outstanding at that time.

"benefit" in respect of a policy includes

(a) a policy dividend (other than a policy dividend in respect of a policy described in paragraph 1403(1)(c)) in respect of the policy to the extent that the dividend was specifically treated as a benefit by the insurer in determining a premium for the policy, and

(b) an expense of maintaining the policy after all premiums in respect of the policy have been paid to the extent that the expense was specifically provided for by the insurer in determining a premium for the policy,

but does not include

(e) any other amount under the policy that was not specifically provided for by the insurer in determining a premium for the policy.

"claim liability" of an insurer at the end of a taxation year means

(a) in respect of a claim reported to the insurer before that time under an insurance policy, the amount, if any, by which

exceeds

(ii) the present value at that time, computed using a rate of interest that is reasonable in the circumstances, of a reasonable estimate, determined in accordance with accepted actuarial practice, of the amounts that the insurer will recover after that time in respect of the claim because of salvage, subrogation or any other reason, and

(b) in respect of the possibility that there are claims under an insurance policy incurred before that time that have not been reported to the insurer before that time, the amount, if any, by which

(i) the present value at that time, computed using a rate of interest that is reasonable in the circumstances, of a reasonable estimate, determined in accordance with accepted actuarial practice, of the insurer's payments and claim adjustment expenses in respect of those claims

(ii) the present value at that time, computed using a rate of interest that is reasonable in the circumstances, of a reasonable estimate, determined in accordance with accepted actuarial practice, of the amounts that the insurer will recover in respect of those claims because of salvage, subrogation or any other reason.

Technical Notes: The "claim liability" of an insurer at the end of a taxation year in respect of an unpaid claim is defined as a reasonable estimate, determined in accordance with accepted actuarial practice, of the present value of future payments and claim adjustment expenses in respect of the claim, over the present value of amounts to be recovered in respect of the claim because of salvage, subrogation or any other reason.

The "claim liability" of an insurer at the end of a taxation year in respect of the possibility that there are claims that have been incurred before that time but not reported, is defined as a reasonable estimate, determined in accordance with accepted actuarial practice, of the present value at that time of future payments and claim adjustment expenses that it will incur in respect of such claims, over the present value at that time of amounts to be recovered in respect of the claim because of salvage, subrogation or any other reason.

"extended motor vehicle warranty" means an agreement (referred to in this definition as the "extended warranty") under which a person agrees to provide goods or render services in respect of the repair or maintenance of a motor vehicle manufactured by the person or a corporation related to the person where

(a) the extended warranty is in addition to a basic or limited warranty in respect of the vehicle,

(b) the basic or limited warranty has a term of 3 or more years, although it may expire before the end of such term upon the vehicle's odometer registering a specified number of kilometres or miles,

(c) more than 50 per cent of the expenses to be incurred under the extended warranty are reasonably expected to be incurred after the expiry of the basic or limited warranty, and

(d) the person's risk under the extended warranty is insured by an insurer that is subject to the supervision of a relevant authority.

Technical Notes: The term "extended motor vehicle warranty" is defined as a warranty agreement issued by a person in respect of a motor vehicle it or a corporation related to it manufactured where

- there exists a basic or limited warranty in respect of the vehicle,
- the basic warranty is for a term of at least 3 years, although it may expire earlier if the vehicle registers a certain distance before that time,
- it is reasonable to expect that more than 50% of the expenses under the warranty will be incurred after the basic warranty expires, and
- the company insuring the manufacturer's risk under the warranty is a regulated insurer.

"general amending provision" of an insurance policy means a provision of the policy that allows it to be amended with the consent of the policyholder.

Technical Notes: See under 1408(1)"interest".

"modified net premium", in respect of a premium under a policy (other than a prepaid premium under a policy that cannot be refunded except on termination of the policy), means

(a) where all benefits (other than policy dividends) and premiums (other than the frequency of payment of premiums) in respect of the policy are determined at the date of issue of the policy, the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount of the premium,

B is the present value, at the date of the issue of the policy, of the amount of the benefits to be provided under the terms of the policy after the day that is one year after the date of the issue of the policy,

C is the present value, at the date of the issue of the policy, of the amount of the benefits to be provided under the terms of the policy after the day that is two years after the date of the issue of the policy,

D is the present value, at the date of the issue of the policy, of the amount of the premiums payable under the terms of the policy on or after the day that is one year after the date of the issue of the policy, and

E is the present value, at the date of the issue of the policy, of the amount of the premiums payable under the terms of the policy on or after the day that is two years after the date of the issue of the policy, except that the amount determined by the formula in respect of the premium for the second year of a policy is deemed to be the amount that is 1/2 of the total of

(i) the amount that would otherwise be determined under the formula, and

(ii) the amount of a one-year term insurance premium (determined without regard to the frequency of payment of the premium) that would be payable under the policy, and

(b) in any other case, the amount that would be determined under paragraph (a) if that paragraph applied and the amount were adjusted in a manner that is reasonable in the circumstances.

"net premium for the policy" means the amount by which the premium paid by the policyholder for the policy exceeds the acquisition costs of the policy.

"non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy" includes a benefit under a group non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy.

Technical Notes: A "non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy" is defined to include a benefit under a group non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy. A parallel rule exists for life insurance policies.

"participating life insurance policy" has the meaning assigned by subsection 138(12) of the Act.

"policy liability" of an insurer at the end of the taxation year in respect of an insurance policy or a claim, possible claim or risk under an insurance policy means the positive or negative amount of the insurer's reserve in respect of its potential liability in respect of the policy, claim, possible claim or risk at the end of the year determined in accordance with accepted actuarial practice, but without reference to projected income and capital taxes (other than the tax payable under Part XII.3 of the Act).

Technical Notes: "Policy liability" of an insurer at the end of the taxation year in respect of an insurance policy or claim, possible claim or risk under an insurance policy means the positive or negative amount of the reserve in respect of the insurer's liability in respect of the policy, claim, possible claim or risk determined in accordance with accepted actuarial practice, but without reference to income and capital taxes (other than the tax payable under Part XII.3 of the Act).

"policy loan" has the meaning assigned by subsection 138(12) of the Act.

"post-1995 life insurance policy" means a life insurance policy that is not a pre-1996 life insurance policy.

Technical Notes: A "post-1995 life insurance policy" is simply defined as a life insurance policy that is not a "pre-1996 life insurance policy".

"post-1995 non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy" means a non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy that is not a pre-1996 non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy.

Technical Notes: A "post-1995 non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy" is simply defined as a non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy that is not a "pre-1996 non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy".

"pre-1996 life insurance policy", at any time, means a life insurance policy where

(a) the policy was issued before 1996; and

(b) before that time and after 1995 there has been no change, except in accordance with the provisions (other than a general amending provision) of the policy as they existed on December 31, 1995, to

(i) the amount of any benefit under the policy,

(ii) the amount of any premium or other amount payable under the policy, or

(iii) the number of premium or other payments under the policy.

Technical Notes: A "pre-1996 life insurance policy" is a life insurance policy that was issued before 1996 and in respect of which there has been no change to the amount or number of premium payments or the amount of benefits under the policy after 1995 except in accordance with the provisions of the policy as they existed on December 31, 1995. However, if such a change occurs pursuant to a "general amending provision" of the policy, it will lose its status as a pre-1996 policy. The term "general amending provision" is defined in new subsection 1408(1) and described in the commentary therefor.

"pre-1996 non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy", at any time, means a non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy where

(a) the policy was issued before 1996; and

(b) before that time and after 1995 there has been no change, except in accordance with the provisions (other than a general amending provision) of the policy as they existed on December 31, 1995, to

(i) the amount of any benefit under the policy,

(ii) the amount of any premium or other amount payable under the policy, or

(iii) the number of premium or other payments under the policy.

Technical Notes: A "pre-1996 non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy" means a non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy, which, for this purpose, includes a benefit under a group policy, that was issued before 1996 and in respect of which there has been no change to the amount or number of premium payments or the amount of benefits under the policy after 1995 except in accordance with the provisions of the policy as they existed on December 31, 1995. However, if such a change occurs pursuant to a "general amending provision" of the policy, it will lose its status as a pre-1996 policy. The term "general amending provision" is defined in subsection 1408(1) and described in the commentary therefor.

"qualified annuity" means an annuity contract issued before 1982, other than a deposit administration fund policy or a policy referred to in paragraph 1403(7)(c),

(a) in respect of which regular periodic annuity payments have commenced,

(b) in respect of which a contract or certificate has been issued that provides for regular periodic annuity payments to commence within one year from the date of issue of the contract or certificate,

(c) that is not issued as or under a registered retirement savings plan, registered pension plan or deferred profit sharing plan and that

(i) does not provide for a guaranteed cash surrender value at any time, and

(ii) provides for regular periodic annuity payments to commence not later than the attainment of age 71 by the annuitant, or

(d) that is issued as or under a registered retirement savings plan, registered pension plan or deferred profit sharing plan, if the interest rate is guaranteed for at least 10 years and the plan does not provide for any participation in profits, directly or indirectly.

"reinsurance commission" in respect of a policy means

(a) where the risk under the policy is fully reinsured, the amount, if any, by which

(i) the net premium for the policy

exceeds

(ii) the consideration payable by the insurer in respect of the reinsurance of the risk, and

(b) where the risk under the policy is not fully reinsured, the amount, if any, by which

(i) the portion of the net premium for the policy that may reasonably be considered to be in respect of the portion of the risk that is reinsured with a particular reinsurer

exceeds

(ii) the consideration payable by the insurer to the particular reinsurer in respect of the risk assumed by the reinsurer.

"relevant authority" of an insurer means

(a) the Superintendent of Financial Institutions, if the insurer is required by law to report to the Superintendent of Financial Institutions, and

(b) in any other case, the Superintendent of Insurance or other similar officer or authority of the province under whose laws the insurer is incorporated.

Technical Notes: Where an insurer is subject to the supervision of the "relevant authority" throughout a taxation year, the "reported reserve" of the insurer at the end of that year in respect of an insurance policy or a claim, possible claim or risk under an insurance policy means the positive or negative amount of the reserve that would have been reported in the insurer's annual report to the relevant authority in respect of that policy, claim, possible claim or risk if the reserve had been determined without reference to income and capital taxes (other than the tax payable under Part XII.3 of the Act). Where the insurer is subject to the supervision of the relevant authority throughout its taxation year but is not required to file a report for a period ending coincidentally with the year, or the insurer is the CMHC or a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada, it is the amount of the reserve that would have been reported in the insurer's financial statements if they had been prepared in accordance with GAAP and without reference to income and capital taxes (other than the tax payable under Part XII.3 of the Act). In any other case, the reported reserve is nil.

"reported reserve" of an insurer at the end of a taxation year in respect of an insurance policy or a claim, possible claim, risk, dividend, refund of premiums or refund of premium deposits under an insurance policy means the amount equal to

(a) where the insurer is required to file an annual report with its relevant authority for a period ending coincidentally with the year, the positive or negative amount of the reserve that would be reported in that report in respect of the insurer's potential liability under the policy if the reserve were determined without reference to projected income and capital taxes (other than the tax payable under Part XII.3 of the Act),

(b) where the insurer is, throughout the year, subject to the supervision of its relevant authority and paragraph (a) does not apply, the positive or negative amount of the reserve that would be reported in its financial statements for the year in respect of the insurer's potential liability under the policy if

(i) those statements were prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, and

(ii) the reserve were determined without reference to projected income and capital taxes

(other than the tax payable under Part XII.3 of the Act),

(c) where the insurer is the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation or a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada, the positive or negative amount of the reserve that would be reported in its financial statements for the year in respect of the insurer's potential liability under the policy if

(i) those statements were prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, and

(ii) the reserve were determined without reference to projected income and capital taxes (other than the tax payable under Part XII.3 of the Act), and

(d) in any other case, nil.

Technical Notes: See under 1408(1)"relevant authority".

"segregated fund" has the meaning given that expression in subsection 138.1(1).

Technical Notes: The terms "segregated fund" and "segregated fund policy" have been added to the list of definitions in former section 1404 of the Regulations, and have the meanings given those expressions in subsection 138.1(1) of the Act.

"segregated fund policy" has the meaning given that expression in subsection 138.1(1).

Technical Notes: See under 1408(1)"segregated fund".

(2) The definition "group term life insurance policy" in subsection 248(1) of the Act does not apply to this Part.

(3) For the purpose of the definition "modified net premium" in subsection (1), it may be assumed that premiums are payable annually in advance.

(4) For the purposes of this Part,

(a) a reference to a "premium paid by the policyholder" shall, depending on the method regularly following by the insurer in computing its income, be read as a reference to a "premium paid or payable by the policyholder"; and

(b) in determining the premium paid by a policyholder for a policy, there may be deducted by the insurer the portion, if any, of the premium that

(i) can reasonably be considered, at the time the policy is issued, to be a deposit that, pursuant to the terms of the policy or the by-laws of the insurer, will be returned to the policyholder, or credited to the account of the policyholder, by the insurer on the termination of the policy, and

(ii) was not otherwise deducted under section 140 of the Act.

(5) For the purposes of this Part, any rider that is attached to a life insurance policy and that provides for additional life insurance or for an annuity is a separate life insurance policy.

(6) For the purposes of this Part, any rider that is attached to a non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy that provides for additional non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness insurance, as the case may be, is a separate non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy.

Technical Notes: New subsection 1408(6) provides that a rider attached to a non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy that provides for additional non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness insurance, as the case may be, is a separate policy. This will ensure that such a rider issued after 1995 will not, in and of itself, cause a non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy to lose its status as a "pre-1996" policy. A parallel rule is provided in subsection 1408(5) with respect to life insurance policies.

(7) For the purposes of the definitions "pre-1996 life insurance policy" and "pre-1996 non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy" in subsection (1), a change in the amount of any benefit or in the amount or number of any premiums or other amounts payable under a policy is deemed not to have occurred where the change results from

(a) a change in underwriting class;

(b) a change in frequency of premium payments within a year that does not alter the present value, at the beginning of the year, of the total premiums to be paid under the policy in the year;

(c) the deletion of a rider;

(d) the correction of erroneous information;

(e) the reinstatement of the policy after its lapse, if the reinstatement occurs not later than 60 days after the end of the calendar year in which the lapse occurred;

(f) the redating of the policy for policy loan indebtedness; or

(g) an increase in the amount of a benefit under the policy that is granted by the insurer on a class basis, where

(i) no consideration was payable by the policyholder or any other person for the increase, and

(ii) the increase was not made because of the terms or conditions of the policy or any other policy or contract to which the insurer is a party.

Technical Notes: New subsection 1408(7) provides that, for the purposes of the definitions "pre-1996 life insurance policy" and "pre-1996 non-cancellable or guaranteed renewable accident and sickness policy" in subsection 1408(1), a change in the amount of any benefit or in the amount or number of any premiums payable under a life insurance policy resulting from certain listed transactions or events in respect of the policy, is deemed not to have occurred.

Application: The October 7, 1996 draft regulations (insurers' policy reserves), s. 5, will amend ss. 1404 to 1406 to read as above, and add ss. 1407 and 1408, applicable to 1996 et seq.

(ii) any accumulated depreciation reserves that the original owner or an intervening owner had for the property at the commencement of 1917 and that were recognized by the Minister for the purposes of the Income War Tax Act, and

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 2400, 2401

Technical Notes: Part XXIV of the Income Tax Regulations sets out special rules for the computation of an insurer's income. The amendments to Part XXIV apply to the 1997 and subsequent taxation years.

Existing section 2400 of the Regulations provides rules for determining the investment property of multinational resident life insurers and non-resident insurers that is considered to be used or held in support of the insurer's Canadian insurance business. The rules in section 2400 have been extensively modified and moved to new section 2401.

In essence, amended section 2400 replaces the definitions and rules which are set out in existing section 2405. Amended subsections 2400(1) and (4) contain definitions for terms and expressions used in Part XXIV of the Regulations. Many of these terms and expressions were previously set out in subsections 2405(1), (2) and (3). Amended subsection 2400(2) sets out rules for determining the carrying value of a property or any other amount under Part XXIV of the Regulations. Amended subsection 2400(3) provides a rule for determining the liabilities of a taxpayer.

2400. (1) Definitions — The definitions in this subsection apply in this Part and in subsection 219(7) of the Act.

"attributed surplus" of a non-resident insurer for a taxation year is the total of

(a) the insurer's property and casualty surplus for the year;

(b) where the insurer elects for the year in prescribed form and manner, 1/2 of the total of

(i) the amount that would have been determined at the end of the year in respect of the insurer under subparagraph (a)(iii) of the definition "Canadian investment fund", and

(ii) the amount that would have been determined at the end of the preceding taxation year in respect of the insurer under subparagraph (a)(iii) of the definition "Canadian investment fund"

if, throughout the year and the preceding taxation year, the insurer had been a life insurer resident in Canada and had not carried on any insurance business other than a life insurance business or an accident and sickness insurance business; and

(c) where the insurer does not elect under paragraph (b) for the year, 120 per cent of the total of all amounts each of which is 1/2 of the amount determined by regulations or guidelines made under Part XIII of the Insurance Companies Act to be the margin of assets in Canada over liabilities in Canada required to be maintained by the insurer as at the end of the year or as at the end of the preceding taxation year in respect of an insurance business carried on in Canada (other than a property and casualty insurance business).

Technical Notes: In general terms, the attributed surplus for the year of a non-resident insurer is a notional calculation of its surplus in respect of its Canadian property and casualty insurance business and Canadian life insurance and accident and sickness insurance businesses.

Under the existing definition, a non-resident insurer's "attributed surplus for the year" is made up of the following two components:

1. surplus in respect of its Canadian property and casualty insurance business, and
2. surplus in respect of its other Canadian insurance businesses. An insurer's other insurance businesses are usually its life insurance and accident and sickness insurance businesses (in this note an insurer's other insurance businesses will be simply referred to as the insurer's life insurance business).

The amount in 1. above is determined by the rules in the definition of "property and casualty surplus" found in subsection 2405(3) of the existing Regulations (now found in subsection 2400(1); for further details see the commentary to that definition, below).

The amount in 2. above is equal to the insurer's life surplus factor (which is a percentage) multiplied by the total amount of its reserves and liabilities in respect of its Canadian life insurance business. An insurer's life surplus factor is determined under the definition of "life surplus factor" (in subsection 2405(3) of the existing Regulations) as one of the following expressed as a percentage:

(a) where the insurer makes an election under section 2401, the surplus the insurer would have been considered to have it if had been a life insurer resident in Canada;

(b) where the insurer made an election under section 2401 in one of the four preceding years, its surplus and liabilities) for the most recent year in which an election was made; or

(c) 10%.

Section 2401 of the existing Regulations sets out the administrative requirements for making an election to determine its surplus as if the non-resident where a life insurer resident in Canada. In essence, an election under section 2401 allowed a non-resident insurer to calculate its surplus as if it were life insurer resident in Canada. Accordingly, where an election is made, the non-resident's Canadian investment fund may be similar to the Canadian investment fund that it would have had if it were a Canadian resident (because attributed surplus is a component of the Canadian investment fund).

The definition of "attributed surplus for the year" is renamed simply "attributed surplus" and is amended with respect to the computation of an insurer's surplus in respect of its Canadian life insurance and accident and sickness insurance businesses. Paragraph (a) of the amended definition retains the property and casualty surplus component of attributed surplus, while the existing "life surplus factor" calculation is replaced by new rules in paragraphs (b) and (c) of the amended definition.

New paragraph (c) of the amended definition of "attributed surplus" contains the general rule for determining surplus is Canada in respect of an insurer's life insurance and accident and sickness insurance businesses in Canada. Under this paragraph an insurer's attributed surplus is 120% of the average of the current year's and the immediately preceding year's margin of assets over liabilities which are required to be maintained by the insurer under the Insurance Companies Act in respect of its Canadian life insurance and accident and sickness insurance businesses.

New paragraph (b) is applicable only where the insurer elects in prescribed form and manner to calculate its surplus using the rules which apply to resident life insurers. As explained in more detail in the commentary to that definition of "Canadian investment fund", subparagraph (a)(iii) of that definition sets out the Canadian portion of a resident life insurer's surplus in respect of its life and accident and sickness insurance businesses carried on in Canada. Under that subparagraph an insurer prorates its policyholders' and shareholders' equity (as reported to the Office of the Superintendent of Financial Institutions) using the ratio of the insurer's Canadian liabilities to its world-wide liabilities. To make use of this election, the non-resident insurer must compute its policyholders' and shareholders' equity, and its world-wide liabilities as if it were a life insurer resident in Canada. Once the equity and world-wide liability amounts are determined, the non-resident insurer can use the proration formula in subparagraph (a)(iii) of the amended definition of "Canadian investment fund" to compute its Canadian surplus.

The form and manner of making the election under new paragraph (b) of the definition of "attributed surplus" will be prescribed by the Department of National Revenue; accordingly, the existing rules in section 2401 for making an election are repealed.

"Canadian business property" of an insurer for a taxation year in respect of an insurance business means

(a) where the insurer was resident in Canada throughout the year and did not carry on an insurance business outside Canada in the year, the property used or held by it in the year in the course of carrying on the business in Canada; and

(b) in any other case, the designated insurance property of the insurer for the year in respect of the business.

Technical Notes: The expression "Canadian business property" is used in the definition of "gross Canadian life investment income" which is also contained in amended subsection 2400(1). These definitions are relevant only for the purpose of computing a life insurer's income from its participating life insurance business under section 2402.

The definition of "Canadian business property is amended in three respects. First, paragraph (a) is amended by removing the reference to a insurer that did not carry on a life insurance business in Canada in the year: as noted above, these definitions are redundant for insurers that do not carry on a life insurance business. Second, the phrase "property used by it in the year in, or held by it in the year in the course of" (which means property that is factually used in an insurance business) is simplified to "property used or held by it in the year". This latter change is not intended to effect any substantive change to the definition.

Third, paragraph (b), which applies to multinational resident life insurers, is amended by replacing the reference to "property used by it in the year in, or held by it in the year in the course of" with the new expression "designated insurance property".

"Canadian equity property" of a person or partnership (in this definition referred to as the "taxpayer") at any time means property of the taxpayer that is

(a) a share of the capital stock of, or an income bond, income debenture, small business development bond or small business bond issued by, a person (other than a corporation affiliated with the taxpayer) resident in Canada or a Canadian partnership; or

(b) that proportion of shares owned by the taxpayer of the capital stock of a corporation affiliated with the taxpayer, or of the taxpayer's interest in a partnership or trust, that

(i) the total value for the year that includes that time of Canadian equity property owned by the corporation, partnership or trust, as the case may be,

is of

(ii) the total value for the year that includes that time of all property owned by the corporation, partnership or trust, as the case may be.

Technical Notes: The definition of "Canadian equity property" is relevant for the purposes of the equity limit in subsection 2400(4), the transitional rule in section 2409 and the minimum net revenue test in section 2411 of the Regulations.

Under the existing definition of the term (found in subsection 2405(3)), Canadian equity property means

- a share, an income bond or debenture, or small business development or small business bond issued by a person or partnership resident in Canada, or
- a share of a designated corporation or an interest in a partnership or trust, based on the amount of equity property owned by such corporation, partnership or trust.

Currently, where an insurer owns shares of a "designated corporation" (formerly defined in subsection 2405(3) as a corporation in respect of which the insurer or non-arm's length persons held shares that represented 30% or more of the common shares of the corporation) only that proportion of the shares that the designated corporation's Canadian equity property is of all its property is considered to be Canadian investment property.

The definition is amended as a consequence of the replacement of the designated corporation definition with the affiliated person concept (as set out in section 251.1 of the Act). The definition is also amended so that paragraph (a) applies only where the partnership is a Canadian partnership. The amended definition continues to be relevant for the equity limit in amended subsection 2400(4), the rules in section 2409 and amended section 2411.

"Canadian investment fund" of an insurer at the end of a taxation year means

(a) in the case of a life insurer resident in Canada, the total of

(i) the amount, if any, by which the insurer's Canadian reserve liabilities as at the end of the year exceeds the insurer's Canadian outstanding premiums and policy loans as at the end of the year (to the extent the policy loans were not otherwise deducted in computing the insurer's Canadian reserve liabilities as at the end of the year),

(ii) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of an insurance business carried on by the insurer in Canada that is reported as a liability of the insurer as at the end of the year other than

(I) a liability to the extent that it is included in subparagraph (i),

(II) a liability in respect of an amount payable out of a segregated fund, or

(III) a debt that was incurred or assumed by the insurer to acquire a property

exceeds the total of

(B) the total value for the year of the insurer's non-segregated property (other than investment property, or a share of the capital stock of, or a debt owing by, a financial institution to the extent that its value for the year is included in the insurer's financial institution allowance for the year) used or held by it in the year in the course of carrying on its insurance business in Canada,

(C) the insurer's deferred tax debit balance as at the end of the year in respect of its insurance business carried on in Canada, and

(D) an amount equal to that proportion of

(I) the insurer's financial institution allowance for the year

that

(II) the amount that would be determined under this subparagraph if it were read without this clause

is of

(III) the total of the amount determined under subclause (II) and the amount determined under subclause (iii)(B)(II), and

(iii) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the amount equal to that proportion of

(I) the amount of the insurer's total policyholders' and shareholders' equity as at the end of the year (to the extent that that amount is not included as a liability under subparagraph (ii))

that

(II) the insurer's weighted Canadian liabilities as at the end of the year

is of

(III) the insurer's weighted total liabilities as at the end of the year

exceeds

(B) an amount equal to that proportion of

(I) the insurer's financial institution allowance for the year

that

(II) the amount determined under clause (A)

is of

(III) the total of the amount determined under subclause (II) and the amount determined under subclause (ii)(D)(II); and

(b) in the case of a non-resident insurer, the total of

(i) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the insurer's Canadian reserve liabilities as at the end of the year

exceeds the total of

(B) the insurer's Canadian outstanding premiums and policy loans as at the end of the year (to the extent the policy loans were not otherwise deducted in computing the insurer's Canadian reserve liabilities as at the end of the year), and

(C) the insurer's deferred acquisition expenses as at the end of the year in respect of its property and casualty insurance business carried on in Canada,

(ii) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of an insurance business carried on by the insurer in Canada that is reported as a liability of the insurer as at the end of the year other than

(I) a liability to the extent that it is included in subparagraph (i),

(II) a liability in respect of an amount payable out of a segregated fund, or

(III) a debt that was incurred or assumed by the insurer to acquire a property

exceeds the total of

(B) the total value for the year of the insurer's non-segregated property (other than investment property) used or held by it in the year in the course of carrying on an insurance business in Canada, and

(C) the insurer's deferred tax debit balance as at the end of the year in respect of its insurance business carried on in Canada, and

(iii) the greater of

(A) the amount, if any, by which the total of

(I) the insurer's surplus funds derived from operations as at the end of its preceding taxation year, and

(II) the total of all amounts in respect of which the insurer made an election under subsection 219(4) or (5.2) of the Act, each of which is an amount included in the total determined in respect of the insurer under subparagraph 219(4)(a)(i.1) of the Act as at the end of its preceding taxation year

exceeds

(III) the total of amounts determined in respect of the insurer under subparagraphs 219(4)(a)(ii), (iii), (iv) and (v) of the Act, as at the end of the taxation year, and

(B) the insurer's attributed surplus for the year.

Technical Notes: Current rules:

An insurer's Canadian investment fund ("CIF") at the end of a taxation year represents the quantum of investment property considered to be used in the insurer's Canadian insurance business as of the end of the year. For a resident life insurer, its CIF at the end of a year is currently determined by pro-rating the value of the insurer's world-wide investment property using the ratio of its Canadian reserve liabilities to its total reserve liabilities at year-end. The amount of investment property pro-rated is adjusted by the insurer's policy loans and general indebtedness.

A non-resident insurer's CIF at the end of a year is equal to the total of

- its maximum tax actuarial reserves,
- its policy dividend reserves on a tax basis,
- its reserves in respect of its property and casualty insurance business in Canada (as reported to the Office of the Superintendent of Financial Institutions ("OSFI")), and
- the greater of:

  (a) its "surplus funds from operations" computed at the end of the preceding year, and

  (b) its "attributed surplus" for the year

MINUS

- the value of all its non-investment property which is factually used in carrying on its insurance businesses in Canada, and
- its deferred acquisition expenses in respect of its property and casualty insurance business in Canada.

In general terms, a non-resident insurer's surplus funds from operations is its post-1968 income and gains from the disposition of property considered to have been used in an insurance business in Canada, less its post-1968 business losses and losses from property considered to have been used in an insurance business in Canada. A non-resident insurer's attributed surplus is the total of the insurer's surplus in respect of its insurance businesses in Canada less the amount of non-investment property that is considered to be used in respect of those business. (For further details see the commentary, above, on the definition of "attributed surplus".)

Proposed changes:

Under paragraph (a) of the amended CIF definition, a resident insurer's CIF at the end of a year is equal to the total of:

- its Canadian reserve liabilities (less policy loans and outstanding premiums in respect of Canadian policies)
- its other liabilities in respect of its Canadian insurance businesses to the extent that those liabilities exceed: (a) the value of the insurer's non-investment property (other than shares and debt of affiliated financial institutions) which is factually used in its Canadian insurance businesses; (b) the part of the insurer's financial institution allowance that, based on the relationship between the amount of its general Canadian liabilities and Canadian equity, may be considered to have been funded from those liabilities; and (c) its deferred tax debit balance
- its policyholders' and shareholders' equity, less the value of its shares or debt of affiliated financial institutions multiplied by the ratio of weighted Canadian liabilities to weighted total liabilities (For further details, see the commentary on the definitions of "weighted total liabilities" and "total weighted liabilities" below.) This equity amount is eligible to be reduced by the part of the insurer's financial institution allowance that, based on the relationship between the amount of its Canadian general liabilities and Canadian equity, may be considered to have been funded from that equity.

Conceptually, the new CIF for a resident insurer is determining by dividing the right hand side of the insurer's regulatory balance sheet into Canadian and foreign components. The liabilities which relate to the Canadian insurance business will be included in the insurer's CIF. The remaining part of the right hand side of the balance and, correspondingly, the rest of the insurer's CIF, will be composed of the insurer's capital and surplus accounts. A factual allocation of these accounts to Canada is not practical because most multinational life insurers' capital and surplus is considered to be held in support of its world-wide operations — not only those in Canada. The new resident CIF uses the ratio of weighted Canadian liabilities to weighted total liabilities to establish the Canadian portion of an insurer's capital and surplus accounts.

The amended non-resident CIF is similar to the resident life insurer's CIF with respect to the computation of its liability accounts. However, because non-resident insurers are not, generally, required to compute their total liabilities in accordance with a Canadian regulatory authority it would generally be impractical to use the weighted CL/weighted TL ratio for apportioning capital. The non-resident's capital and surplus components are equal to the greater of its surplus funds from operations and attributed surplus.

More specifically, under paragraph (b) of the amended definition of CIF, a non-resident insurer's CIF is equal to:

- its Canadian reserve liabilities as at the end of the year less policy loans and outstanding premiums in respect of Canadian policies, and deferred acquisition expenses, at the end of the year; and
- its other liabilities in respect of an insurance business carried on in Canada that is reported to OSFI as a liability (excluding Canadian reserve liabilities, liabilities in respect of a segregated fund or debts in respect of the acquisition of a specific property of the insurer)

  LESS

  - the total of the insurer's non-investment property that is factually used in the course of carrying on an insurance business in Canada and its deferred tax debit balance at year-end; and
- the greater of:

  (A) the insurer's surplus funds from operations computed at the end of the preceding year (adjusted for the amount of Part XIV branch tax paid), and

  (B) the insurer's attributed surplus for the year. (For further details see the commentary on the amended definition of "attributed surplus" above.)

"Canadian investment property" of an insurer for a taxation year means an investment property owned by the insurer (other than, where the insurer is non-resident, property established by the insurer as not being effectively connected with its Canadian insurance businesses) that is

(a) real property situated in Canada;

(b) depreciable property situated in Canada or leased to a person resident in Canada for use inside and outside of Canada;

(c) a mortgage, a hypothec, an agreement of sale or any other form of indebtedness in respect of property described in paragraph (a) or (b);

(d) a Canadian equity property;

(e) a Canadian resource property;

(f) a deposit balance of the insurer that is in Canadian currency;

(g) a bond, debenture or other form of indebtedness, in Canadian currency, issued by

(i) a person resident in Canada or a Canadian partnership, or

(ii) the government of Canada, a province or any political subdivision thereof; or

(h) a property that is

(i) a share of the capital stock of a corporation resident in Canada that is affiliated with the insurer, or

(ii) an interest in a Canadian partnership, or a trust resident in Canada where not less than 75 per cent of the total value for the year of all property of the corporation, partnership or trust, as the case may be, is attributable to property that would be Canadian investment property if it were owned by an insurer.

Technical Notes: Canadian investment property is defined in subsection 2405(3) of the existing Regulations as investment property of an insurer that is

(a) land or depreciable property in Canada;

(b) Canadian equity property;

(c) Canadian resource property;

(d) mortgage or other forms of indebtedness in respect of land or depreciable property;

(e) Canadian currency deposits with Canadian financial institutions;

(f) Canadian currency government debt of a Canadian government; and

(g) shares of a designated corporation in Canada, interest in a partnership or trust where not less than 75% of the value of the corporation's, partnership's or trust's assets is Canadian investment property.

The definition of "Canadian investment property" is used in the ordering rule for the designation of property (currently found in subsection 2400(6) and to be replaced with new subsection 2401(3)), and the minimum net revenue test for investment property in section 2411.

An insurer must designate its investment property in the following order:

1. property which was designated in the preceding year;
2. Canadian investment property in the following order:
   - land and depreciable property in Canada,
   - mortgages, agreements of sale and other forms of indebtedness in respect of land and depreciable property in Canada, and
   - other Canadian investment property; and
3. other investment property.

Section 2411 sets out the basis for determining the prescribed amount for the purpose of paragraph 138(9)(b) of the Act. This amount ensures that the insurer's net investment revenue from its designated property is not less than the net investment revenue that would be determined if the average rate of return on its designated assets were equal to the average rate of return on all its investment property. Under this net investment revenue test, the average rate of return is determined in respect of three classes of property: Canadian investment property, Canadian equity property and foreign investment property. This rule is intended to prevent an insurer from understating its Canadian investment income by only designating assets with low investment returns.

The definition of "Canadian investment property" is amended in several ways. First, the definition is reworded to make it easier to read. Second, the new definition of "deposit balance" is used to replace the wording in paragraph (e). Third, the look-through rule for shares of corporations is amended to change the reference from designated corporation to corporation affiliated with the insurer who owns the shares. The affiliation rules are set out in section 251.1 of the Act.

The definition continues to be relevant for the designation of property ordering rule in amended subsection 2401(3) and the minimum revenue test in amended section 2411.

"Canadian outstanding premiums" of an insurer at any time means the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of an outstanding premium of the insurer with respect to an insurance policy at that time, to the extent of the amount of the premium included in the insurer's Canadian reserve liabilities as at that time.

Technical Notes: The "Canadian outstanding premiums" of an insurer at any time means the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of an outstanding premium of the insurer in respect of an insurance policy at that time, to the extent that the amount of the premium is included in the insurer's Canadian reserve liabilities at that time.

"Canadian reserve liabilities" of an insurer as at the end of a taxation year means the total of all amounts as at that time each of which is the amount of a liability (other than a liability in respect of a segregated fund) of the insurer in respect of

(a) a life insurance policy in Canada;

(b) a fire insurance policy issued or effected upon property situated in Canada; or

(c) an insurance policy of any other class covering risks ordinarily within Canada at the time the policy was issued or effected.

Technical Notes: An insurer's "Canadian reserve liabilities" is defined as an insurer's liabilities and reserves (excluding those in respect of segregated funds) in respect of its insurance policies in Canada as determined for the purposes of the relevant authority. An insurance policy in Canada is defined in subsection 2405(3) of the existing Regulations as a life insurance policy in Canada, a fire insurance policy issued or effected upon property in Canada, and a policy where the risks covered by the policy were ordinarily in Canada. The relevant authority is defined in subsection 2405(3) as the Superintendent of Financial Institutions or the Superintendent of Insurance or other similar officer or authority of the province in which the insurer is incorporated.

The definition of "Canadian reserve liabilities" is amended as a consequence of the repeal of the definitions of "insurance policy in Canada" and "relevant authority". The definition of "insurance policy in Canada" is incorporated into the amended definition of "Canadian reserve liabilities". The reference to "relevant authority" is removed because amended subsection 2400(2) provides rules for determining any amount in the amended rules. (For further details see the commentary to amended subsection 2400(2) below.)

"deposit balance" of an insurer means an amount standing to the insurer's credit as or on account of amounts deposited with a corporation authorized to accept deposits or to carry on the business of offering to the public its services as a trustee.

Technical Notes: A "deposit balance" is an amount standing to an insurer's credit on account of amounts deposited with a deposit-taking institution or a trust company.

The definition replaces the existing references to "a balance standing to the insurer's credit as or on account of amounts deposited with a corporation authorized to accept deposits or to carry on the business of offering to the public its services as a trustee." The definition is used in subsection 2410(1) and the amended definitions of "Canadian investment property" and "value" in amended subsection 2400(1).

"equity limit" of an insurer for a taxation year means

(a) in respect of a life insurer resident in Canada, that proportion of the total of all amounts each of which is the value for the year of an equity property of the insurer that

(A) the insurer's weighted Canadian liabilities as at the end of the year

is of

(B) the insurer's weighted total liabilities as at the end of the year;

(b) in respect of a non-resident insurer (other than a life insurer), 1/4 of the total of

(i) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the insurer's mean Canadian reserve liabilities for the year

exceeds

(B) 1/2 of the total of its deferred acquisition expenses and premiums receivable as at the end of the year and its deferred acquisition expenses and premiums receivable as at the end of its preceding taxation year to the extent that those amounts were included in the insurer's Canadian reserve liabilities for the year or the preceding year, as the case may be, in respect of the insurer's business in Canada, and

(ii) the insurer's property and casualty surplus for the year; and

(c) in respect of a non-resident life insurer, the total of

(i) where the insurer makes an election referred to in paragraph (b) of the definition "attributed surplus" for the year, the greater of

(A) that proportion of the total of all amounts each of which is the value for the year of an equity property of the insurer that

(I) the insurer's weighted Canadian liabilities as at the end of the year

is of

(II) the insurer's weighted total liabilities as at the end of year, and

(B) 8 per cent of the insurer's mean Canadian investment fund for the year,

(ii) where the insurer does not make an election referred to in paragraph (b) of the definition "attributed surplus" for the year, 8 per cent of the insurer's mean Canadian investment fund for the year,

(iii) 1/4 of the amount, if any, by which

(A) the insurer's mean Canadian reserve liabilities for the year (determined on the assumption that the only insurance business carried on in Canada by the insurer was a property and casualty insurance business)

exceeds

(B) 1/2 of the total of its deferred acquisition expenses and premiums receivable as at the end of the year and its deferred acquisition expenses and premiums receivable as at the end of its preceding taxation year to the extent that those amounts were included in the insurer's Canadian reserve liabilities for the year or the preceding year, as the case may be, (determined on the assumption that the only insurance business carried on in Canada by the insurer was a property and casualty insurance business), and

(iv) 1/4 of the insurer's property and casualty surplus for the year.

Technical Notes: Subsection 2400(4) of the existing Regulations provides that an insurer cannot designate for a taxation year Canadian equity property in excess of its equity limit for the year. The limit is necessary to ensure that an insurer cannot fill its Canadian investment fund with Canadian equity property on which it receives tax-free dividend income. The existing definition of "equity limit for the year", found in subsection 2405(3) of the Regulations, provides a different limit for resident life insurers, non-resident non-life insurers and non-resident life insurers.

Paragraph (a) of the definition provides that the equity limit for resident life insurers is the greater of

- the total value for the year of all the insurer's equity property multiplied by the ratio of the insurer's mean Canadian reserve liabilities (less policy loans and outstanding premiums in respect of Canadian policies) to the insurer's mean total reserve liabilities (less all policy loans and outstanding premiums), and
- 8% of the insurer's Canadian investment fund for the year.

Paragraph (a) is amended by removing the 8% limit and replacing the ratio of mean Canadian reserve liabilities to mean total reserve liabilities with the ratio of weighted Canadian liabilities to weighted total liabilities (For further details see the new definitions of "weighted Canadian liabilities" and "weighted total liabilities" below.)

Paragraph (b) of the definition currently provides that a non-resident, non-life insurer's equity limit is 1/4 of the total of

- the amount by which its mean Canadian reserve liabilities for the year exceeds its average deferred acquisition expenses and premiums receivable for the year as determined for the purposes of the relevant authority, and
- its property and casualty surplus for the year.

The definition of "property and casualty surplus" is currently set out in subsection 2405(3) and is reproduced in amended subsection 2400(1).

Paragraph (b) is amended by reorganizing subparagraph (b)(i) into 2 separate clauses and removing the reference to "relevant authority", which is to be repealed.

Paragraph (c) of the definition currently provides that a non-resident life insurer's equity limit is the total of

- its life equity limit for the year, and
- the amount that would be determined under paragraph (b) if the insurer carried on only a property and casualty business in Canada.

An insurer's "life equity limit" for a year is defined in subsection 2405(3) as one of the following:

- where the insurer elects under the definition "life surplus factor" for the year, the amount that would have been its equity limit if the insurer were a life insurer resident in Canada,
- where the insurer does not make an election but had made one in one of the four preceding taxation years, the amount determined under that preceding election, or
- in any other case, 8% of the insurer's Canadian investment fund for the year.

Paragraph (c) is amended as a consequence of the repeal of the definitions "life equity limit" and "life surplus factor", and the addition of the new definitions "mean Canadian investment fund", "weighted Canadian liabilities" and "weighted total liabilities". Amended paragraph (c) provides that a non-resident life insurer's equity limit is the total of

- where the insurer elects under paragraph (b) of the amended definition "attributed surplus", the greater of (a) 8% of the insurer's mean Canadian investment fund for the year; and (b) the total value for the year of all the insurer's equity property multiplied by the ratio weighted Canadian liabilities to weighted total liabilities;
- where the insurer does not make the above election, 8% of the insurer's mean Canadian investment fund for the year;
- 1/4 of the insurer's property and casualty surplus for the year; and
- 1/4 of the insurer's mean Canadian reserve liabilities in respect of its property and casualty insurance business (less its deferred acquisition expenses and premiums receivable in respect of that business for the current and preceding year).

"equity property" of a person or partnership (in this definition referred to as the "taxpayer") for a taxation year or fiscal period means property of the taxpayer that is

(a) a share of the capital stock of, or an income bond, income debenture, small business development bond or small business bond issued by, a person (other than a corporation affiliated with the taxpayer) or partnership; or

(b) that proportion of shares owned by the taxpayer of the capital stock of a corporation affiliated with the taxpayer or of the taxpayer's interest in a partnership or trust that

(i) the total value for the year or period of equity property owned by the corporation, partnership or trust, as the case may be,

is of

(ii) the total value for the year or period of all property owned by the corporation, partnership or trust, as the case may be.

Technical Notes: The "equity property" of an insurer is currently defined in subsection 2405(3) of the Regulations as

- a share, income bond or debenture, small business development bond or small business bond issued by a person (other than a designated corporation) or partnership; or
- the shares of a designated corporation or an interest in a partnership or trust multiplied by the ratio of the value of the equity property owned by the designated corporation, partnership or trust to the value of all the property owned by the designated corporation, partnership or trust.

The definition of "equity property" is amended (and relocated to subsection 2400(1)) to ensure that it operates properly where the equities are held through multiple tiers of corporations, partnerships or trusts. The definition is also amended by replacing the reference to the designated corporation, which has been repealed, with a reference to affiliated corporation (as defined in section 251.1 of the Act).

"financial institution" means a corporation that is

(a) a corporation described in any of paragraphs (a) to (e) of the definition "restricted financial institution" in subsection 248(1) of the Act; or

(b) a corporation all or substantially all of the value for a taxation year of the assets of which is attributable to shares or indebtedness of one or more financial institutions.

Technical Notes: The new definition of "financial institution" provides that a corporation is a financial institution if it is a corporation described in any of paragraphs (a) to (e) of the definition of "restricted financial institution" (as defined in subsection 248(1) of the Act) or a corporation all or substantially all of the value of which is attributable to assets that are shares or debt of one or more financial institutions.

"financial institution allowance" of an insurer for a taxation year means the amount equal to that proportion of

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount that would be the value for the year of a property of the insurer that is a share of the capital stock of, or a debt owing to the insurer by, a corporation if the insurer owned the property only during those days in the year during which the insurer owned the property and the corporation was a financial institution affiliated with the insurer

that

(b) the insurer's weighted Canadian liabilities as at the end of the year

is of

(c) the insurer's weighted total liabilities as at the end of the year.

Technical Notes: The amount of an insurer's "financial institution allowance" is deducted, on a proportionate basis, from its Canadian reserve liabilities and its general liabilities in computing its Canadian investment fund. In general terms, an insurer's financial institution allowance is equal to the total value for the year of shares of, or debts owing to the insurer by, financial institutions affiliated with the insurer.

"foreign policy loan" means an amount advanced by an insurer to a policyholder in accordance with the terms and conditions of a life insurance policy, other than a life insurance policy in Canada.

Technical Notes: The definition of "foreign policy loan" means an amount advanced to a policy holder under a life insurance policy that is not a life insurance policy in Canada. The expression life insurance policy in Canada" is defined in subsection 138(12) of the Act.

"gross Canadian life investment income" of a life insurer for a taxation year means the amount, if any, by which the total of all amounts each of which is

(a) the insurer's gross investment revenue for the year, to the extent that the revenue is from Canadian business property of the insurer for the year in respect of the insurer's life insurance business,

(b) the amount included in computing the insurer's income for the year under paragraph 138(9)(b) of the Act,

(c) the portion of the amount deducted under paragraph 20(1)(l) of the Act in computing the insurer's income for its preceding taxation year that was in respect of Canadian business property of the insurer for that year in respect of the insurer's life insurance business,

(d) the amount included under section 142.4 of the Act in computing the insurer's income for the year in respect of a property disposed of by the insurer that was, in the taxation year of disposition, a Canadian business property of the insurer for that year in respect of the insurer's life insurance business,

(e) the insurer's gain for the year from the disposition of a Canadian business property of the insurer for the year in respect of the insurer's life insurance business, other than a capital property or a property in respect of which section 142.4 of the Act applies, or

(f) the insurer's taxable capital gain for the year from the disposition of a Canadian business property of the insurer for the year in respect of the insurer's life insurance business

exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is

(g) the portion of the amount deducted under paragraph 20(1)(l) of the Act in computing the insurer's income for the year that is in respect of debt obligations that are Canadian business property of the insurer for the year in respect of the insurer's life insurance business,

(h) the amount deductible under section 142.4 of the Act in computing the insurer's income for the year in respect of a property disposed of by the insurer that was, in the taxation year of disposition, a Canadian business property of the insurer for that year in respect of the insurer's life insurance business,

(i) the insurer's loss for the year from the disposition of a Canadian business property of the insurer for the year in respect of the insurer's life insurance business, other than a capital property or a property in respect of which section 142.4 of the Act applies, or

(j) the insurer's allowable capital loss for the year from the disposition of a Canadian business property of the insurer for the year in respect of the insurer's life insurance business.

Technical Notes: The expression "gross Canadian life investment income" is defined for the purpose of section 2402, which contains the rules for determining an insurer's income for a year from carrying on its participating life insurance business in Canada. The changes to this definition merely update some of the wording.

"investment property" of an insurer for a taxation year means non-segregated property that is

(a) property acquired by the insurer for the purpose of earning gross investment revenue in the year, other than property that is

(i) property, a portion of which is investment property because of paragraph (b),

(ii) a share of the capital stock of, or a debt owing to the insurer by, a corporation affiliated with the insurer, or

(iii) an interest in a partnership or trust;

(b) the portion, if any, of property of the insurer that is land, depreciable property or property that would have been depreciable property if it had been situated in Canada and used or held by it in the year in the course of carrying on an insurance business in Canada, that

(i) the use made of the property in the year for the purpose of earning gross investment revenue therefrom

is of

(ii) the whole use made of the property in the year;

(c) where the insurer is a life insurer, property described in any of paragraphs 138(4.4)(a) to (d) of the Act; or

(d) property of the insurer that is

(i) a share of the capital stock of, or a debt owing to the insurer by, a corporation (other than a financial institution) affiliated with the insurer, or

(ii) an interest in a partnership or trust

if the total value for the year of all investment property of the corporation, partnership or trust, as the case may be, is not less than 75 per cent of the total value for the year of all its property, and for the purpose of this paragraph (other than for the purpose of determining whether it is a financial institution) every corporation, partnership and trust is deemed to be an insurer.

Technical Notes: Resident life insurers and non-resident insurers are required to include in their income from carrying on an insurance business in Canada the gross investment revenue from investment property that the insurer designates as being used in that business. An insurer must designate investment property equal to its mean Canadian investment fund for the taxation year. (For further information on the Canadian investment fund see the commentary to the amended definition of Canadian investment fund and amended subsection 2401 and amended section 2412.)

Only non-segregated property can be considered investment property. Non-segregated property is defined under subsection 138(12) of the Act as property not held in respect of a segregated fund. Such funds are taxed as trusts which are separate from the other activities of the insurer that administers the fund.

Paragraphs (a) to (d) of the definition of "investment property" set out the types of property that are considered to be investment property. Paragraph (a) currently refers to property acquired by the insurer for the purpose of earning gross investment revenue except property that is a portion of property which is treated as investment property by reason of paragraph (b), a share or debt of a designated corporation, or an interest in a partnership or trust. The structure of paragraph (a) is reorganized and the reference to designated corporation is replaced with a reference to a corporation affiliated (within the meaning assigned by section 251.1 of the Act) with an insurer.

Paragraph (b) currently includes as investment the portion of land or depreciable property of an insurer that is factually used or held by the insurer in the course of carrying on an insurance business in Canada. Only the portion of the property which is used in the year in for the purpose of earning gross investment revenue is considered to be investment property. The amendment to the paragraph attempts to simplify the wording and the structure of paragraph (b).

Existing paragraph (c) captures as investment property land or depreciable property that is vacant, held for resale or development in a year and is not used for the purpose of earning gross investment revenue in the year. New paragraph (c) provides that where an insurer is a life insurer, property described in paragraphs 138(4.4)(a) to (d) of the Act will be treated as investment property. Amended subsection 138(4.4) of the Act includes a prescribed amount in computing a life insurer's income in respect of vacant real property or real property under development. The amendment to paragraph (c) of the definition of "investment property" is intended to ensure that non-income producing real property will only be considered investment property when a prescribed amount of income is considered to have been earned on the property.

Paragraph (d) of the current definition of "investment property" provides that a share or debt of a designated corporation, an interest in a partnership or trust is investment property if

- 75% or more of the corporation's, partnership's or trust's property is investment property; and
- 90% or more of the gross revenue of the corporation, partnership or trust is derived from investment property.

Paragraph (d) is amended in three ways. First, the term designated corporation, which is repealed, is replaced with the expression corporation (other than a financial institution) affiliated with the insurer. For the purpose of determining whether a corporation is affiliated section 251.1 of the Act will apply. Second, the 90% gross revenue test in subparagraph (d)(v) has been deleted. Finally, the post-amble to paragraph (d) is amended so that every corporation, partnership and trust is deemed to be an insurer for the purpose of applying the paragraph. This last change is intended to ensure that the definitions in Regulation 2400 will apply to the corporation, partnership or trust which owns the investment property and that paragraph (d) will work even if the property is held in a multi-tier corporate, partnership or trust structure.

"mean Canadian investment fund" of an insurer has the meaning assigned by section 2412.

Technical Notes: The new definition "mean Canadian investment fund" is relevant for the purpose of determining what amount of investment property an insurer must designate in respect of its Canadian insurance businesses. The expression has the meaning assigned by section 2412. (For further details see the commentary on amended section 2412, below.)

"mean Canadian outstanding premiums" of an insurer for a taxation year means 1/2 of the total of

(a) its Canadian outstanding premiums as at the end of the year; and

(b) its Canadian outstanding premiums as at the end of its preceding taxation year.

Technical Notes: The "mean Canadian outstanding premiums" of an insurer for a taxation year means the average of the insurer's Canadian outstanding premiums as at the end of the current taxation year and the immediately preceding taxation year.

"mean Canadian reserve liabilities" of an insurer for a taxation year means 1/2 of the total of

(a) its Canadian reserve liabilities as at the end of the year; and

(b) its Canadian reserve liabilities as at the end of its preceding taxation year.

Technical Notes: The expression "mean Canadian reserve liabilities" for a taxation year means the average of an insurer's Canadian reserve liabilities at the end of the year and at the end of it preceding taxation year. The definition is not amended in substance, but the wording is up-dated. The definition is used in determining a non-resident's equity limit for the year and in the new designation of property rules in amended section 2401.

"mean maximum tax actuarial reserve" in respect of a particular class of life insurance policies of an insurer for a taxation year means 1/2 of the total of

(a) its maximum tax actuarial reserve for that class of policies for the year; and

(b) its maximum tax actuarial reserve for that class of policies for its preceding taxation year.

Technical Notes: The definition of "mean maximum tax actuarial reserve" for a taxation year means the average of an insurer's maximum tax actuarial reserve for the year and for the preceding year. The definition is not substantively amended, but the wording is up-dated. The definition is relevant in calculating an insurer's income from a participating life insurance business under section 2402.

"mean policy loans" of an insurer for a taxation year means 1/2 of the total of

(a) its policy loans as at the end of the year; and

(b) its policy loans as at the end of its preceding taxation year.

Technical Notes: The definition of "mean policy loans" of an insurer for a taxation year means the average of an insurer's policy loans at the end of the year and at the end of the preceding year. The definition is not substantively amended, but the wording is up-dated. The definition is used in determining an insurer's attributed surplus, Canadian investment fund and its equity limit.

"outstanding premiums" of an insurer with respect to an insurance policy at any time means premiums due to the insurer under the policy at that time but unpaid.

Technical Notes: The "outstanding premiums" of an insurer with respect to an insurance policy at a particular time means the premiums due to the insurer under the policy at that time but unpaid.

"property and casualty surplus" of an insurer for a taxation year means the total of

(a) 7 1/2 per cent of the total of

(i) its unearned premium reserve as at the end of the year,

(ii) its unearned premium reserve as at the end of its preceding taxation year,

(iii) its provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses as at the end of the year, and

(iv) its provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses as at the end of its preceding taxation year, in respect of its property and casualty insurance business; and

(b) 1/2 of the total of

(i) its investment valuation reserve as at the end of the year, and

(ii) its investment valuation reserve as at the end of its preceding taxation year, in respect of its property and casualty insurance business.

Technical Notes: An insurer's "property and casualty surplus" is equal to the total of 7 1/2% of the average of the insurer's unearned premium reserve at the end of the year and at the end of its preceding year; 7 1/2% of its average provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses at the end of the year and the end of its preceding year; and its average investment valuation reserve at the end of the year and its preceding year. The definition of "property and casualty surplus" is relevant only in respect of a non-resident's property and casualty insurance business and is used in determining a non-resident's Canadian investment fund and equity limit for the year. The definition is not substantively amended, but the structure and wording are up-dated.

"segregated fund" has the meaning assigned by subsection 138.1(1) of the Act.

"segregated fund policies" has the meaning assigned by subsection 138.1(1) of the Act.

Technical Notes: The expressions segregated fund and segregated fund policies have the meaning assigned by subsection 138.1(1) of the Act. The existing definition defines both expressions. Under the amended Regulations, each expression is defined separately. The definition of "segregated fund policies" is relevant only for the 1977 Carryforward Deduction set out in section 2408.

"value" for a taxation year of a property of a person or partnership (in this definition referred to as the "owner") means

(a) in the case of a property that is a mortgage, hypothec or an agreement of sale or an investment property that is a deposit balance, the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount obtained when the gross investment revenue for the year from the property is divided by the average rate of interest earned by the owner (expressed as an annual rate) on the amortized cost of the property during the year

(ii) the amount obtained when the interest payable for the year on debt incurred for the purpose of acquiring the property is divided by the average rate of interest payable by the owner (expressed as an annual rate) on the debt for the year;

(b) in the case of a property (other than a property referred to in paragraph (a)) that was not owned by the owner throughout the year, the amount, if any, by which

(i) that proportion of

(A) the carrying value of the property as at the end of the preceding taxation year, where the property was owned by the owner at that time,

(B) the carrying value of the property as at the end of the year, where the property was owned by the owner at that time and not at the end of the preceding taxation year, and

(C) in any other case, the cost of the property to the owner when it was acquired

that

(D) the number of days, at the end of which the owner owned the property, that are in the year

is of

(E) the number of days in the year

exceeds

(ii) the amount obtained when the interest payable for the year on debt assumed or incurred for the purpose of acquiring the property is divided by the average rate of interest payable by the owner (expressed as an annual rate) on the debt for the year; and

(c) in the case of any other property, the amount, if any, by which

(i) 1/2 of the total of

(A) the carrying value of the property as at the end of the year, and

(B) the carrying value of the property as at the end of the preceding taxation year

exceeds

(ii) the amount obtained when the interest payable for the year on debt assumed or incurred for the purpose of acquiring the property is divided by the average rate of interest payable by the owner (expressed as an annual rate) on the debt for the year.

Technical Notes: The definition "value for the year" is replaced by the definition of "value".

Paragraph (a) of the definition of "value" currently provides that the value for a taxation year of a mortgage, hypothec, agreement of sale or an investment property that is a bank deposit is the gross investment revenue for the year earned on the property divided by the average interest rate earned on the property during the year. Paragraph (a) is amended by adding a reference to the new definition "deposit balance" and simplifying the wording by removing the references to interest expressed as a fraction.

Paragraph (b) of the existing definition applies to property, other than property described in paragraph (a), that is not owned throughout a taxation year. Where the property was owned at the end of the preceding taxation year, subparagraph (b)(i) provides that its value is its valuation at the end of the preceding taxation year prorated by the number of days the property was owned in the current taxation year. A similar rule in subparagraph (b)(ii) applies where the property is acquired during the taxation year. Depending on the type of property in question, its valuation under the existing Regulations may be based on its cost, undepreciated capital cost, or book value for purposes of the insurer's regulatory authority. Paragraph (b) is amended consequential on the repeal of the definition "valuation", and as amended provides that the value of property is

- where the property is owned at the end of the preceding taxation year, its carrying value at that year-end;
- where the property is owned at the end of the current taxation year, its value, its carrying value at that year-end; and
- in any case where the property was acquired during the year and was not owned at the end of the year, its cost when it was acquired.

To determine the value of a property to an insurer, its carrying value or cost is pro-rated for the number of days that the property is owned by the insurer in the year, and reduced by the average amount of debt incurred by the insurer to acquire the property. Under amended subsection 2400(2) the carrying value of a property is its value as accepted on the insurer's balance sheet by the Superintendent of Financial Institutions or a province's superintendent of insurance if the insurer is provincially incorporated. In general, where the property is not owned by someone other than an insurer, its carrying value is equal to the value that is reflected in the owner's year-end balance sheet. (For more details see the commentary to amended subsection 2400(2).)

Paragraph (c) of the existing definition "value for the year" provides that the value for a taxation year of a property owned throughout the year is equal to the average of its valuation at the end of the taxation year and its valuation at the end of its preceding taxation year. As a consequence of the repeal of the definition of "valuation", paragraph (c) of the definition "value" refers to the carrying value of a property. Amended paragraph (c) also requires that in computing a property's value that the property's average carrying value is reduced by the average amount of debt incurred to acquire the property.

"weighted Canadian liabilities" of an insurer as at the end of a taxation year means the total of

(a) 3 times the amount, if any, by which the total of all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of an insurance business carried on by the insurer in Canada that is reported as a liability (other than a liability in respect of an amount payable out of a segregated fund) of the insurer in respect of a life insurance policy in Canada (other than an annuity) or an accident and sickness insurance policy as at the end of the year exceeds its policy loans as at the end of the year, and

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of an insurance business carried on by the insurer in Canada that is reported as a liability of the insurer as at the end of the year other than

(i) an amount to the extent that it is reported as a liability in respect of an insurance policy (other than an annuity) included in paragraph (a),

(ii) a liability in respect of an amount payable out of a segregated fund, or

(iii) a debt incurred or assumed to acquire a property of the insurer.

Technical Notes: The new definition "weighted Canadian liabilities" is relevant for the purposes of the amended definitions "Canadian investment fund" and "equity limit". The definition of "weighted Canadian liabilities" is also important for determining an insurer's daily cash-flow adjustment under amended subsection 2412(4).

An insurer's weighted Canadian liabilities is the total of its weighted Canadian life insurance and accident and sickness insurance policy liabilities (to the extent they exceed its policy loans) and its other non-weighted Canadian insurance liabilities (excluding those in respect of a segregated fund or a debt incurred or assumed to acquire a particular property). Weighting life and accident and sickness insurance policy liabilities by a factor of 3 recognizes the fact that an insurer must maintain more reserves in respect of such policies than in respect of other types of insurance products.

"weighted total liabilities" of an insurer as at the end of a taxation year means the total of

(a) 3 times the amount, if any, by which the total of all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of an insurance business carried on by the insurer that is reported as a liability (other than a liability in respect of an amount payable out of a segregated fund) of the insurer in respect of a life insurance policy (other than an annuity) or an accident and sickness insurance policy exceeds the total of its policy loans and foreign policy loans as at the end of the year; and

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of an insurance business carried on by the insurer that is reported as a liability of the insurer as at the end of the year other than

(i) an amount to the extent it is reported as a liability of the insurer in respect of an insurance policy (other than an annuity) included in paragraph (a),

(ii) a liability in respect of an amount payable out of a segregated fund, or

(iii) a debt incurred or assumed to acquire a property of the insurer.

Technical Notes: The new definition "weighted Canadian liabilities" is relevant for the purposes of the amended definitions "Canadian investment fund" and "equity limit". The definition of "weighted Canadian liabilities" is also important for determining an insurer's daily cash-flow adjustment under amended subsection 2412(4).

An insurers weighted total liabilities is similar to its weighted Canadian liabilities except that the former includes an insurer's world-wide insurance liabilities rather than only its Canadian insurance liabilities. (For further details see the above commentary to the definition of "weighted Canadian liabilities".)

(2) Determining values and amounts — For the purposes of determining the carrying value of a taxpayer's property or any other amount under this Part in respect of a taxation year of the taxpayer, except as otherwise provided in this Part,

(a) where the taxpayer is an insurer, the amounts reflected in the taxpayer's non-consolidated balance sheet as at the end of the year accepted (or, if that non-consolidated balance sheet was not prepared, the taxpayer's balance sheet as at the end of the year that would have been accepted) by the Superintendent of Financial Institutions, in the case of an insurer that is required under the Insurance Companies Act to report to the Superintendent, or by the superintendent of insurance or other similar officer or authority of the province under the laws of which the corporation is incorporated or otherwise formed, in the case of an insurer that is required by law to report to that officer or authority, and

(b) in any other case, the amounts that would be reflected in the taxpayer's balance sheet as at the end of the year if that balance sheet were prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles shall be used.

Technical Notes: Existing subsection 2400(2) provides rules relating to the designation of property. These rules are modified and moved to amended section 2401.

For the purposes of Part XXIV of the Regulations, amended subsection 2400(2) provides rules for determining the carrying value of any property owned by a taxpayer and any other amount in respect of a taxpayer. Where the taxpayer is an insurer, paragraph 2400(2)(a) provides that the carrying value or other amount is the amount reflected on the insurer's year-end balance sheet as accepted by the Superintendent of Financial Institutions or, where the insurer is incorporated under province's law, the balance sheet accepted by that province's superintendent of insurance. Where the taxpayer is not an insurer, paragraph 2400(2)(b) provides that the carrying value or other amount is the amount that would be reflected in the taxpayer's year-end balance sheet if the balance sheet was prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles.

(3) Liabilities — A reference in this Part to an amount reported as a liability of a taxpayer as at the end of a taxation year means an amount that is reported as a liability in the taxpayer's non-consolidated balance sheet as at the end of the year accepted (or, if that non-consolidated balance sheet was not prepared, the taxpayer's balance sheet as at the end of the year that would have been accepted) by the Superintendent of Financial Institutions, in the case of an insurer that is required under the Insurance Companies Act to report to the Superintendent, or by the superintendent of insurance or other similar officer or authority of the province under the laws of which the corporation is incorporated or otherwise formed, in the case of an insurer that is required by law to report to that officer or authority.

Technical Notes: Existing subsection 2400(3) provides rules that apply when designated property is exchanged for other property under various rollover transactions. An amended version of this rule is contained in amended subsection 2401(5).

Amended subsection 2400(3) provides that any reference in Part XXIV of the Regulations to an amount reported as a liability of an insurer is to be construed as a reference to the amount that is reported as a liability in the taxpayer's year-end balance sheet accepted by the Superintendent of Financial Institutions or, where the taxpayer is incorporated under a province's law, the amount reported as a liability on the year-end balance sheet accepted by that province's superintendent of insurance or similar officer.

(4) Definitions — For the purposes of subsection 138(14) of the Act, the expressions "Canadian investment fund for a taxation year", "specified Canadian assets" and "value for the taxation year" have the meanings prescribed therefor by subsection 2404(1) as it read in its application to the 1977 taxation year.

Technical Notes: Existing subsection 2400(4) sets out the restriction on the ability of insurers to designate Canadian equity property up to the insurer's equity limit. This equity limit rule has been moved as part of these changes to subsection 2401(4).

Amended subsection 2400(4) reproduces existing subsection 2405(2) which applies for the purposes of subsection 138(14) of the Act. Subsection 138(14) is a transitional rule which applies for the purposes of determining an insurer's tax basis or amortized cost of a debt obligation under subsection 138(13) of the Act. For the purposes of subsection 138(14) the expressions "Canadian investment fund for a taxation year", "specified Canadian assets" and "value for the taxation year" have the meanings set out in subsection 2404(1) of the Regulations as it read in its application to the 1977 taxation year.

2401. (1) Designated insurance property — For the purposes of section 138 of the Act, "designated insurance property" of an insurer for a taxation year means property that is designated by the insurer under this section for the year, in its return of income under Part I of the Act for the year, in respect of an insurance business carried on in Canada.

Technical Notes: Existing section 2401 sets out the rules for a non-resident to file an election to calculate its life surplus factor in accordance with the rules applicable to resident life insurers. The rules in existing section 2401 are deleted as a consequence of the repeal of the definition of "life surplus factor" and the amendments to the definition of "attributed surplus". In effect, the amended definition of "attributed surplus" states that an election to use the resident life insurer rules must be made in the form and manner prescribed by the Department of National Revenue.

Amended section 2401 replaces existing section 2400 which sets out the rules that apply for the type, amount, and nature of investment property that must be designated by an insurer in respect of a taxation year.

Amended subsection 2401(1) provides that for the purposes of section 138 of the Act, designated insurance property of an insurer is property that is designated by the insurer in its Part I income tax return and in accordance with section 2401.

(2) Designation rules — For the purposes of subsection (1),

(a) the insurer shall designate investment property owned by it at any time in the year with a total value for the year equal to the amount, if any, by which the insurer's mean Canadian reserve liabilities for the year in respect of its life insurance business in Canada exceeds the insurer's mean Canadian outstanding premiums and mean policy loans for the year (to the extent that the amount of the mean policy loans was not otherwise deducted in computing the insurer's Canadian reserve liabilities for the year);

(b) the insurer shall designate investment property owned by it at any time in the year with a total value for the year equal to the insurer's mean Canadian reserve liabilities for the year in respect of its accident and sickness insurance business in Canada;

(c) the insurer shall designate in respect of its insurance business in Canada (other than a life insurance business or an accident and sickness insurance business) investment property owned by it at any time in the year with a total value for the year equal to the amount, if any, by which

(i) the insurer's mean Canadian reserve liabilities for the year in respect of the business

exceeds

(ii) 1/2 of the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, at the end of the year or at the end of its preceding taxation year, of a deferred acquisition expense or a premium receivable (to the extent included in the insurer's Canadian reserve liabilities) of the insurer in respect of the business;

(d) where

(i) the insurer's mean Canadian investment fund for the year

exceeds

(ii) the total value for the year of all property required to be designated by the insurer under paragraph (a), (b) or (c)

the insurer shall designate in respect of a particular insurance business it carries on in Canada investment property owned by it at any time in the year with a total value for the year equal to that excess;

(e) a particular property can only be designated once for the year;

(f) the insurer may designate for a taxation year a portion of a particular property where the designation of the entire property would result in a designation of property with a total value for the year exceeding that required to be designated by the insurer under paragraphs (a) to (d); and

(g) where in the opinion of the Minister the insurer has failed to designate property for the year in accordance with this section,

(i) subject to subparagraph (ii), any designation of property by the insurer for the year that is selected by the Minister is deemed not to have been made, and

(ii) property owned by the insurer at any time in the year may be designated by the Minister in accordance with this subsection and subsections (3) and (4), and the property so designated is deemed to have been designated by the insurer for the year.

Technical Notes: Amended subsection 2401(2) replaces the designation rules in existing subsection 2400(1). Amended subsection 2401(2) sets out rules that an insurer is required to follow in designating investment property for a taxation year in respect of its insurance businesses carried on in Canada in the year.

Paragraph 2401(2)(a) provides that an insurer shall designate in respect of its Canadian life insurance business, investment property with a total value (as defined in amended subsection 2400(1)) equal to the amount by which the insurer's mean Canadian reserve liabilities (as defined in amended subsection 2400(1)) exceeds its mean policy loans and mean Canadian outstanding premiums (as defined in amended subsection 2400(1)) in respect of that business. Paragraph 2401(2)(b) provides a similar rule for an insurer's accident and sickness insurance business carried on in Canada.

Paragraph 2401(2)(c) provides that an insurer shall designate in respect of its non-life and non-accident and sickness insurance business, investment property with a total value equal to the amount by which the insurer's mean Canadian reserve liabilities in respect of that business exceeds the insurer's average deferred acquisition expenses or premiums receivable in respect of that business.

Where the insurer's mean Canadian investment fund for a year exceeds the value of the property that is designated in accordance with paragraphs 2401(2)(a) to (c), the insurer is required to designate additional investment property so that the total value of the designated property equals that mean Canadian investment fund. The insurer must designate the additional investment property in respect of a particular Canadian insurance business.

Paragraph 2401(2)(e) is similar to existing paragraph 2400(2)(b) and prohibits an insurer from designating the same property twice.

Paragraph 2401(2)(f) is similar to existing subsection 2400(7) and provides that an insurer may designate a portion of a particular property where a designation of the entire property would result in exceeding the value of the property required to be designated under amended paragraphs 2401(2)(a) to (d).

Paragraph 2401(2)(g) permits the Minister of National Revenue to determine whether an insurer has made appropriate designations and to designate property where the insurer has not followed the designation rules. Where the Minister designates property, the property is considered to have been designated by the insurer. The amended paragraph refines the powers which the Minister currently has under existing paragraph 2400(1)(f).

(3) Order of property — For the purpose of subsection (2), investment property of an insurer shall be designated for a taxation year in respect of the insurer's insurance businesses in Canada in the following order:

(a) Canadian investment property owned by the insurer at the beginning of the year that was designated insurance property of the insurer for its preceding taxation year except that such property shall be designated in the following order:

(i) real and depreciable property,

(ii) mortgages, hypothecs, agreements of sale and other forms of indebtedness in respect of real property situated in Canada or depreciable property situated in Canada or depreciable property leased to a person resident in Canada for use inside and outside of Canada, and

(iii) other property;

(b) property (other than Canadian investment property) owned by the insurer at the beginning of the year that was designated insurance property of the insurer for its preceding taxation year;

(c) Canadian investment property (other than property included in paragraph (a)) in the order set out in subparagraphs (a)(i) to (iii); and

(d) other property.

Technical Notes: Amended subsection 2401(3) replaces the existing rule in subsection 2400(6). Amended subsection 2401(3) mandates that property be designated by an insurer in a particular order. Before designating any other property, amended paragraph 2401(3)(a) requires an insurer to designate Canadian investment property that was designated insurance property in the preceding taxation year in the following order:

- real and depreciable property;
- mortgages, hypothecs, agreements of sale or other debts in respect of real or depreciable property; and
- other Canadian investment property.

Next, an insurer must designate previously designated insurance property that is not Canadian investment property. After that, the insurer must designate Canadian investment property that was not designated in the preceding taxation year in the order set out in amended paragraph 2401(3)(a). Finally, an insurer may designate its other (non-Canadian) investment property.

Canadian investment property is designated before other investment property on the basis that Canadian investment property can reasonably be expected to have a closer relationship to an insurer's Canadian insurance businesses than its foreign insurance businesses.

(4) Equity limit for the year — Notwithstanding subsections (2) and (3),

(a) the total value for the year of Canadian equity property that may be designated in respect of an insurer's insurance businesses for a taxation year shall not exceed the insurer's equity limit for the year; and

(b) the insurer may designate for a taxation year a portion of a particular Canadian equity property where the designation of the entire property would result in a designation of Canadian equity property with a total value for the year exceeding that allowed to be designated under paragraph (a).

Technical Notes: Amended subsection 2401(4) replaces the existing equity limit rule in existing subsection 2400(4).

Amended paragraph 2401(4)(a) provides that an insurer cannot designate Canadian equity property with a total value for the year which exceeds the insurer's equity limit for the year. The amended definitions of "Canadian equity property" and "equity limit" are contained in amended subsection 2400(1).

Amended paragraph 2401(4)(b) adds a rule which provides that an insurer may designate a portion of a Canadian equity property where a designation of the entire property would result in exceeding the insurer's equity limit for the year.

(5) Exchanged property — For the purposes of subsection (3) and this subsection, property acquired by an insurer in a particular taxation year by reason of

(a) a transaction described in section 51, 51.1, 85.1 or 86 of the Act,

(b) a transaction in respect of which an election was made under subsection 85(1) or (2) of the Act,

(c) an amalgamation of two or more corporations (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1) of the Act), or

(d) a winding-up of a corporation to which subsection 88(1) of the Act applied, as consideration for or in exchange for property of the insurer that was designated insurance property of the insurer in respect of a particular insurance business for its preceding taxation year is deemed to be designated insurance property in respect of the particular business of the insurer for that preceding year and to have been owned by the insurer at the beginning of the particular year.

Technical Notes: Amended subsection 2401(5) is very similar to the exchanged property rule in existing subsection 2400(3). Both subsections provide that property acquired in exchange for designated insurance property under certain rollover transactions is considered to be designated insurance property. Amended subsection 2401(5) merely updates the wording that is used in existing subsection 2400(3).

(6) Non-investment property — Non-segregated property (other than investment property) owned by an insurer at any time in a taxation year that is used or held by the insurer in the year in the course of carrying on an insurance business in Canada is deemed to be designated insurance property of the insurer for the year in respect of the business.

Technical Notes: Amended subsection 2401(6) replaces existing paragraph 2400(1)(e), which stated that an insurer's non-investment property which was factually used or held in carrying on an insurance business in Canada is deemed to have been designated by the insurer. This designation rule is relevant for the definition of "outstanding debts to specified non-residents" in subsection 18(5), the definition of "eligible property" in subsection 85(1.1), subparagraph 115(1)(b)(ii.1), section 138, paragraph 219(4)(i.1), and subsection 219(5.1) of the Act. The property designated under this rule is not, however, relevant for determining an insurer's gross investment revenue because such property is not investment property.

Amended paragraph 2401(6) uses the new term designated insurance property and simplifies the wording of existing paragraph 2400(1)(e) by replacing the phrase "used by it in the year in, or held by it in the year in the course of carrying on an insurance business" with "property used or held by the insurer".

Application: The September 19, 1997 draft regulations (insurance companies), s. 2, will amend ss. 2400 and 2401 to read as above, applicable to 1997 et seq.

2402. Income from participating life insurance businesses — For the purposes of clause 138(3)(a)(iii)(B) of the Act and subparagraph 309(1)(e)(i), in computing a life insurer's income for a taxation year from its participating life insurance business carried on in Canada,

(a) there shall be included that proportion of the insurer's gross Canadian life investment income for the year that

(i) the aggregate of the insurer's mean maximum tax actuarial reserve for the year in respect of participating life insurance policies in Canada and the mean amount on deposit with the insurer for the year in respect of those policies

(ii) the aggregate of amounts, each of which is

(A) the insurer's mean maximum tax actuarial reserve for the year in respect of a class of life insurance policies in Canada, or

(B) the mean amount on deposit with the insurer for the year in respect of a class of policies described in clause (A);

Proposed Addition — Reg. 2402(a.1)

(a.1) there shall be included the amount determined by the formula

$$(A + B) \times \frac{C}{D}$$

where

A is the amount required by subsection 142.5(5) of the Act to be included in computing the insurer's income for the year,

B is the amount deemed by subsection 142.5(7) of the Act to be a taxable capital gain of the insurer for the year from the disposition of property,

C is the amount determined under subparagraph (a)(i) for the taxation year of the insurer that includes October 31, 1994, and

D is the amount determined under subparagraph (a)(ii) for the taxation year of the insurer that includes October 31, 1994;

Application: The June 1, 1995 draft regulations (securities held by financial institutions), subsec. 2(1), will add para. 2402(a.1), applicable to taxation years that end after October 30, 1994.

Technical Notes: Section 2402 contains rules for determining a life insurer's income for a year from carrying on its participating life insurance business in Canada. This income is relevant for subparagraph 138(3)(a)(iii) of the Act, which permits an insurer to deduct policy dividends to the extent that the total amount of dividends paid after its 1968 taxation year does not exceed the total amount of its participating business income after that year. Section 2402 is amended to reflect the new rules in the Act for the tax treatment of securities held by financial institutions, and to delete provisions which are no longer applicable.

New paragraph 2402(a.1) includes in an insurer's income from its participating business for a taxation year an amount in respect of the transition adjustments for the mark-to-market requirement for shares. The amount included is equal to a proportion of the transition amount for non-capital gains included in the insurer's income for the year by subsection 142.5(5) of the Act, plus the same proportion of the insurer's deemed taxable capital gain for the year under subsection 142.5(7). The ratio used for this purpose is equal to the ratio used under paragraph 2402(a) in determining the proportion of the insurer's gross Canadian life investment income for its taxation year that includes October 31, 1994 that is included in its income from its participating business. Paragraph 2402(a.1) applies to taxation years ending after October 30, 1994.

(b) there shall be included

(i) the amount deducted by the insurer under subparagraph 138(3)(a)(iv) of the Act in computing its income for the immediately preceding taxation year,

(ii) the insurer's maximum tax actuarial reserve for the immediately preceding taxation year in respect of participating life insurance policies in Canada,

(iii) the maximum amount deductible by the insurer under subparagraph 138(3)(a)(ii) of the Act in computing its income for the immediately preceding taxation year in respect of participating life insurance policies in Canada, and

(iv) that proportion of the amount included in income by the insurer for the year under section 12.3 that

(A) the amount determined under clause (f)(iii)(A) for its first taxation year that commences after June 17, 1987 and ends after 1987

is of

(B) the amount determined under clause (f)(iii)(B) for its first taxation year that commences after June 17, 1987 and ends after 1987;

Proposed Repeal — Reg. 2402(b)(iv)

Application: The June 1, 1995 draft regulations (securities held by financial institutions), subsec. 2(2), will repeal subpara. 2402(b)(iv), applicable to taxation years that begin after 1992.

Technical Notes: Subparagraph 2402(b)(iv) relates to a transitional provision introduced in conjunction with the 1987 tax reform measures. The transitional provision, and subparagraph 2402(b)(iv), last applied to taxation years that began in 1992. The subparagraph is repealed since it is no longer applicable.

(c) there shall not be included any amount in respect of the insurer's participating life insurance policies in Canada that was deducted under subparagraphs 138(3)(a)(i) or (ii) of the Act in computing its income for the immediately preceding taxation year;

(d) except as otherwise provided in paragraph (a), there shall not be included any amount as a reserve that was deducted under paragraph 20(1)(l) of the Act in computing the insurer's income for the immediately preceding taxation year;

(e) except as otherwise provided in paragraph (a), there shall not be included

(i) any amount that was included in income for the year by the insurer pursuant to 138(4)(b) or (c) of the Act, or

(ii) any amount that was included in computing the insurer's gains or taxable capital gains for the year from the disposition of property;

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 2402(e)

(e) except as provided in paragraph (a), there shall not be included any amount that was included in determining the insurer's gross Canadian life investment income for the year;

Application: The June 1, 1995 draft regulations (securities held by financial institutions), subsec. 2(3), will amend para. 2402(e) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after February 22, 1994.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 2402(e) provides that certain amounts are not included in computing an insurer's income from its participating life insurance business, except as provided by paragraph 2402(a). Paragraph 2402(e) is amended so that it applies with respect to all amounts included in determining an insurer's gross Canadian life investment income. This amendment is made for purposes of clarification, and because of the introduction of the new rules for the taxation of securities held by financial institutions. In this latter regard, subparagraph 2402(e)(i) refers to paragraphs 138(4)(b) and (c) of the Act, which are being repealed.

Proposed Addition — Reg. 2402(e.1), (e.2)

(e.1) except as provided in paragraph (a.1), there shall not be included the amounts referred to in the descriptions of A and B in that paragraph;

(e.2) where the year includes October 31, 1994, there shall be deducted the amount determined by the formula

$$(A + B) \times \frac{C}{D}$$

where

A is the amount deducted under subsection 142.5(4) of the Act in computing the insurer's income for the year,

B is the amount deemed by subsection 142.5(6) of the Act to be an allowable capital loss of the insurer for the year from the disposition of property,

C is the amount determined under subparagraph (a)(i) for the year, and

D is the amount determined under subparagraph (a)(ii) for the year;

Application: The June 1, 1995 draft regulations (securities held by financial institutions), subsec. 2(4), will add paras. 2402(e.1) and (e.2), applicable to taxation years that end after October 30, 1994.

Technical Notes: New paragraph 2402(e.1) provides that the transition amounts associated with the introduction of the mark-to-market requirement for shares are not to be included in an insurer's income from its participating life insurance business, except as provided by new paragraph 2402(a.1).

New paragraph 2402(e.2) provides for a deduction in computing an insurer's income from its participating business in respect of the transition deductions associated with the introduction of the mark-to-market requirement for shares. This deduction applies for the insurer's taxation year that includes October 31, 1994. The deducted amount is equal to a proportion of the transition deduction for non-capital gains claimed by the insurer under subsection 142.5(4) of the Act, plus the same proportion of the allowable capital loss claimed by the insurer under subsection 142.5(6). The ratio used for this purpose is equal to the ratio used under paragraph 2402(a) in determining the proportion of the insurer's gross Canadian life investment income for its taxation year that includes October 31, 1994 that is included in its income from its participating business.

(f) there shall be deducted

(i) the insurer's maximum tax actuarial reserve for the year in respect of participating life insurance policies in Canada,

(ii) the maximum amount deductible by the insurer under subparagraph 138(3)(a)(ii) of the Act in computing its income for the year in respect of participating life insurance policies in Canada, and

(iii) that proportion of the amount deducted from income by the insurer for the year under subsection 20(26) that

(A) the amount determined in respect of the insurer for the year under subparagraph (a)(i),

is of

(B) the amount determined in respect of the insurer for the year under subparagraph (a)(ii);

Proposed Repeal — Reg. 2402(f)(iii)

Application: The June 1, 1995 draft regulations (securities held by financial institutions), subsec. 2(5), will repeal subpara. 2402(f)(iii), applicable to taxation years that begin after 1992.

Technical Notes: Subparagraph 2402(f)(iii) relates to a transitional deduction provided in conjunction with the 1987 tax reform measures. The transitional deduction, and subparagraph 2402(f)(iii), applied to an insurer's first taxation year that began after June 17, 1987 and ended after 1987. The subparagraph is repealed since it is no longer applicable.

(g) no deduction shall be made in respect of any amount deductible under subparagraph 138(3)(a)(iii) or (iv) of the Act in computing the insurer's income for the year;

(h) except as as otherwise provided in paragraph (a), no deduction shall be made in respect of

(i) any amount deductible under paragraph 138(3)(b) or (d) of the Act in computing the insurer's income for the year,

(ii) any amount deductible as a reserve under paragraph 20(1)(l) of the Act in computing the insurer's income for the year, or

(iii) any amount included in computing the insurer's losses or allowable capital losses for the year from the disposition of property;

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 2402(h)

(h) except as provided in paragraph (a), no deduction shall be made in respect of

(i) any amount taken into account in determining the insurer's gross Canadian life investment income for the year, or

(ii) any amount deductible under paragraph 20(1)(l) of the Act in computing the insurer's income for the year;

Application: The June 1, 1995 draft regulations (securities held by financial institutions), subsec. 2(6), will amend para. 2402(h) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after February 22, 1994.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 2402(h) provides that certain amounts are not deducted in computing an insurer's income from its participating life insurance business, except as provided by paragraph 2402(a). Paragraph 2402(h) is amended so that it applies with respect to all amounts that are included in determining an insurer's gross Canadian life investment income. This amendment is made for purposes of clarification and because of the introduction of the new rules for the taxation of securities held by financial institutions. In this latter regard, subparagraph 2402(h)(i) refers to paragraphs 138(3)(b) and (d) of the Act, which are being repealed.

Proposed Addition — Reg. 2402(h.1)

(h.1) except as provided in paragraph (e.2), no deduction shall be made in respect of the amounts referred to in the descriptions of A and B in paragraph (e.2);

Application: The June 1, 1995 draft regulations (securities held by financial institutions), subsec. 2(7), will add para. 2402(h.1), applicable to taxation years that end after October 30, 1994.

Technical Notes: New paragraph 2402(h.1) provides that the transition amounts deducted by an insurer in connection with the introduction of the mark-to-market requirement for shares are not to be deducted in computing the insurer's income from its participating life insurance business, except as provided by new paragraph 2402(e.2).

(i) except as otherwise provided in paragraph (f), no deduction shall be made in respect of a reserve deductible under subparagraph 138(3)(a)(i) or (ii) of the Act in computing the insurer's income for the year; and

(j) except as otherwise provided in this section, the provisions of the Act relating to the computation of income from a source shall apply.

History: Subpara. 2402(b)(iii) added, and paras. (c) to (f), (h) and (i) substituted, by P.C. 1990-2002, s. 7, September 20, 1990, Canada Gazette, Part II, October 10, 1990, applicable in respect of taxation years beginning after June 17, 1987 and ending after 1987 except that in its application in respect of [an insurer's] first such taxation year,

(a) subpara. (b)(iii) shall be read as follows:

"(iii) the maximum amount of a reserve deductible by the insurer in computing its income for the immediately preceding taxation year in respect of unpaid claims under participating life insurance policies in Canada received by the insurer before the end of that year, and";

(b) para. (c) shall be read as follows:

"(c) there shall not be included any amount in respect of the insurer's participating life insurance policies in Canada that was deducted in computing its income for the immediately preceding taxation year under subparagraph 138(3)(a)(i) of the Act or as a reserve in respect of unpaid claims received before the end of that year;" and

(c) para. (d) shall read as it read for [the insurer's] last taxation year ending before 1988.

All that portion of s. 2402 preceding para. (a) substituted by P.C. 1983-3530, s. 7, November 17, 1983, Canada Gazette, Part II, November 24, 1983, applicable to taxation years commencing after 1982.

2403. Branch tax elections — (1) An election referred to in subsection 219(4) of the Act shall be made by a non-resident insurer in respect of a taxation year by filing, with its return of income required by subsection 150(1) of the Act to be filed for the year, a letter in duplicate stating

(a) the insurer elects under subsection 219(4) of the Act; and

(b) the amount the insurer elects to deduct under subsection 219(4) of the Act.

(2) Where a joint election referred to in subsection 219(5.2) of the Act is made by a non-resident insurer and a qualified related corporation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 219(8) of the Act) of the non-resident insurer in respect of a taxation year of the non-resident insurer, it shall be made by filing, with the non-resident insurer's return of income required by subsection 150(1) of the Act to be filed for the year in which the event to which the election relates occurred, a letter in duplicate signed by an authorized officer of the non-resident insurer and an authorized officer of the qualified related corporation stating

(a) whether paragraph 219(5.2)(a) or (b) of the Act is applicable; and

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 2403(2)(a)

(a) whether paragraphs 219(5.2)(a) and (b) of the Act apply; and

Application: The September 19, 1997 draft regulations (insurance companies), s. 3, will amend para. 2403(2)(a) to read as above, applicable to 1997 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 2403(2) sets out the mechanism for making an election under subsection 219(5.2) of the Act. Subsection 219(5.2) permits a non-resident insurer to elect to defer the branch tax arising under subsection 219(5.1) of the Act when the insurer transfers a Canadian insurance business to a qualified related corporation. Paragraph 2403(2)(a) requires the insurer and the qualified related corporation to jointly sign a letter seeking the election and include the letter in its Part I income tax return. That paragraph states that the letter must indicate whether paragraph 219(5.2)(a) or (b) of the Act is applicable to the transfer. Amended paragraph 2403(2)(a) requires that the letter state whether paragraph 219(5.2)(a) and (b) of the Act apply.

(b) the amount elected under subsection 219(5.2) of the Act.

History: Subsec. 2403(2) added by P.C. 1981-2121, s. 1, July 29, 1981, Canada Gazette, Part II, August 12, 1981, effective December 12, 1979.

2404. Currency conversions — For the purposes of this Part, where any amount is determined in a currency other than Canadian currency, that amount shall be converted to Canadian currency using the current rate of exchange, as required for the purposes of the relevant authority, on the date in respect of which the amount is determined.

Technical Notes: Subsection 2405(3) defines a number of expressions used in Part XXIV.

The expression "gross Canadian life investment income" is defined for the purpose of section 2402, which contains rules for determining an insurer's income for a year from carrying on its participating life insurance business in Canada. Several amendments are made to this definition:

- Paragraph (a) is amended to use the newly-defined term "Canadian business property", which is defined in subsection 2405(3). Gross investment revenue from such property held in respect of an insurer's life insurance business is included by paragraph (a) in determining the insurer's gross Canadian life investment income. This amendment applies to taxation years that end after June 1, 1995.

- Paragraph (c) is repealed. This paragraph includes, in determining an insurer's gross Canadian life investment income, the amounts included in the insurer's income by paragraphs 138(4)(b) and (c) of the Act (profit on disposition of a Canada security, and amortization of discount on such a security). This amendment is consequential on the repeal of paragraphs 138(4)(b) and (c).

- Paragraphs (d) and (i), which deal with doubtful debt reserves, are amended as a consequence of the repeal of the definition of "Canada security" in subsection 138(12) of the Act. The amended paragraphs refer to debt obligations that are "Canadian business property" of the insurer in respect of the insurer's life insurance business.

- New paragraph (d.1) includes in an insurer's gross Canadian life investment income the amounts that are included in the insurer's income by section 142.4 of the Act in respect of property disposed of by the insurer that was "Canadian business property" of the insurer in respect of its life insurance business. New paragraph (i.1) is a corresponding rule for deductions. New section 142.4 of the Act contains rules for the measurement and the timing of recognition of gains and losses from the disposition of specified debt obligations.

- Paragraph (e), which includes certain non-capital gains in an insurer's gross Canadian life investment income, is amended to exclude from its scope property in respect of which section 142.4 of the Act applies. Gains from the disposition of this property are taken into account by new paragraph (d.1). Paragraph (e) is also amended, for dispositions of property in taxation years ending after June 1, 1995, to clarify that it applies only to the property of an insurer's Canadian life insurance business. Similar changes are made to the rule in paragraph (j) for certain non-capital losses.

- Paragraph (f), which includes an insurer's taxable capital gains in its gross Canadian life investment income, is amended so that it does not include amounts deemed by subsection 142.5(7) of the Act to be taxable capital gains of the insurer. That subsection contains a transition rule relating to the introduction of the mark-to-market requirement. Paragraph (f) is also amended, for dispositions of property in taxation years ending after June 1, 1995, to clarify that it applies only to the property of an insurer's Canadian life insurance business. Similar changes are made to the rule in paragraph (k) for allowable capital losses.

- Paragraph (g) is repealed since the provision to which it refers — paragraph 138(3)(c) of the Act (investment reserve) — was repealed in the tax reform of 1987.

• Paragraph (h) is repealed. This paragraph deducts in determining an insurer's gross Canadian life investment income the amounts deducted under paragraphs 138(3)(b) and (d) of the Act (loss on disposition of a Canada security, and amortization of premium on such a security) in computing an insurer's income. This amendment is consequential on the repeal of paragraphs 138(3)(b) and (d).

(4) For the purposes of the definition in subsection (3), "Canadian investment fund" in respect of a life insurer resident in Canada, notwithstanding the definitions "Canadian reserve liabilities" and "total reserve liabilities" in that subsection, the insurer shall determine its liabilities and reserves in respect of its insurance policies outside Canada in a manner consistent with that used in determining its liabilities and reserves in respect of its insurance policies in Canada.

Proposed Addition — Reg. 2405(5) [temporary]

(5) For the purposes of subsection (3), the cost of a property shall be determined without regard to subsection 142.5(2) of the Act.

Application: The June 1, 1995 draft regulations (securities held by financial institutions), subsec. 3(11), will add subsec. 2405(5), applicable to taxation years that end after October 30, 1994.

Technical Notes: New subsection 2405(5) contains a rule for the purposes of the definitions in subsection 2405(3). It provides that the cost of property is to be determined without regard to the mark-to-market requirement in subsection 142.5(2) of the Act. Thus, the cost of mark-to-market property will not change each year for the purpose of the definitions in subsection 2405(3). This rule is relevant for determining the "valuation" of shares, and hence the "value for the year" of shares. As a consequence of this rule, the original cost of shares to an insurer will generally be used in measuring the Canadian investment fund, designating property, and determining any additional investment revenue prescribed by section 2411.

2406. Notwithstanding any other provision in this Part, an insurance property or an investment property, in respect of an insurer, does not include a policy loan payable to the insurer.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 2404–2406

2404. Prescribed amount — For the purpose of subparagraph 138(5)(b)(iv) of the Act, the prescribed amount in respect of an insurer for a taxation year is that proportion of the total of all amounts each of which is an amount of interest described in paragraph 20(1)(c) of the Act that is payable by the insurer in respect of the year on borrowed money (other than borrowed money used to acquire property or used or held by a segregated fund) used by the insurer for the purpose of earning income from an insurance business carried on by it in Canada or an amount otherwise deductible under paragraph 20(1)(d) of the Act for the year that is paid in the year on such interest, that

(a) the total of the amount described in subparagraph (a)(ii) or (b)(ii), as the case may be, of the definition "Canadian investment fund" in subsection 2400(1) in respect of the insurer as at the end of the year and the amount so described as at the end of its preceding taxation year

(b) the total of the amount described in clause (a)(ii)(A) or clause (b)(ii)(A), as the case may be, of the definition "Canadian investment fund" in subsection 2400(1) in respect of the insurer as at the end of the year and the amount so described as at the end of its preceding taxation year.

2405. Policy loans — Notwithstanding any other provision in this Part, a designated insurance property or an investment property of an insurer does not include a policy loan payable to the insurer.

Application: The September 19, 1997 draft regulations (insurance companies), s. 4, will amend s. 2404 to read as above, repeal s. 2405 (but see proposed Reg. 2400) and amend and renumber s. 2406 as s. 2405, applicable to 1997 et seq.

Technical Notes: Existing section 2404 provides that where an amount is determined in foreign currency, the amount must be converted to Canadian currency on the date on which is amount is determined. This rule is considered unnecessary because under the Income Tax Act amounts in foreign currency must (in the absence of any specific rule to the contrary) be converted into Canadian currency.

Amended section 2404, which is unrelated to existing section 2404, sets out the amount of interest which an insurer is permitted to deduct under amended subparagraph 138(5)(b)(iv) of the Act. Subsection 138(5) of the Act prohibits resident multinational life insurers and non-resident insurers from deducting any interest expense in computing their income from carrying on a Canadian insurance business except in limited circumstances. Interest deductibility is currently permitted under subparagraph 138(5)(b)(i) where the interest is payable on borrowed money used to acquire designated insurance property and under subparagraph 138(5)(b)(ii) on amounts payable for designated insurance property. New subparagraph 138(5)(b)(iv) allows insurers to deduct interest not in excess of a prescribed amount; amended section 2404 sets out that amount.

More specifically, the prescribed amount is equal to the amount of interest which would otherwise be deductible (but for the restrictions in subsection 138(5) of the Act) by the insurer under paragraph 20(1)(c) or 20(1)(d) of the Act multiplied by the ratio A/B where

A is the amount of the insurer's balance sheet liabilities, in respect of its Canadian insurance business, which do not relate to insurance policies, a segregated fund or a debt incurred to acquire a property (the amount being referred to in these notes as a "general liabilities"), less

- the value for the year of the insurer's non-investment property that is factually used in carrying on an insurance business in Canada,
- where the insurer is a Canadian resident, the amount deductible from its general liabilities in computing its Canadian investment fund on account of its financial institution allowance, and
- the insurer's year-end balance sheet deferred tax debit balance in respect of an insurance business carried on in Canada; and

B is the insurer's general liabilities.

In general terms, amended section 2404 is intended to determine the amount of an insurer's interest expense which is attributable to its general borrowing and other non-specific liabilities to the extent that the borrowing or liability is used in carrying on a Canadian insurance business and is not held in respect of a segregated fund. As noted above, the only interest expense which can be included in the amount prescribed by regulation 2404 is interest which meets the criteria for deductibility under paragraph 20(1)(c) or (d) of the Act.

Amended section 2405 (which is, essentially, existing section 2406) provides that a policy loan payable to an insurer cannot be investment property or "property used by it in the year in, or held by it in the year in the course of" (as defined in subsection 138(12) of the Act) carrying on an insurance business. As a consequence of the repeal of the definition of "property used by it in the year in, or held by it in the year in the course of", the reference to that definition is replaced with a reference to the new definition "designated insurance property".

2407. 1977 excess policy dividend deduction — For the purposes of paragraph 138(3.1)(b) of the Act, a life insurer's 1977 excess policy dividend is hereby prescribed to be the amount that is the lesser of

(a) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount determined under clause 138(3)(a)(iii)(A) of the Act for the insurer's

1977 taxation year (determined without reference to paragraph 138(3.1)(b) of the Act),

exceeds

(ii) the amount determined under clause 138(3)(a)(iii)(B) of the Act for the insurer's 1977 taxation year; and

(b) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the insurer's maximum tax actuarial reserve for its participating life insurance policies in Canada for its 1977 taxation year,

exceeds the aggregate of

(ii) the amount that would have been the insurer's maximum tax actuarial reserve for its participating life insurance policies in Canada for its 1977 taxation year if that reserve had been determined on the basis of the rules applicable to its 1978 taxation year,

(iii) the aggregate of all amounts payable to the insurer in respect of policy loans outstanding at the end of its 1977 taxation year in respect of participating life insurance policies in Canada, and

(iv) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the insurer's maximum tax actuarial reserve for its participating life insurance policies in Canada for its 1968 taxation year,

exceeds the aggregate of

(B) the amount that would have been the insurer's maximum tax actuarial reserve for its participating life insurance policies in Canada for its 1968 taxation year if that reserve had been determined on the basis of the rules applicable to its 1978 taxation year, and

(C) the aggregate of all amounts payable to the insurer in respect of policy loans outstanding at the end of its 1968 taxation year in respect of participating life insurance policies in Canada.

2408. 1977 carryforward deduction — For the purposes of subparagraph 138(4.2)(a)(iv) of the Act, a life insurer's 1977 carryforward deduction is hereby prescribed to be the amount, if any, by which

(a) the aggregate of

(i) the aggregate of amounts, each of which is an amount determined under paragraph 13(23)(b) of the Act in respect of property of a prescribed class of the insurer,

(ii) the aggregate of amounts each of which is a non-capital loss of the insurer for a taxation year ending after 1972 and before 1978 that would have been deductible by the insurer in computing its taxable income for a taxation year ending after 1977 if the Act were read without reference to subsection 111(7.2) thereof,

(iii) the amount prescribed by section 2407 to be the insurer's 1977 excess policy dividend deduction,

(iv) the amount determined under subparagraph 138(4.2)(b)(ii) of the Act in respect of the insurer,

(v) the amount determined under subparagraph 138(4.2)(c)(ii) of the Act in respect of the insurer,

(vi) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the aggregate of the insurer's maximum tax actuarial reserves for its 1977 taxation year,

exceeds

(B) the aggregate of the amounts deducted by the insurer for its 1977 taxation year under subparagraph 138(3)(a)(i) of the Act, and

(vii) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the maximum amount deductible by the insurer for its 1977 taxation year under subparagraph 138(3)(a)(ii) of the Act,

exceeds

(B) the amount deducted by the insurer for its 1977 taxation year under subparagraph 138(3)(a)(ii) of the Act,

exceeds

(b) the amount, if any, by which the aggregate of

(i) the lesser of

(A) the insurer's accumulated 1968 deficit, and

(B) the amount, if any, determined under subparagraph (vi),

(ii) the aggregate of the insurer's maximum tax actuarial reserves for its 1977 taxation year, other than reserves or any portions thereof in respect of segregated fund policies, and

(iii) the maximum amount deductible by the insurer for its 1977 taxation year under subparagraph 138(3)(a)(ii) of the Act,

exceeds the aggregate of

(iv) the aggregate of the amounts that would have been the insurer's maximum tax actuarial reserves for its 1977 taxation year if those reserves had been determined on the basis of the rules applicable to its 1978 taxation year,

(v) the aggregate of all amounts payable to the insurer in respect of policy loans outstanding at the end of its 1977 taxation year, and

(vi) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the aggregate of the insurer's maximum tax actuarial reserves for its 1968 taxation year, other than reserves or any portions thereof in respect of segregated fund policies,

exceeds the aggregate of

(B) the aggregate of the amounts that would have been the insurer's maximum tax actuarial reserves for its 1968 taxation year if those reserves had been determined on the basis of the rules applicable to its 1978 taxation year, and

(C) the aggregate of all amounts payable to the insurer in respect of policy loans outstanding at the end of its 1968 taxation year.

History: All that portion of s. 2408 preceding para. (a) substituted by P.C. 1980-540, February 20, 1980, Canada Gazette, Part II, March 12, 1980, effective in respect of 1978 et seq.

2409. Transitional — (1) For the purposes of this Part, except as expressly otherwise provided therein, where the expression "immediately preceding taxation year" refers to an insurer's 1977 taxation year, this Part shall be read as though the definitions therein applied to the insurer's 1977 taxation year.

(2) For the purposes of applying the provisions of paragraph 2400(1)(c) in respect of the 1978 taxation year of an insurer that was subject to the provisions of subsection 138(9) of the Act in respect of its 1977 taxation year, the following rules apply:

(a) this Part shall be read as though the definitions therein applied to the insurer's 1977 taxation year;

(b) such portion of the insurer's Canadian equity property owned by it at the end of its 1977 taxation year as is designated by the insurer in respect of a particular insurance business, in its return of income required by subsection 150(1) of the Act to be filed for the 1978 taxation year, shall be deemed to be investment property of the prior year in respect of the particular insurance business, but the aggregate valuation as at the end of the insurer's 1977 taxation year of the Canadian equity property so designated in respect of all its insurance businesses carried on in Canada shall not exceed

(i) in the case of a life insurer resident in Canada, or a non-resident life insurer that has made the election referred to in subsection 2401(1) in respect of its 1978 taxation year, that proportion of

(A) the insurer's Canadian investment fund as at the end of its 1977 taxation year (determined on the basis of the rules applicable to its 1978 taxation year),

that

(B) the aggregate valuation of the insurer's equity property as at the end of the insurer's 1977 taxation year

is of

(C) the aggregate valuation of the insurer's investment property as at the end of the insurer's 1977 taxation year,

(ii) in the case of a non-resident life insurer, other than an insurer referred to in subparagraph (i), eight per cent of its Canadian investment fund as at the end of its 1977 taxation year (determined on the basis of the rules applicable to its 1978 taxation year), and

(e) where the insurer did not make the election referred to in paragraph (c) and carried on an other than life insurance business in Canada and a life insurance business in Canada in its 1977 taxation year, investment property (other than a Canadian equity property) owned by the insurer at the end of its 1977 taxation year each of which is a specified Canadian asset of the insurer, within the meaning of subsection 2405(1) as it read in its application to the 1977 taxation year, in respect of which the aggregate value for the year in respect of the insurer's 1978 taxation year is equal to the amount, if any, by which

(i) the insurer's mean Canadian reserve liabilities for its 1978 taxation year in respect of its other than life insurance business

exceeds

(ii) the aggregate value for the year in respect of the insurer's 1978 taxation year of its insurance property of its other than life insurance

History: Paras. 2409(2)(c) substituted, (d), (e) added, by P.C. 1980-1484, s. 5, June 5, 1980, Canada Gazette, Part II, June 25, 1980, effective for 1978.

(b) for the purposes of clause 2402(a)(ii)(A), the insurer's maximum tax actuarial reserve for its 1977 taxation year in respect of a class of life insurance policies in Canada shall be deemed to have been determined on the basis of the rules applicable to its 1978 taxation year; and

History: Subsec. 2409(4) added by P.C. 1990-2002, s. 9, September 20, 1990, Canada Gazette, Part II, October 10, 1990, applicable in respect of taxation years beginning after June 17, 1987 and ending after 1987.

2410. Prescribed amount — (1) The amount prescribed for the purposes of subsection 138(4.4) of the Act shall be computed for a taxation year as the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the specified percentage for the year of the amount determined, in respect of a property for a period in the year referred to in that subsection by the formula

where

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 2410(1)

2410. Prescribed amount — For the purpose of subsection 138(4.4) of the Act, the amount prescribed in respect of a property for a period in a taxation year is the amount determined by the formula

$$[(A \times B) \times C/365] - D$$

where

Application: The September 19, 1997 draft regulations (insurance companies), subsec. 5(1), will amend the portion of subsec. 2410(1) before the description of A to read as above, applicable to 1997 et seq.

Technical Notes: Section 2410 sets out the rules for determining the prescribed amount for the purposes of subsection 138(4.4) of the Act. Subsection 138(4.4) of the Act applies where a life insurer owns vacant real property or real property under development and the property is designated by the insurer as property used or held by it in the year in the course of carrying on an insurance business in Canada or is factually used or held in such a business.

Subsection 138(4.4) has been amended by replacing the reference to property "used by it in the year, or held by it in the year in the course of" with a reference to the new definition "designated insurance property", and to clarify that an amount is prescribed in respect of each property which is subject to the rule. The amount prescribed for this purpose continues to be determined under amended section 2410.

Existing subsection 2410(1) provides that the prescribed amount is the specified percentage (as set out in subsection 2410(2)) of the amount determined by the formula

$$[(A \times B) \times C/D \times E/365] - F$$

where

A is the average annual interest rate (as set out in Regulation 4301) for the period while the property was vacant or undeveloped

B is the average cost or capital cost of the property (net of the average amount of debt on the property)

C is the insurer's Canadian reserve liabilities less policy loans and premiums receivable

D is either:

(i) the value of the insurer's investment property less the insurer's indebtedness where the life insurer is resident in Canada but does not carry any insurance business outside Canada, or

(ii) the insurer's Canadian investment fund where the life insurer carries on an insurance business outside Canada

E is the number of days in the period

F is the insurer's net income earned on the property

Consistent with the amendments to subsection 138(4.4) of the Act, subsection 2410(1) is amended so that a prescribed amount is determined in respect of each property which is subject to subsection 138(4.4). Subsection 2410(1) is also simplified by deleting the portion of the formula which prorates the imputed interest. Accordingly, the formula is simplified to

$$[(A \times B) \times C/365] - D$$

where

A is existing A

B is existing B

C (which is existing E) is the number of days in the relevant period, and

D (which is existing F) is the net income actually earned on the property in the period

A is the average annual rate of interest determined by reference to rates of interest prescribed in section 4301 for the months or portion thereof in the period;

B is the amount, if any, by which, the average cost or average capital cost, as the case may be, of the property for the period exceeds the average amount of debt relating to the acquisition of the property outstanding during the period that bears a fair market interest rate and, for this purpose,

(a) the average cost or average capital cost, as the case may be, of a property is the total of

(i) the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the cost or capital cost, as the case may be, if any, immediately before the beginning of the period in respect of the property, and

(ii) the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the proportion of any expenditure incurred on any day in the period in respect of the cost or capital cost, as the case may be, of the property that

(A) the number of days from that day to the end of the period

is of

(B) the number of days in the period, and

(b) the average amount of debt relating to the acquisition of a property is the amount, if any, by which the total of

(i) the aggregate of all amounts each of which is an indebtedness relating to the acquisition that was outstanding at the beginning of the period, and

(ii) the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the proportion of an indebtedness relating to the acquisition that was incurred on any day in the period that

(A) the number of days from that day to the end of the period

is of

(B) the number of days in the period,

exceeds

(iii) the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the proportion of an amount that was paid in respect of any indebtedness referred to in subparagraph (i) or (ii) on any day in the period (other than a payment of interest in respect thereof) that

(A) the number of days from that day to the end of the period

is of

(B) the number of days in the period;

C is the amount, if any, by which the Canadian reserve liabilities of the life insurer at the end of a taxation year that includes the period exceed the aggregate of the policy loans and the outstanding premiums under insurance policies in Canada of the insurer at the end of the year, as determined for the purposes of the relevant authority;

D is

(a) where the insurer is a life insurer that does not carry on an insurance business outside Canada, the amount, if any, by which

(i) the valuation of all property that is owned by the insurer at the end of the taxation year that includes the period and that is

(A) an investment property,

(B) money, or

(C) a balance (other than a property included under (A) or (B)) standing to the insurer's credit as or on account of amounts deposited with a corporation authorized to accept deposits or to carry on the business of offering to the public its services as a trustee,

exceeds the total of

(ii) the aggregate of all amounts each of which is an amount outstanding at the end of the year in respect of a debt (other than a debt referred to in paragraph (h) of the definition "valuation" in subsection 2405(3) or an amount referred to in subparagraph (iii)) owing by the insurer in respect of money borrowed by the insurer (other than money used by the insurer for the purpose of earning income from a source that is not an insurance business), and

(iii) the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the amount of a cheque outstanding at the end of the year drawn on an account of the insurer maintained with a corporation authorized to accept deposits or to carry on the business of offering to the public its services as a trustee, or

(b) where the insurer is a life insurer not referred to in paragraph (a), the amount of the insurer's Canadian investment fund as at the end of the taxation year that includes the period;

E is the aggregate of the number of days in the period; and

F is the amount, if any, of the income of the person or partnership that owned the property in the period that was derived from the property for the taxation year that includes the period.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 2410(1)C–F

C is the number of days in the period; and

D is the income derived from the property in the period by the person or partnership that owned the property.

Application: The September 19, 1997 draft regulations (insurance companies), subsec. 5(2), will amend the descriptions of C and D and repeal the descriptions of E and F, applicable to 1997 et seq.

Technical Notes: See under Reg. 2410(1).

(2) The specified percentage for a taxation year in respect of an amount determined in respect of property under subsection (1) for a taxation year is the aggregate of

(a) that proportion of 20 per cent that the number of days in the taxation year that are after 1987 and before 1989 is of the number of days in the taxation year;

(b) that proportion of 40 per cent that the number of days in the taxation year that are after 1988 and before 1990 is of the number of days in the taxation year;

(c) that proportion of 60 per cent that the number of days in the taxation year that are after 1989 and before 1991 is of the number of days in the taxation year;

(d) that proportion of 80 per cent that the number of days in the taxation year that are after 1990 and before 1992 is of the number of days in the taxation year; and

(e) that proportion of 100 per cent that the number of days in the taxation year that are after 1991 is of the number of days in the taxation year.

Proposed Repeal — Reg. 2410(2)

Application: The September 19, 1997 draft regulations (insurance companies), subsec. 5(3), will repeal subsec. 2410(2), applicable to 1997 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 2410(2) was intended to phase-in the effect of subsection 138(4.4) of the Act and subsection 2410(1) when they were introduced in 1987. Subsection 2410(2) provides that an amount determined under subsection 2410(1) is included only on the basis of 20%, 40%, 60%, 80% and 100% of the amount for the 1988, 1989, 1990, 1991 and 1992 years. Subsection 2410(2) is now redundant and is being repealed. The repeal of subsection 2410(2) means that subsection 2410(1) becomes simply section 2410.

2411. (1) Subject to subsection (2), the amount prescribed in respect of an insurer for a taxation year for the purposes of paragraph 138(9)(b) of the Act shall be the amount determined by the formula

$$A - (B + C)$$

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 2411(1)

$$A - (B + B.1 + C)$$

Application: The June 1, 1995 draft regulations (securities held by financial institutions), subsec. 4(1), will amend the formula in subsec. 2411(1) to read as above, applicable to 1995 et seq.

Technical Notes: See under Reg. 2411(1)B.1 below.

where

A is the positive or negative amount, as the case may be, determined in respect of the insurer for the year under subsection (3);

B is the positive or negative amount, as the case may be, determined in respect of the insurer for the year under subsection (4) in respect of investment property designated by the insurer for the year pursuant to subsection 2400(1) as investment property used by it in the year in, or held by it in the year in the course of, carrying on an insurance business in Canada; and

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 2411(1)B

B is the positive or negative amount, as the case may be, determined in respect of the insurer for the year under subsection (4) in respect of the insurer's investment property that is designated insurance property for the year;

Application: The September 19, 1997 draft regulations (insurance companies), subsec. 6(1), will amend the description of B in subsec. 2411(1) to read as above, applicable to 1997 et seq.

Technical Notes: Section 2411 sets out the rules for determining the prescribed amount which is required to be included in an insurer's income under paragraph 138(9)(b) of the Act.

Paragraph 138(9)(a) of the Act requires multinational life insurers and non-resident insurers to include in computing income for a year from a Canadian insurance business the gross investment revenue that is derived from property which is considered, under a set of prescribed rules, to be used in that insurance business. Paragraph 138(9)(b) requires such insurers to also include in their income from carrying on an insurance business in Canada the amount prescribed in section 2411 of the Regulations.

Section 2411 is intended to restrict the ability of a multinational insurer to reduce its taxable income by having only the revenue from its low-yielding assets included in computing its Canadian income. Under Part XXIV of the Regulations, an insurer is required to choose (a process referred to as the designation of property), from among all of its investment assets, those assets which can be considered to be used in carrying on the Canadian portion of its insurance businesses. The value of its assets which must be designated in respect of a taxation year cannot be less than its Canadian investment fund for the year (for further details see the commentary on amended subsection 2401, above). Absent paragraph 138(9)(b) of the Act and section 2411, an insurer could fill its Canadian investment fund with its lowest-yielding assets thereby failing to provide a reasonable representation of its income from its Canadian insurance operations.

Subsection 2411(1) prescribes the amount for the purposes of paragraph 138(9)(b). The amount is the difference between the insurer's average net investment revenue for the year (as determined under subsection 2411(3)) and the insurer's net investment revenue earned on its designated property (as determined under subsection 2411(4)). The amount may be reduced if the insurer has a carryover amount from its cumulative excess account. The cumulative excess account is made up of amounts in the seven preceding taxation years where the insurer's actual revenue in a preceding taxation year exceeded the minimum revenue, as determined under section 2411, for that preceding year.

Proposed Addition — Reg. 2411(1)B.1 [temporary]

B.1 is the positive or negative amount, as the case may be, determined in respect of the insurer for the year under subsection (4.1) in respect of property disposed of by the insurer that was, in the taxation year of disposition, investment property designated by the insurer under subsection 2400(1) as property used by it in the year in, or held by it in the year in the course of, carrying on an insurance business in Canada;

Application: The June 1, 1995 draft regulations (securities held by financial institutions), subsec. 4(2), will add the description of B.1 to subsec. 2411(1), applicable to 1995 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 138(9) of the Act requires a resident multinational life insurer or a non-resident insurer to include the following amounts in income:

(i) its gross investment revenue from property designated as property used or held by it in carrying on its insurance businesses in Canada; and

(ii) any additional amount that is prescribed.

Section 2411 prescribes an amount for this purpose that ensures that the insurer's net investment revenue from its designated property is not less than the net investment revenue that would be determined if the average rate of return on its designated assets of each class were equal to the average rate of return on all its investment property of that class. This prevents an insurer from understating its Canadian business income by designating assets with lower investment returns.

Subsection 2411(1) prescribes the additional amount, if any, that an insurer is required by paragraph 138(9)(b) of the Act to include in computing its income for a taxation year. This amount is equal to the difference between the insurer's minimum amount of net investment revenue for the year determined under subsection 2411(3) and the insurer's actual net investment revenue for the year from its designated property determined under subsection 2411(4). If, in preceding taxation years, the insurer's actual revenue has exceeded the required minimum, the insurer may have a carryforward amount that can be used to reduce the prescribed amount.

Subsection 2411(1) is amended as a consequence of the introduction of rules in subsection 142.4(4) of the Act that apply to the disposition of certain specified debt obligations (as defined in subsection 142.2(1) of the Act). The amendment includes in the determination of the insurer's actual net investment revenue for a particular taxation year the amount determined under new subsection 2411(4.1) in respect of specified debt obligations disposed of by the insurer at any time that were designated as property of an insurance business carried on by the insurer in Canada. The amount determined under subsection 2411(4.1) for a taxation year is equal to the net amount required by subsection 142.4(4) of the Act to be included in respect of the obligations in computing the income of the insurer for the year (or the net amount that is deductible in respect of the obligations, expressed as a negative amount).

B.1 is the positive or negative amount, as the case may be, determined in respect of the insurer for the year under subsection (4.1) in respect of property disposed of by the insurer in a taxation year for which it was designated insurance property of the insurer; and

Application: The September 19, 1997 draft regulations (insurance companies), subsec. 6(2), will amend the description of B.1 in subsec. 2411(1) to read as above, applicable to 1997 et seq.

Technical Notes: See under 2411(1)B.

C is the amount claimed by the insurer for the year in respect of any balance of its cumulative excess account at the end of the year.

(2) Where an amount computed under subsection (1) in respect of an insurer is a negative amount, that amount shall be deemed to be nil.

(3) The positive or negative amount, as the case may be, determined under this subsection in respect of an insurer for a taxation year shall be the amount determined by the formula

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 2411(3) [temporary]

Application: The June 1, 1995 draft regulations (securities held by financial institutions), subsec. 4(3), will amend the first formula in subsec. 2411(3) to read as above, applicable to 1995 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 2411(3) provides for the computation of the minimum amount of net investment revenue that must be reported by an insurer for a taxation year. This revenue is calculated by determining average yield rates for either two or three classes of assets, and applying each rate to the amount of assets of the class that have been designated for the year as property of an insurance business carried on by the insurer in Canada. The amounts that are taken into account in determining average yield rates are specified by subsection 2411(4), and include gains and losses from the disposition of property. In the case of property that has not been designated as property of an insurance business carried on by the insurer in Canada, the amounts are determined as if the property had been so designated.

Subsection 2411(3) is amended as a consequence of the introduction of rules in subsection 142.4(4) of the Act that apply to the disposition of certain specified debt obligations. The amendment includes, in determining the average yield rate for a class of assets, the amount determined under new subsection 2411(4.1) in respect of those assets. The amount determined under subsection 2411(4.1) for a taxation year is equal to the net amount required by subsection 142.4(4) of the Act to be included in respect of the assets in computing the income of the insurer for the year (or the net amount that is deductible in respect of the assets, expressed as a negative amount).

The amendments to subsection 2411(3) apply to 1995 and subsequent taxation years.

or, where the value for the year of foreign investment property designated by the insurer for the year pursuant to subsection 2400(1) as investment property used by it in the year in, or held by it in the year in the course of, carrying on an insurance business in Canada is not greater than 5 per cent of the amount of the Canadian investment fund for the year of the insurer and the insurer so elects, the amount determined by the formula

Application: The June 1, 1995 draft regulations (securities held by financial institutions), subsec. 4(4), will amend the second formula in subsec. 2411(3) to read as above, applicable to 1995 et seq.

Technical Notes: See under Reg. 2411(3) above.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 2411(3)

(3) The positive or negative amount, as the case may be, determined under this subsection in respect of an insurer for a taxation year shall be the amount determined by the formula

or, where the value for the year of the insurer's foreign investment property that is designated insurance property for the year is not greater than 5 per cent of the amount of the insurer's mean Canadian investment fund for the year and the insurer so elects in its return of income under Part I for the year, the amount determined by the formula

Application: The September 19, 1997 draft regulations (insurance companies), subsec. 6(3), will amend the portion of subsec. 2411(3) before the description of A to read as above, applicable to 1997 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 2411(3) sets out the computation of the minimum amount of net investment revenue that must be reported by an insurer for a taxation year. In general terms, the minimum net investment revenue is determined by multiplying the net investment revenue earned on the insurer's designated property by the ratio that the insurer's net investment revenue on all its investment property is to the value for the year of all its investment property. That ratio represents the average yield on the insurer's investment property. Multiplying the ratio by the value of the designated insurance property produces the average yield which should be earned on the insurer's investment property. The actual computation in subsection 2411(3) measures the average yield for assets in each of the following groups of property:

- Canadian equity property,
- other Canadian investment property, and
- foreign investment property.

A is the positive or negative amount, as the case may be, determined in respect of the insurer for the year under subsection (4) in respect of Canadian investment property (other than Canadian equity property) owned by the insurer at any time in the year;

Technical Notes: See under Reg. 2411(3) above.

B is the total value for the year of Canadian investment property (other than Canadian equity property) owned by the insurer at any time in the year;

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 2411(3)C

C is the total value for the year of the insurer's Canadian investment property (other than Canadian equity property) that is designated insurance property of the insurer for the year;

Application: The September 19, 1997 draft regulations (insurance companies), subsec. 6(4), will amend the description of C in subsec. 2411(3) to read as above, applicable to 1997 et seq.

Technical Notes: See under 2411(3).

Application: The June 1, 1995 draft regulations (securities held by financial institutions), subsecs. 4(7) to (13), will amend the opening words of the descriptions of A and B in subsec. 2411(4), will amend paras. (d) and (i) of the description of A and (b) of the description of B, will add paras. (c.1) to the description of A and (a.1) to the description of B, and will repeal paras. (b) of the description of A and (c) of the description of B; the opening words of the descriptions of A and B applicable to taxation years that end after June 1, 1995, paras. (b) and (i) of the description of A and para. (c) of the description of B applicable to taxation years that begin after February 22, 1994, paras. (d) and (c.1) to the description of A and paras. (a.1) and (b) to the description of B, applicable to dispositions of property that occur after February 22, 1994.

Technical Notes: Subsection 2411(4) provides that an insurer's net investment revenue from property of a particular class is determined by the formula "A - B", where A is the total of the gross investment revenue from the property, gains from the disposition of the property and other income inclusions in respect of the property, and B is losses from the property and other deductions in respect of the property. The amounts included in A and B in respect of property that has not been designated as property of an insurance business carried on by the insurer in Canada are determined as if the property had been so designated. Several changes are made to the determination of amounts A and B.

The descriptions of both A and B are amended to clarify that, in determining the amounts to be taken into account in respect of property that has not been designated, the property is to be treated as if it had been designated for each year from the time it was acquired.

The other changes to A are as follows:

- Paragraph (b) is repealed. This paragraph includes in A the amounts included in the insurer's income under paragraphs 138(4)(b) and (c) of the Act (profit on disposition of a Canada security, and amortization of discount on such a security). This amendment is consequential on the repeal of paragraphs 138(4)(b) and (c).
- New paragraph (c.1) includes in A the amounts that are included in the insurer's income by subsection 142.4(5) of the Act. That subsection includes in income the gain from the disposition of specified debt obligations after February 22, 1994 where the gain is not required to be amortized.
- Paragraph (d), which includes certain non-capital gains in A, is amended to replace the exclusion for gains from Canada securities by an exclusion for gains from specified debt obligations. Those gains are dealt with, in some cases, by new paragraph (c.1) and in other cases by new subsection 2411(4.1).
- Paragraph (i), which includes in A all amounts that are included in the insurer's income in respect of the property, but that are not specifically referred to in the preceding paragraphs, is amended so that it does not apply to amounts that are included in income by subsection 142.4(4) of the Act. New subsection 2411(4.1), in conjunction with amendments to subsections 2411(1) and (3), provides for subsection 142.4(4) amounts to be taken into account.

The changes to B, in addition to the change described [to A] above, are as follows:

- New paragraph (a.1) includes in B the amounts that are deductible under subsection 142.4(5) of the Act in computing the insurer's income. That subsection provides a deduction for the loss from the disposition of specified debt obligations after February 22, 1994 where the loss is not required to be amortized.
- Paragraph (b), which includes certain non-capital losses in B, is amended to replace the exclusion for losses from Canada securities by an exclusion for losses from specified debt obligations. Those losses are dealt with, in some cases, by new paragraph (a.1) and in other cases by new subsection 2411(4.1).
- Paragraph (c) is repealed. This paragraph includes in B the amounts that are deductible under paragraphs 138(3)(b) and (d) of the Act (loss on disposition of a Canada security, and amortization of premium on such a security). This amendment is consequential on the repeal of paragraphs 138(3)(b) and (d).

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 2411(4)A

A is the total of the following amounts determined in respect of the property for the year, or that would be determined in respect of the property for the year if the property were designated insurance property of the insurer in respect of an insurance business in Canada for each taxation year in which it was held by the insurer:

Application: The September 19, 1997 draft regulations (insurance companies), subsec. 6(7), will amend the opening words of the description of A in subsec. 2411(4) to read as above, applicable to 1997 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 2411(4) sets out the rules for determining an insurer's net investment revenue for the purposes of computing the insurer's minimum net revenue in subsection 2411(1) and (3). Subsection 2411(4.1) serves the same function as subsection 2411(4), but in respect of certain specified debt obligations which are disposed of by an insurer.

Subsections 2411(1), (3), (4) and (4.1) are amended strictly as a consequence of the replacement of the definition "property used by it in the year in, or held by it in the year in the course of" in subsection 138(12) of the Act with the definition "designated insurance property".

Proposed Addition — Reg. 2411(4.1)

(4.1) The positive or negative amount, as the case may be, determined under this subsection in respect of an insurer for a taxation year in respect of property disposed of by the insurer in the year or a preceding taxation year is the amount determined by the formula

$$A - B$$

where

A is the total of the amounts included under paragraphs 142.4(4)(a) and (c) of the Act in the insurer's income for the year in respect of the property, or that would be so included if the property had been insurance property of the insurer in respect of an insurance business in Canada for each taxation year in which it was held by the insurer; and

B is the total of the amounts deductible under paragraphs 142.4(4)(b) and (d) of the Act in respect of the property in computing the insurer's income for the year, or that would be so deductible if the property had been insurance property of the insurer in respect of an insurance business in Canada for each taxation year in which it was held by the insurer.

Application: The June 1, 1995 draft regulations (securities held by financial institutions), subsec. 4(14), will add subsec. 2411(4.1), applicable to 1995 et seq.

Technical Notes: New subsection 142.4(4) of the Act contains rules that apply with respect to the disposition of certain specified debt obligations. (The term "specified debt obligation" is defined in subsection 142.2(1) of the Act.) In particular, subsection 142.4(4) provides in general for the amortization of all or part of a gain or loss. New subsection 2411(4.1), in conjunction with amendments to subsections 2411(1) and (3), provides for the subsection 142.4(4) amounts to be taken into account in determining the amount, if any, prescribed by subsection 2411(1). A related amendment to subsection 2411(4) ensures that subsection 142.4(4) amounts are not taken into account twice.

New subsection 2411(4.1) determines an amount with respect to a group of specified debt obligations disposed of by an insurer before the end of a taxation year. (This includes obligations disposed of in preceding taxation years.) The amount for a year (which may be positive or negative) is equal to:

- the total of all amounts included by subsection 142.4(4) in the insurer's income for the year in respect of the obligations (or that would be so included if the property had been property of a Canadian insurance business)

minus

- the total of all amounts deductible under subsection 142.4(4) in respect of the obligations in computing the insurer's income for the year (or that would be so deductible if the property had been property of a Canadian insurance business).

Subsection 2411(4.1) is invoked by subsections 2411(1) and (3). For the purpose of subsection 2411(1), the subsection 2411(4.1) amount is determined in respect of specified debt obligations that were designated as property of an insurance business carried on by the insurer in Canada. Subsection 2411(3) provides for the subsection 2411(4.1) amount to be determined in respect of all specified debt obligations that are Canadian investment property, whether or not they have been designated by the insurer. It also provides for a similar determination in respect of specified debt obligations that are foreign investment property.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 2411(4.1)A, B

A is the total of the amounts included under paragraphs 142.4(4)(a) and (c) of the Act in the insurer's income for the year in respect of the property, or that would be so included if the property were designated insurance property of the insurer in respect of an insurance business in Canada for each taxation year in which it was held by the insurer; and

B is the total of the amounts deductible under paragraphs 142.4(4)(b) and (d) of the Act in respect of the property in computing the insurer's income for the year, or that would be so deductible if the property were designated insurance property of the insurer in respect of an insurance business in Canada for each taxation year in which it was held by the insurer.

Application: The September 19, 1997 draft regulations (insurance companies), subsec. 6(8), will amend the descriptions of A and B in subsec. 2411(4.1) to read as above, applicable to 1997 et seq.

Technical Notes: See under 2411(4)A.

(5) For the purposes of subsection (4), a property that has not been designated by the insurer for the year pursuant to subsection 2400(1) as investment property used by it in the year in, or held by it in the year in the course of, carrying on an insurance business in Canada shall be deemed to be a property used by it in the year in, or held by it in the year in the course of, carrying on that insurance business in respect of which the property has been reported by the insurer in its annual report for the year to the relevant authority or, where the insurer was throughout the year subject to the supervision of the relevant authority but was not required to file an annual report with the relevant authority for the year, that insurance business in respect of which the property would have been reported by the insurer in an annual report for the year if it had been so required by the relevant authority.

Proposed Repeal — Reg. 2411(5)

Technical Notes: Where property has not been designated as property used or held in a Canadian insurance business, subsection 2411(4) applies on the assumption that the property had been so designated. Subsection 2411(5) contains an additional rule for this purpose. It provides that the property is to be considered property of the business in respect of which it is reported in the insurer's annual report. This rule was required because of the special rules for the tax treatment of debt obligations (referred to as Canada securities) that are property of a life insurance business. Subsection 2411(5) is repealed, for taxation years beginning after February 22, 1994, as a consequence of the repeal of the special rules for Canada securities.

(6) For the purposes of subsection (1), the balance of an insurer's cumulative excess account at the end of a taxation year shall be determined as the amount, if any, by which

(a) the aggregate of all amounts each of which is a positive amount, if any, determined in respect of each of such of its seven immediately preceding taxation years that began after June 17, 1987 and ended after 1987 by the formula where A and B are the amounts determined under subsection (1) in respect of the insurer for such immediately preceding taxation year,

exceeds

(b) the aggregate of all amounts each of which is an amount claimed by the insurer under subsection (1) in respect of its cumulative excess account for a preceding taxation year that can be attributed to a positive amount determined under paragraph (a) for that year and, for the purpose of this paragraph, a positive amount determined in respect of a taxation year shall be deemed to have been claimed before a positive amount determined in respect of any subsequent taxation year.

(7) For the purposes of subsection (3),

(a) where the aggregate value for the year of property designated by the insurer for the year pursuant to paragraphs 2400(1)(a) to (d) exceeds the minimum value for the year of property required to be designated by the insurer for the year pursuant to those paragraphs, the aggregate value for the year of the property determined for the year under each of C, F and J of the formula set out in subsection (3) shall not exceed that minimum value for the year of such property that is required to be designated by the insurer for the year pursuant to paragraphs 2400(1)(a) to (d); and

(b) for the purposes of paragraph (a), the value for the year of property required to be designated by the insurer for the year under F in the formula set out in subsection (3) shall be deemed to be the value for the year of such property designated by the insurer for the year.

Application: The September 19, 1997 draft regulations (insurance companies), subsec. 6(9), will repeal subsec. 2411(7), applicable to 1997 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 2411(7) provides that subsection 2411(3) applies only to the extent that investment property must be designated by an insurer in accordance with the rules in paragraphs 2400(1)(a) to (d). Those paragraphs permitted an insurer to designate investment property with a total value in excess of that required to be designated for the year. The amended designation rules (for further details see the commentary on amended section 2401, above) do not allow such excess designations and, therefore, subsection 2411(7) is to be repealed.

(8) For the purposes of this section, "foreign investment property" of an insurer means investment property of the insurer (unless the insurer is a non-resident insurer and it is established by the insurer that the investment property is not effectively connected with its Canadian insurance businesses) that is not Canadian investment property of the insurer.

2412. (1) The amount of the Canadian investment fund for the year for a taxation year in respect of an insurer shall be determined by the formula

$$A + B$$

where

A is the mean Canadian investment fund for the year for the taxation year in respect of the insurer; and

B is the amount determined under subsection (2) in respect of the insurer for the taxation year.

(2) Subject to subsection (3), the amount determined under this subsection in respect of an insurer for the taxation year shall be determined by the formula

$$\frac{1}{2}\left[A - \frac{(B + 3C + 5D + 7E)}{F}\right]$$

where

A is the aggregate of B, C, D and E;

B is the positive or negative amount, as the case may be, determined under subsection (4) in respect of the insurer for the first three month period in the taxation year of the insurer;

C is the positive or negative amount, as the case may be, determined under subsection (4) in respect of the insurer for the second three month period in the taxation year of the insurer;

D is the positive or negative amount, as the case may be, determined under subsection (4) in respect of the insurer for the third three month period in the taxation year of the insurer;

E is the positive or negative amount, as the case may be, determined under subsection (4) in respect of the insurer for the fourth three month period in the taxation year of the insurer; and

F is the result obtained when the number of calendar months in the taxation year is divided by 3 and, where that result is not a whole number, it shall be rounded down to the next lower whole number.

(3) Where the taxation year of an insurer does not contain any three month period, the amount determined under subsection (2) in respect of the insurer shall be deemed to be nil.

(4) The positive or negative amount, as the case may be, determined in respect of an insurer for a particular three month period in a taxation year of the insurer shall be determined by the formula

where

A is the aggregate of all amounts each of which is

(a) an amount of a premium or consideration received by the insurer in the period in respect of a contract of insurance or an annuity (including a settlement annuity) entered into in the course of carrying on its insurance businesses in Canada,

(b) an amount received by the insurer in the period in respect of interest on or a repayment in respect of a policy loan made under a life insurance policy in Canada, or

(c) an amount received by the insurer in the period in respect of reinsurance (other than reinsurance undertaken to effect a transfer of a business in respect of which subsection 138(11.5), (11.92) or (11.94) of the Act applies) arising in the course of carrying on its insurance businesses in Canada and not otherwise included in paragraph (a) or (b); and

B is the aggregate of all amounts each of which is

(a) an amount of a claim or benefit (including a payment under an annuity or settlement annuity, a payment of a policy dividend and an amount paid on a lapsed or terminated policy) or a refund of premiums paid by the insurer in the period under a contract of insurance or an annuity in the course of carrying on its insurance businesses in Canada,

(b) an amount of a policy loan made by the insurer in the period under a life insurance policy in Canada,

(c) a premium or commission paid by the insurer in the period in respect of a contract of insurance or an annuity in the course of carrying on its insurance businesses in Canada, or

(d) an amount paid by the insurer in the period in respect of reinsurance (other than reinsurance undertaken to effect a transfer of a business in respect of which subsection 138(11.5), (11.92) or (11.94) of the Act applies) in the course of carrying on its insurance businesses in Canada and not otherwise included in paragraph (a), (b) or (c).

(5) For the purposes of this section, "mean Canadian investment fund for the year", means

(a) for a taxation year in respect of a life insurer resident in Canada, ½ of the aggregate of

(i) its Canadian investment fund as at the end of the year, and

(ii) its Canadian investment fund as at the end of the immediately preceding taxation year; and

(b) for a taxation year in respect of a non-resident insurer, ½ of the aggregate of

(i) its Canadian investment fund as at the end of the year, and

Application: The September 19, 1997 draft regulations (insurance companies), s. 7, will amend s. 2412 to read as above, applicable to 1997 et seq.

Technical Notes: The cash flow adjustment (the "CFA") is designed to take account of the actual receipts and payments of an insurer throughout a taxation year in order to achieve a more accurate determination of the year-end Canadian investment fund (CIF) when the insurer's business does not grow or shrink uniformly during the year. This adjustment is necessary because the CIF for the year is simply the mean of the insurer's opening and closing CIFs for the year, but the value attributed to the property that is designated to fill this mean CIF is based on the number days in the year that the property was owned. Without the CFA, investment income earned on an investment property will be understated when the property is acquired in the first half of the year and overstated where the property is acquired in the second half of the year.

Example

Assume the following:

- opening CIF $100
- closing CIF $200
- mean CIF for the year 1/2($100 + $200) = $150
- The increase in the CIF over the year corresponded to the receipt of premium revenue, an increase in the insurer's reserve liabilities in respect of the premium, and acquisition of an investment property, with a carrying value equal to $100, at the very beginning of the year.

For designation purposes, the value for the year of the property is $100. Because the increase in the mean CIF for the year is only $50, however, only 1/2 of the value of the investment property need be designated to fill the increase in the mean CIF. Accordingly, only the investment revenue generated from $50 worth of the investment property will be included in the insurer's income.

In these circumstances the cash flow adjustment is designed to increase the insurer's CIF for the year by $50 to reflect the acquisition of the investment property at the beginning of the year.

The existing CFA increases or decreases the mean CIF based on the insurer's quarterly cash flows of the following items:

- premiums or consideration in respect of insurance contracts or annuities
- amounts in respect of interest on policy loans or repayments in respect of policy loans
- amounts in respect of reinsurance
- amounts in respect of claims, benefits, and refunds of premiums.

Because the cash flow is only measured quarterly, amounts in respect of contracts (such as cash annuities) which are outstanding for less than 90 days may not be included in the CFA (subject to the application of the anti-avoidance rule in section 245 of the Act, where the timing of the obligations is deliberately manipulated to over-weight redemptions prior to the end of a quarter) although the insurer could have earned investment income for 89 days on the amount received on the contract.

To address the above problems, a new daily CFA will apply a daily-weighting to amounts received or paid by an insurer in the following transactions:

- certain large life insurance, reinsurance and annuity contracts;
- an insurer's borrowing and debt instrument financing; and
- an insurer's equity financing.

The existing quarterly CFA will continue to apply except in respect of amounts which are included in the daily CFA.

Part XXVII — Group Term Life Insurance Benefits

2700. Interpretation — (1) Definitions — The definitions in this subsection apply in this Part.

"lump-sum premium" in relation to a group term life insurance policy means a premium for insurance under the policy on the life of an individual where all or part of the premium is for insurance that is (or would be if the individual survived) in respect of a period that ends more than 13 months after the earlier of the day on which the premium becomes payable and the day on which it is paid.

"paid-up premium" in relation to a group term life insurance policy means a premium for insurance under the policy on the life of an individual where the insurance is for the remainder of the lifetime of the individual and no further premiums will be payable for the insurance.

"premium category" in relation to term insurance provided under a group term life insurance policy means,

(a) where the premium rate applicable in respect of term insurance on the life of an individual depends on the group to which the individual belongs, any of the groups for which a premium rate is established, and

(b) in any other case, all individuals on whose lives term insurance is in effect under the policy, and, for the purpose of this definition, a single premium rate is deemed to apply for all term insurance under a policy in respect of periods in 1994, and where individuals are divided into separate groups solely on the basis of their age, sex, or both, the groups are deemed to be a single group for which a premium rate is established.

"term insurance" in relation to an individual and a group term life insurance policy means insurance under the policy on the life of the individual, other than insurance in respect of which a lump-sum premium has become payable or been paid.

(2) Accidental death insurance — For greater certainty, a premium for insurance on the life of an individual does not include an amount for accidental death insurance.

2701. Prescribed benefit — (1) Subject to subsection (2), for the purpose of subsection 6(4) of the Act, the amount prescribed for a taxation year in respect of insurance under a group term life insurance policy on the life of a taxpayer is the total of

(a) the taxpayer's term insurance benefit under the policy for the calendar year in which the taxation year ends,

(b) the taxpayer's prepaid insurance benefit under the policy for that calendar year, and

(c) the total of all sales and excise taxes payable in respect of premiums paid under the policy in that calendar year for insurance on the life of the taxpayer, other than

(i) taxes paid, directly or by way of reimbursement, by the taxpayer, and

(ii) taxes in respect of premiums for term insurance that, if the taxpayer were to die, would be paid otherwise than

(A) to the taxpayer,

(B) for the benefit of the taxpayer,

(C) as a benefit that the taxpayer desired to have conferred on any person.

(2) Bankrupt individual — Where a taxpayer who has become a bankrupt has two taxation years ending in a calendar year, for the purpose of subsection 6(4) of the Act, the amount prescribed for the first taxation year in respect of insurance under a group term life insurance policy on the life of the taxpayer is nil.

2702. Term insurance benefit — (1) Amount of benefit — Subject to section 2704, for the purpose of paragraph 2701(1)(a), a taxpayer's term insurance benefit under a group term life insurance policy for a calendar year is

(a) where

(i) the policyholder elects to determine, under this paragraph, the term insurance benefit for the year of each individual whose life is insured under the policy,

(ii) no premium rate that applies for term insurance provided under the policy on the life of an individual in respect of the year depends on the age or sex of the individual,

(iii) no amounts are payable under the policy for term insurance on the lives of individuals in respect of the year other than premiums payable on a regular basis that are based on the amount of term insurance in force in the year for each individual, and

(iv) the year is after 1995, the amount determined by the formula

$$A - B$$

where

A is the total of the premiums payable for term insurance provided under the policy on the taxpayer's life in respect of periods in the year, to the extent that each such premium is in respect of term insurance that, if the taxpayer died in the year, would be paid to or for the benefit of the taxpayer or as a benefit that the taxpayer desired to have conferred on any person, and

B is the total amount paid by the taxpayer in respect of term insurance under the policy on the taxpayer's life in respect of the year; and

(b) in any other case, the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is, for a day in the year on which term insurance is in effect under the policy on the taxpayer's life, the amount determined by the formula

$$A \times B$$

where

A is the amount of term insurance in effect on that day under the policy on the taxpayer's life, except the portion, if any, of the amount that, if the taxpayer were to die on that day, would be paid otherwise than

(A) to the taxpayer,

(B) to benefit of the taxpayer, or

(C) as a benefit that the taxpayer desired to have conferred on any person, and

B is the average daily cost of insurance for the year for the premium category in which the taxpayer is included on that day

exceeds

(ii) the total amount paid by the taxpayer in respect of term insurance under the policy on the taxpayer's life in respect of the year.

Related Provisions: ITA 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

(2) Average daily cost of insurance — The average daily cost of insurance under a group term life insurance policy for a calendar year for a premium category is

(a) subject to paragraph (b), the amount determined by the formula

$$\frac{(A + B - C)}{D}$$

where

A is the total of the premiums payable for term insurance provided under the policy on the lives of individuals in respect of periods in the year while they are in the premium category,

B is the total of the amounts paid in the year under the policy for term insurance in respect of periods in preceding years (other than amounts that have otherwise been taken into account for the purpose of subsection 6(4) of the Act), to the extent that the total can reasonably be considered to relate to term insurance provided on the lives of individuals in the premium category,

C is the total amount of policy dividends and experience rating refunds paid in the year under the policy and not distributed to individuals whose lives are insured under the policy, to the extent that the total can reasonably be considered to relate to term insurance provided on the lives of individuals in the premium category, and

D is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of term insurance in force on a day in the year on the lives of individuals in the premium category on that day; or

(b) the amount that the policyholder determines using a reasonable method that is substantially similar to the method set out in paragraph (a).

Related Provisions: ITA 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

(3) Survivor income benefits — For the purposes of this section, where the proceeds of term insurance on the life of an individual are payable in the form of periodic payments, and the periodic payments are not an optional form of settlement of a lump-sum amount, the amount of term insurance in effect on the individual's life on any day is the present value, on that day, of the periodic payments that would be made if the individual were to die on that day.

(4) Determination of present value — For the purpose of subsection (3), the present value on a day in a calendar year

(a) shall be determined using assumptions that are reasonable at some time in the year; and

(b) may be determined assuming that an individual on whose life the present value depends is the same age on that day as on another day in the year.

2703. Prepaid insurance benefit — (1) Amount of benefit — Subject to section 2704, for the purpose of paragraph 2701(1)(b), a taxpayer's prepaid insurance benefit under a group term life insurance policy for a calendar year is

(a) where the taxpayer is alive at the end of the year, the total of all amounts each of which is

(i) a lump-sum premium (other than the taxpayer portion) paid in the year and after February 1994 in respect of insurance under the policy on the life of the taxpayer, other than a paid-up premium paid before 1997, or

(ii) 1/3 of a paid-up premium (other than the taxpayer portion) in respect of insurance under the policy on the life of the taxpayer that was paid

(A) after February 1994 and before 1997, and

(B) in the year or one of the two preceding years; and

(b) where the taxpayer died after June 1994 and in the year, the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is a lump-sum premium (other than the taxpayer portion) paid under the policy after February 1994 in respect of insurance on the life of the taxpayer

exceeds

(ii) the portion of that total that was included in computing the taxpayer's prepaid insurance benefit under the policy for preceding years.

Related Provisions: ITA 18(9.01) — Matching deduction for employer.

(2) Taxpayer portion of premiums — For the purpose of subsection (1), the taxpayer portion of a premium is the portion, if any, of the premium that the taxpayer paid, either directly or by way of reimbursement.

2704. Employee-paid insurance — (1) For the purpose of subsection 2701(1), where the full cost of insurance under a group term life insurance policy in a calendar year is borne by the individuals whose lives are insured under the policy, each individual's term insurance benefit and prepaid insurance benefit under the policy for the year is deemed to be nil.

(2) Where the premiums for part of the life insurance (in this subsection referred to as the "additional insurance") under a group term life insurance policy are determined separately from the premiums for the rest of the life insurance under the policy, and it is reasonable to consider that the individuals on whose lives the additional insurance is provided bear the full cost of the additional insurance, the additional insurance, the premiums, policy dividends and experience rating refunds in respect of that insurance, and the amounts paid in respect of that insurance by the individuals whose lives are insured, shall not be taken into account for the purposes of this Part.

2705. Prescribed premium and insurance — For the purpose of subsection 6(4) of the Act, as it applies to insurance provided in respect of periods that are in 1994 and before July 1994,

(a) a lump-sum premium paid under a group term life insurance policy after February 1994 in respect of an individual who is alive at the end of June 1994 is a prescribed premium; and

(b) insurance in respect of which a premium referred to in paragraph (a) is paid is prescribed insurance.

Proposed Amendment — Revocation of Election

Department of Finance press release, June 30, 1994: Deadline for Revocation of Election

The legislation and draft regulations will allow taxpayers conducting SR&ED in Canada to use a simpler elective method to calculate their SR&ED expenditures and the related investment tax credits. A taxpayer must elect annually to use this simpler method which is available beginning with taxation years ending after December 2, 1992. If a taxpayer wants to revoke such an election made before May 12, 1994, the Minister of National Revenue will allow the revocation provided the taxpayer requests it in writing within 90 days of this release [i.e., by September 28, 1994 — ed.].

Revenue Canada's backgrounder provides examples and explains, in a question and answer format, some of the issues relating to the elective method. It explains how to calculate the prescribed proxy amount and provides information on the new, partial investment tax credit for "shared-use equipment". The backgrounder is based on the SR&ED legislation that became law on May 12, 1994, as well as the draft regulations that were released today.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 4900(1)

Department of Finance news release, December 19, 1996:

(a) Qualified Investments

An annuity contract (including a segregated fund policy) that is issued by a person licensed or otherwise authorized under the laws of Canada or a province to carry on in Canada an annuities business will be allowed to be a qualified investment for an RRSP or RRIF trust. For such an annuity contract to be a qualified investment under an RRSP or RRIF trust under the new rules, the contract must be acquired by the trust after 1997, the trust must be the only person (other than the insurer who issued the contract) entitled to future rights or benefits under the contract, and the timing and amount of the trust's entitlements cannot be affected by the personal circumstances of any individual, other than the length of the life of the individual who was the RRSP or RRIF annuitant immediately after the contract was acquired.

This amendment will be implemented by way of an amendment to Part XLIX of the Income Tax Regulations. No change to paragraph (c) of the definition "qualified investment" in subsection 146(1) of the Act is contemplated. However, it is contemplated that subsection 146(11) of the Act will be amended to provide that it does not apply to annuity contracts issued after 1997.

(2) Notes, bonds, debentures, bankers' acceptances or similar obligations of

(a) an employer by whom payments are made in trust to a trustee under a deferred profit sharing plan or a revoked plan for the benefit of beneficiaries under the plan, or

(b) a corporation with whom that employer does not deal at arm's length are not qualified investments for the trust.

History: Subsec. 4900(2) amended by P.C. 1994-1074, subsec. 1(7), June 23, 1994, Canada Gazette Part II, July 13, 1994, applicable after 1992.

(3) For the purposes of subparagraph 204(e)(x) [204"qualified investment"(i)] of the Act, a contract with a person licensed or otherwise authorized under the laws of Canada or a province to carry on in Canada an annuities business for an annuity payable to an employee or other beneficiary under a deferred profit sharing plan commencing not later than a day 71 years after the day of his birth, the guaranteed term of which, if any, does not exceed 15 years is a qualified investment for a trust governed by such a plan or revoked plan.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 4900(3)

(3) For the purpose of paragraph (i) of the definition "qualified investment" in section 204 of the Act, a contract with a licensed annuities provider for an annuity payable to an employee who is a beneficiary under a deferred profit sharing plan beginning not later than the end of the year in which the employee attains 69 years of age, the guaranteed term of which, if any, does not exceed 15 years, is prescribed as a qualified investment for a trust governed by such a plan or revoked plan.

Application: The June 26, 1998 draft regulations (retirement savings), s. 1, will amend subsec. 4900(3) to read as above, applicable to annuity contracts acquired after 1996, except that

(a) the amendment does not apply to a contract where the annuitant attained 70 years of age before 1997; and

(b) in applying the subsec. to a contract where the annuitant attained 69 years of age in 1996, the reference to "69 years of age" shall be read as a reference to "70 years of age".

Technical Notes: Subsection 4900(3) provides that a contract for an annuity purchased from a licensed annuities provider is a qualified investment for a trust governed by a deferred profit sharing plan (DPSP) or a revoked plan if certain conditions are satisfied. One of the conditions is that the contract must provide for payment of the annuity to commence no later than the annuitant's 71st birthday.

This condition is amended for contracts acquired after 1996. It is amended to require that, if the annuitant had not turned 69 years of age by the end of 1996, the contract provide for payment of the annuity to commence by the end of the year in which the annuitant turns 69. If the annuitant turned 69 in 1996, it must provide for payment to commence by the end of 1997.

(v) an insurance corporation, or

(vi) a corporation the principal business of which is the lending of money or the purchasing of debt obligations or a combination thereof,

Application: The June 1, 1995 draft regulations (securities held by financial institutions), s. 5, will amend para. (c) of the definition "eligible corporation" in subsec. 5100(1) to read as above, applicable after February 22, 1994.

Technical Notes: Subsection 5100(1) defines the expression "eligible corporation". This expression is relevant for various rules relating to investments made by registered retirement savings plans and other deferred income plans. Paragraph (c) of the definition provides that the expression does not include a corporation described in subsection 39(5) of the Act. These are financial institutions — banks, trust companies, credit unions, insurance corporations and money-lenders — and also traders or dealers in securities.

Subparagraph 39(5) of the Act is being amended to replace several of its paragraphs by a reference to "financial institutions" (as defined in subsection 142.2(1) of the Act). Consequently, paragraph (c) of the definition of "eligible corporation" is amended to specifically list the types of corporations that are excluded.

Proposed Amendment — Mutual fund corporations

Letter from Department of Finance, June 18, 1997:

Robert Spindler
Chair, Tax Committee, CICA
Norman Loveland
Chair, Taxation Section, Canadian Bar Association

Dear Messrs. Spindler and Loveland:

. . . .

With respect to the LSVCC rules, you have suggested that the definition of "eligible corporation" in Part LI of the Income Tax Regulations be clarified to ensure that mutual fund corporations are not excluded from the scope of that definition. Such a change would ensure that shares in the capital stock of labour-sponsored venture capital corporations can potentially give rise to increased foreign property limits under Part XI of the Income Tax Act. We agree that this would be consistent to subsection 39(4) of the Act. Accordingly, we will recommend that this change be made.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber
Director General
Tax Legislation Division

5202. Interpretation — In this Part, except as otherwise provided in section 5203 or 5204,

"adjusted business income" of a corporation for a taxation year means the amount, if any, by which

(a) the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the income of the corporation for the year from an active business carried on in Canada

exceeds

(b) the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the loss of the corporation for the year from an active business carried on in Canada;

"Canadian resource profits" has the meaning that would be assigned to the expression "resource profits" by section 1204 if

(a) section 1204 were read without reference to subparagraph 1204(1)(b)(iv), and

(b) the definition "resource activity" in subsection 1206(1) were read without reference to paragraph (d) of that definition;

History: The definition "Canadian resource profits" in s. 5202 amended by P.C. 1996-1488, s. 6, September 24, 1996, Canada Gazette, Part II, October 16, 1996, applicable to taxation years that begin after December 20, 1991.

(b) the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the rental cost incurred by the corporation during the year for the use of any property a portion of the gross cost of which would be included by virtue of paragraph (a) if the property were owned by the corporation at the end of the year, but for the purposes of this definition, the gross cost of a property or rental cost for the use of any property does not include that portion of those costs that reflects the extent to which the property was used by the corporation during the year

(a) the salaries and wages included in the calculation thereof were paid or payable to persons for the portion of their time that they were directly engaged in qualified activities of the corporation during the year, and

(b) the other amounts included in the calculation thereof were paid or payable to persons for the performance of functions that would be directly related to qualified activities of the corporation during the year if those persons were employees of the corporation, but the amount so calculated shall not exceed the cost of labour of the corporation for the year;

(b) from another person with whom the particular person was not dealing at arm's length (otherwise than by reason of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b) of the Act) immediately after the property was acquired, the capital cost to the particular person of the property for the purposes of this definition shall be computed as if the property had been acquired at a capital cost equal to the gross cost of the property to the person from whom the property was acquired by the particular person;

Proposed Addition — Reg. 5203(1)"adjusted business income"(d)

(d) all amounts each of which is included under paragraph 12(1)(z.5) in computing the taxpayer's income for the year;

Application: The December 5, 1996 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (Appendix A), s. 8, will add para. (d) to the definition "adjusted business income" in subsec. 5203(1), applicable to taxation years that begin after 1996.

The definition "adjusted business income" in section 5203, which applies only for taxpayers that engage in resource activities, is amended to ensure that the taxpayer's income under paragraph 12(1)(z.5) of the Act is disregarded for this purpose. Proposed Amendment — Reg. 5300

5300. For the purposes of subsections 155(2), 156(3) and 161(9) of the Act, the instalment base of an individual for a taxation year is the amount by which

(a) the individual's tax payable under Part I of the Act for the year, determined before taking into consideration the specified future tax consequences for the year

exceeds

(b) the amount deemed by subsection 120(2) of the Act to have been paid on account of the individual's tax under Part I of the Act for the year, determined before taking into consideration the specified future tax consequences for the year.

Application: The December 5, 1996 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (Appendix C), s. 1, will amend s. 5300 to read as above, applicable for the purpose of computing instalments of tax payable for 1997 et seq.

Technical Notes: Under section 156 of the Act, an individual is permitted to remit quarterly tax instalments for a taxation year on the basis of the individual's "instalment base" for the preceding taxation year. The liability of farmers and fishermen is likewise computed with reference to the "instalment base". For these purposes, an individual's "instalment base" is defined under section 5300. Subject to a number of adjustments, an individual's "instalment base" for a taxation year is the individual's tax payable for the year.

Section 5300 is amended so that an individual's "instalment base" for a taxation year is computed before considering the consequences of reductions of amounts purported to be renounced after the beginning of the year pursuant to the new one year look-back rule described in the commentary to amended subsection 66(12.66) of the Act. These consequences are now included in the definition "specified future tax consequence" in subsection 248(1) of the Act. (For further detail, see the commentary on that definition.)

Section 5300 has also been amended to remove a number of references to provisions of the Act that are no longer in operation.

Related Provisions: ITA 248(1) — Definition of "specified future tax consequence".

5301. Corporations under Part I of the Act — (1) Subject to subsections (6) and (8), for the purposes of subsections 157(4) and 161(9) of the Act, the first instalment base of a corporation for a particular taxation year means the product obtained when the aggregate of

(a) the tax payable under Part I of the Act (as defined in subsection (10)) by the corporation for its taxation year preceding the particular year, and

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 5301(1)(a)

(a) the tax payable under Part I of the Act by the corporation for its taxation year preceding the particular year, and

Application: The December 5, 1996 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (Appendix C), subsec. 2(1), will amend para. 5301(1)(a) to read as above, applicable to 1996 et seq.

Technical Notes: Under section 157 of the Act, a corporation is permitted to remit monthly tax instalments for a taxation year on the basis of its "first instalment base" and "second instalment base" for the year. Subject to a number of adjustments, a corporation's "first instalment base" for a taxation year is generally defined under section 5301 as the corporation's tax payable for the preceding year. Similarly, a corporation's "second instalment base" for a taxation year is generally defined as the corporation's tax payable for the second preceding taxation year.

Section 5301 is amended so that the total of a corporation's taxes payable for a taxation year under Part I, I.3 and VI of the Act is, for these purposes, determined before taking into consideration "specified future tax consequences" for the year. As described in greater detail in the new definition of the latter expression in subsection 248(1) of the Act, "specified future tax consequences" refer to adjustments arising because of the carryback of losses or similar amounts or because of corrections of certain amounts renounced in connection with the issue of flow-through shares. (For further detail, see the commentary on that definition.)

(b) the total of the taxes payable by the corporation under Parts I.3, VI and VI.1 of the Act for its taxation year preceding the particular year is multiplied by the ratio that 365 is of the number of days in that preceding year.

History: Paras. 5301(1)(a) and (b) substituted by P.C. 1994-556, subsec. 1(1), April 14, 1994, Canada Gazette, Part II, May 4, 1994, applicable in computing the "first instalment base" and "second instalment base", within the meanings assigned by Part LIII, for taxation years ending after June 1989, except that in its application to any of those taxation years ending before 1992, the reference to "Parts I.3, VI and VI.1" in para. 5301(1)(b) shall be read as a reference to "Part VI.1".

Subsec. 5301(1) substituted by P.C. 1988-390, subsec. 27(1), March 3, 1988, Canada Gazette, Part II, March 16, 1988, applicable to 1985 et seq.

Subsec. 5301(1) substituted by P.C. 1985-2277, subsec. 16(1), July 24, 1985, Canada Gazette, Part II, August 7, 1985, applicable with respect to amounts deducted under ss. 127.2 and 127.3 of the Act in respect of shares, debt obligations and rights acquired after February 15, 1984, other than shares, debt obligations or rights acquired before March 1, 1984 where arrangements, evidenced in writing, for the issue of the shares or debt obligations or granting of the rights were substantially advanced before February 16, 1984; and with re-

(ii) the first taxation year of the foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time when that taxation year would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation year of the foreign affiliate.

(3) Notwithstanding subsections (1) and (2), for the purposes of the definitions "exempt deficit", "exempt surplus", "taxable deficit" and "taxable surplus" in subsection 5907(1), any amount designated pursuant to subsection 5900(2) in respect of a dividend paid by a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada increases the portion of the whole dividend deemed to have been paid out of the affiliate's taxable surplus in respect of the corporation and decrease the portion of the whole dividend deemed to have been paid out of the affiliate's exempt surplus in respect of the corporation.

History: Subsec. 5901(3) amended by P.C. 1997-1670, s. 3, November 20, 1997, Canada Gazette, Part II, December 10, 1997, applicable to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that begin after 1994, except that

(a) the subsec. as amended applies to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that end after 1994 where there has been a change in the taxation year of the foreign affiliate in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, unless

(i) the foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation, or

5902. Election in respect of capital gains — (1) Where at any time a dividend is, by virtue of an election made under subsection 93(1) of the Act in respect of a disposition, deemed to have been received on one or more shares of a class of the capital stock of a particular foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada, the following rules apply:

(a) determine the amounts that would be the particular affiliate's exempt surplus or exempt deficit, taxable surplus or taxable deficit, underlying foreign tax and net surplus in respect of the corporation at that time if

(i) each other foreign affiliate of the corporation in which the affiliate had an equity percentage had immediately before that time paid a dividend equal to its net surplus in respect of the corporation immediately before the dividend was paid, and

(ii) any dividend referred to in subparagraph (i) that any other foreign affiliate would have received had been received by it immediately before any such dividend that it would have paid;

(b) determine the amount that would have been received on the shares (of that class) in respect of which an election is made, if the particular affiliate had at that time paid dividends the aggregate of which on all shares of its capital stock was equal to the amount of its net surplus referred to in paragraph (a); and

(c) for the purposes only of subsection 5900(1), in applying the provisions of subsection 5901(1)

(i) the particular affiliate's exempt surplus or exempt deficit, taxable surplus or taxable deficit and underlying foreign tax in respect of the corporation shall be deemed to be the respective amounts thereof referred to in paragraph (a), and

(ii) the particular affiliate shall be deemed to have paid a whole dividend at that time on the shares of that class of its capital stock in an amount equal to the product obtained when the aggregate of amounts so deemed by subsection 93(1) of the Act to have been received as dividends on shares of that class is multiplied by the greater of

(A) one, and

(B) the proportion that the amount of the particular affiliate's net surplus determined under paragraph (a) is of the amount determined under paragraph (b), except that where the amount determined under paragraph (b) is less than one, the amount determined under paragraph (b) is deemed for the purpose of this clause to be one.

(2) For the purposes of paragraphs (1)(a) and (b),

(a) in determining the exempt surplus or exempt deficit, the taxable surplus or taxable deficit, the underlying foreign tax and the net surplus of a particular foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada in which any other foreign affiliate of the taxpayer has an equity percentage, no amount shall be included in respect of any distribution that would be received by the particular affiliate from such other affiliate; and

(b) if any foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada has issued shares of more than one class of its capital stock, the amount that would be paid as a dividend on the shares of any class is such portion of its exempt surplus or exempt deficit and its taxable surplus (including underlying foreign tax applicable) or taxable deficit (and thus net surplus) as, in the circumstances, it might reasonably be expected to have paid on all the shares of that class.

(3) Where an election under subsection 93(1) of the Act is made by a corporation resident in Canada in respect of the disposition of a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation, no adjustment shall be made to the affiliate's exempt surplus, exempt deficit, taxable surplus, taxable deficit or underlying foreign tax in respect of the corporation as a consequence of the election except as provided in subsections 5905(2), (5) and (8).

(4) [Revoked]

(5) Any election under subsection 93(1) of the Act by a corporation resident in Canada in respect of any share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation disposed of by it or by another foreign affiliate of the corporation shall be made by filing the prescribed form with the Minister on or before the day that is the later of

(a) December 31, 1989; and

(b) where the election is made

(i) in respect of a share disposed of by the corporation, the day on or before which the corporation's return of income for its taxation year in which the disposition was made is required to be filed pursuant to subsection 150(1) of the Act, or

(ii) in respect of a share disposed of by another foreign affiliate of the corporation, the day on or before which the corporation's return of income for its taxation year, in which the taxation year of the foreign affiliate in which the disposition was made ends, is required to be filed pursuant to subsection 150(1) of the Act, as the case may be.

(6) Where at any time a corporation resident in Canada is deemed by virtue of subsection 93(1.1) of the Act to have made an election under subsection 93(1) of the Act in respect of a share of the capital stock of a particular foreign affiliate of the corporation disposed of by another foreign affiliate of the corporation, the amount deemed to have been designated in the election is hereby prescribed to be the lesser of

(a) the capital gain, if any, otherwise determined in respect of the disposition of the share; and

(b) the amount that could reasonably be expected to have been received in respect of the share if the particular affiliate had at that time paid dividends the aggregate of which on all shares of its capital stock was equal to the amount determined under paragraph (1)(a) to be its net surplus in respect of the corporation for the purposes of the election.

Deductible loss — (1) For the purpose of the description of F in the definition "foreign accrual property income" in subsection 95(1) of the Act, the amount prescribed to be the deductible loss of a particular foreign affiliate of a taxpayer for a taxation year and the five immediately preceding taxation years (each of which preceding taxation years is referred to in this subsection as a "preceding year") is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, determined in respect of the particular affiliate in respect of a preceding year during which it was a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer or of a person described in any of subparagraphs 95(2)(f)(iv) to (vii) of the Act, by which

(i) the total of the amounts determined for D and E in the definition "foreign accrual property income" in subsection 95(1) of the Act in respect of the particular affiliate for the preceding year

5904. Participating percentage — (1) For the purpose of subparagraph (b)(ii) of the definition "participating percentage" in subsection 95(1) of the Act, the participating percentage of a particular share owned by a taxpayer of the capital stock of a corporation in respect of any foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that was, at the end of its taxation year, a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer is prescribed to be the percentage that would be the taxpayer's equity percentage in the affiliate at that time on the assumption that

(a) the taxpayer owned no shares other than the particular share;

(b) the direct equity percentage of a person in any foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, for which the total of the distribution entitlements of all the shares of all classes of the capital stock of the affiliate was greater than nil, was determined by the following rules and not by the rules contained in the definition "direct equity percentage" in subsection 95(4) of the Act:

(i) for each class of the capital stock of the affiliate, determine that amount that is the proportion of the distribution entitlement of all the shares of that class that the number of shares of that class owned by that person is of all the issued shares of that class, and

(ii) determine the proportion that

(A) the aggregate of the amounts determined under subparagraph (i) for each class of the capital stock of the affiliate

is of

(B) the aggregate of the distribution entitlements of all the issued shares of all classes of the capital stock of the affiliate and the proportion determined under subparagraph (ii) when expressed as a percentage is that person's direct equity percentage in the affiliate; and

(c) the direct equity percentage of a person in any foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, for which the total of the distribution entitlements of all the shares of all classes of the capital stock of the affiliate was not greater than nil, was determined by the rules contained in the definition "direct equity percentage" in subsection 95(1) of the Act.

History: That portion of subsec. 5904(1) before subpara (b)(i), and para. (c), amended by P.C. 1997-1670, subsecs. 6(1), (2), November 20, 1997, Canada Gazette, Part II, December 10, 1997, applicable to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that begin after 1994, except that

(a) the amended portions apply to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that end after 1994 where there has been a change in the taxation year of the foreign affiliate in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, unless

(i) the foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation, or

(ii) the first taxation year of the foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time when that taxation year would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation year of the foreign affiliate.

All that portion of para. 5904(1)(b) preceding subpara. (i), and para. 5904(1)(c) substituted by P.C. 1980-503, s. 3, February 8, 1980, Canada Gazette, Part II, February 27, 1980, effective in respect of 1976 et seq.

(2) For the purposes of this section, the distribution entitlement of all the shares of a class of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer at the end of its taxation year is the aggregate of

(a) the distributions made during the year by the affiliate to holders of shares of that class; and

(b) the amount that the affiliate might reasonably be expected to distribute to holders of shares of that class immediately after the end of the year if at that time it had distributed to its shareholders an amount equal to the aggregate of

(i) the amount, if any, by which the net surplus of the affiliate in respect of the taxpayer at the end of the year, computed as though any adjustments resulting from the provisions of sections 5902 and 5905 and subsections 5907(2.1) and (2.2) and any references thereto during the year were ignored, exceeds the net surplus of the affiliate in respect of the taxpayer at the end of its immediately preceding taxation year, and

(ii) the amount that the affiliate would receive if at that time each controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in which the affiliate had an equity percentage had distributed to its shareholders an amount equal to the aggregate of

(A) the amount that would be determined under subparagraph (i) for the controlled foreign affiliate if the controlled foreign affiliate were the foreign affiliate referred to in subparagraph (i), for each of the taxation years of the controlled foreign affiliate ending in the taxation year of the affiliate, and

(B) each such amount that the controlled foreign affiliate would receive from any other controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in which it had an equity percentage.

History: Subpara. 5904(2)(b)(i) substituted by P.C. 1978-3599, s. 1, November 30, 1978, Canada Gazette, Part II, December 13, 1978, effective for 1978 et seq.

(3) For the purposes of subsection (2),

(a) the net surplus of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer who is an individual, in respect of that individual, shall be computed as if that individual were a corporation resident in Canada;

(b) in computing the net surplus of a particular foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada in which any other foreign affiliate of the taxpayer has an equity percentage, no amount shall be included in respect of any distribution that would be received by the particular affiliate from such other affiliate;

(c) if any controlled foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada has issued shares of more than one class of its capital stock, the amount that would be distributed to the holders of shares of any class is such portion of the amount determined under subparagraph (2)(b)(ii) as, in the circumstances, it might reasonably be expected to distribute to the holders of those shares; and

(d) in determining the distribution entitlement

(i) of a class of shares of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate that is entitled to cumulative dividends, the amount of any distribution referred to in paragraph (2)(a) shall be deemed not to include any distribution in respect of such class that is, or would, if it were made, be referable to profits of a preceding taxation year, and

(ii) of any other class of shares of the capital stock of the affiliate, the net surplus of the affiliate at the end of the year referred to in subparagraph (2)(b)(i) shall be deemed not to have been reduced by any distribution described in subparagraph (i) with respect to a class of shares that is entitled to cumulative dividends to the extent that the distribution was referable to profits of a preceding taxation year.

5905. Special rules — (1) Where at any time, other than in the course of a transaction to which subsection (2) or (5) applies, a corporation resident in Canada or a foreign affiliate of such a corporation acquires in any manner whatever shares of the capital stock of another corporation that was a foreign affiliate of the corporation immediately before that time (in this subsection referred to as the "acquired affiliate") and as a result thereof the surplus entitlement percentage of the corporation in respect of the acquired affiliate increases, for the purposes of this Part, the exempt surplus or exempt deficit, the taxable surplus or taxable deficit and the underlying foreign tax, in respect of the corporation, of the acquired affiliate and of each other foreign affiliate of the corporation in which the acquired affiliate has an equity percentage (in this subsection referred to as the "other affiliate"), other than an acquired affiliate or other affiliate in respect of which subsection (8) applies, shall at that time be reduced to the proportion of the amount thereof otherwise determined that

(a) the surplus entitlement percentage immediately before that time of the corporation in respect of the acquired affiliate or the other affiliate, as the case may be, determined on the assumption that the taxation year of the acquired affiliate or the other affiliate, as the case may be, that otherwise would have included that time had ended immediately before that time,

(b) the surplus entitlement percentage immediately after that time of the corporation in respect of the acquired affiliate or the other affiliate, as the case may be, determined on the assumption that the taxation year of the acquired affiliate or the other affiliate, as the case may be, that otherwise would have included that time had ended immediately after that time, and, for the purposes of the definitions "exempt deficit", "exempt surplus", "taxable deficit", "taxable surplus" and "underlying foreign tax" in subsection 5907(1), those reduced amounts are referred to as the opening exempt deficit, opening exempt surplus, opening taxable deficit, opening taxable surplus and opening underlying foreign tax, as the case may be, of each of those affiliates in respect of the corporation.

History: The closing words of subsec. 5905(1) amended by P.C. 1997-1670, subsec. 7(1), November 20, 1997, Canada Gazette, Part II, December 10, 1997, applicable to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that begin after 1994, except that

(a) the amendment applies to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that end after 1994 where there has been a change in the taxation year of the foreign affiliate in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, unless

(i) the foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation, or

(ii) the first taxation year of the foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time when that taxation year would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation year of the foreign affiliate.

For earlier history, see at end of s. 5905.

(2) Where at any time a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada redeems, acquires or cancels in any manner whatever (otherwise than by way of a winding-up) any of the shares of any class of its capital stock (other than shares redeemed or cancelled that the affiliate had previously purchased or acquired and that were held by it until that time and in respect of which an adjustment has previously been made under this subsection or subsection (1) as it read prior to November 13, 1981), the following rules apply:

(a) where, by virtue of an election made by the corporation under subsection 93(1) of the Act, a dividend is deemed to have been received on one or more of the shares of the foreign affiliate that were disposed of by the corporation or another foreign affiliate of the corporation (in this paragraph referred to as the "transferor") by virtue of the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of such share or shares by the foreign affiliate, for the purposes of the adjustment required by paragraph (b),

(i) immediately before that time there is included under subparagraph (v) of the description of B in the definition "exempt surplus" in subsection 5907(1) in computing the affiliate's exempt surplus or exempt deficit, as the case may be, in respect of the corporation an amount equal to the product obtained when the specified adjustment factor in respect of the disposition is multiplied by the total of all amounts each of which is the portion of any such dividend that is prescribed by paragraph 5900(1)(a) to have been paid out of the exempt surplus of the affiliate,

(ii) immediately before that time there is included under subparagraph (v) of the description of B in the definition "taxable surplus" in subsection 5907(1) in computing the affiliate's taxable surplus or taxable deficit, as the case may be, in respect of the corporation an amount equal to the product obtained when the specified adjustment factor in respect of the disposition is multiplied by the total of all amounts each of which is the portion of any such dividend that is prescribed by paragraph 5900(1)(b) to have been paid out of the taxable surplus of the affiliate, and

(iii) immediately before that time there shall be deducted from the amount, if any, otherwise determined to be the underlying foreign tax of the affiliate in respect of the corporation an amount equal to the product obtained when the specified adjustment factor in respect of the disposition is multiplied by the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the amount prescribed by paragraph 5900(1)(d) to be the foreign tax applicable to such portion of any such dividend as is prescribed by paragraph 5900(1)(b) to have been paid out of the taxable surplus of the affiliate, and, for the purposes of subparagraphs (i) to (iii), the specified adjustment factor in respect of the disposition is the amount equal to the quotient obtained when,

(iv) where the transferor is the corporation, 100 per cent, and

(v) where the transferor is another foreign affiliate of the corporation, the surplus entitlement percentage of the corporation in respect of the transferor immediately before the disposition,

is divided by

(vi) the surplus entitlement percentage of the corporation in respect of the foreign affiliate immediately before the disposition;

(b) the exempt surplus or exempt deficit, the taxable surplus or taxable deficit and the underlying foreign tax, in respect of the corporation, of the affiliate and of each other foreign affiliate of the corporation in which the affiliate has an equity percentage (in this subsection referred to as the "other affiliate") shall at that time be adjusted to the proportion of the amount thereof otherwise determined that

(i) the surplus entitlement percentage immediately before that time of the corporation in respect of the affiliate or the other affiliate, as the case may be, determined on the assumption that the taxation year of the affiliate or the other affiliate, as the case may be, that otherwise would have included that time had ended immediately before that time,

(ii) the surplus entitlement percentage immediately after that time of the corporation in respect of the affiliate or the other affiliate, as the case may be, determined on the assumption that the taxation year of the affiliate or the other affiliate, as the case may be, that otherwise would have included that time had ended immediately after that time; and

(c) for the purposes of the definitions "exempt deficit", "exempt surplus", "taxable deficit", "taxable surplus" and "underlying foreign tax" in subsection 5907(1), the amounts determined under paragraph (b) are referred to as the opening exempt deficit, opening exempt surplus, opening taxable deficit, opening taxable surplus and opening underlying foreign tax, as the case may be, of the affiliate and each other affiliate in respect of the corporation resident in Canada.

History: Subparas. 5905(2)(a)(i), (ii) and para. (2)(c) amended by P.C. 1997-1670, subsecs. 7(2), (3), November 20, 1997, Canada Gazette, Part II, December 10, 1997, applicable to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that begin after 1994, except that

For earlier history, see at end of s. 5905.

(3) Where at any time a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada has been formed as a result of a foreign merger (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(8.1) of the Act) of two or more corporations (each of which in this subsection and subsection (4) is referred to as a "predecessor corporation"), for the purposes of this Part, the following rules apply:

(a) in respect of the foreign affiliate,

(i) its opening exempt surplus in respect of the corporation shall be the amount, if any, by which the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the exempt surplus of a predecessor corporation that was a foreign affiliate of the corporation immediately before the merger exceeds the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the exempt deficit of a predecessor corporation that was a foreign affiliate of the corporation immediately before the merger,

(ii) its opening exempt deficit in respect of the corporation shall be the amount, if any, by which the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the exempt deficit of a predecessor corporation that was a foreign affiliate of the corporation immediately before the merger exceeds the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the exempt surplus of a predecessor corporation that was a foreign affiliate of the corporation immediately before the merger,

(iii) its opening taxable surplus in respect of the corporation shall be the amount, if any, by which the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the taxable surplus of a predecessor corporation that was a foreign affiliate of the corporation immediately before the merger exceeds the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the taxable deficit of a predecessor corporation that was a foreign affiliate of the corporation immediately before the merger,

(v) its opening underlying foreign tax in respect of the corporation shall be the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the underlying foreign tax of a predecessor corporation that was a foreign affiliate of the corporation immediately before the merger; and

(b) in respect of any other foreign affiliate of the corporation, other than a predecessor corporation, in which a predecessor corporation had an equity percentage immediately before the merger, the exempt surplus or exempt deficit, the taxable surplus or taxable deficit and the underlying foreign tax of the other affiliate in respect of the corporation shall at that time be adjusted to the proportion of the amount thereof otherwise determined that

(i) the surplus entitlement percentage immediately before that time of the corporation in respect of the other affiliate, determined on the assumption that the taxation year of the other affiliate that otherwise would have included that time had ended immediately before that time,

(ii) the surplus entitlement percentage immediately after that time of the corporation in respect of the other affiliate, determined on the assumption that the taxation year of the other affiliate that otherwise would have included that time had ended immediately after that time,

and, for the purposes of the definitions "exempt deficit", "exempt surplus", "taxable deficit", "taxable surplus" and "underlying foreign tax" in subsection 5907(1), the adjusted amounts are referred to as the opening exempt deficit, opening exempt surplus, opening taxable deficit, opening taxable surplus and opening underlying foreign tax, as the case may be, of the other affiliate in respect of the corporation resident in Canada.

History: The closing words of para. 5905(3)(b) amended by P.C. 1997-1670, subsecs. 7(2), (3), November 20, 1997, Canada Gazette, Part II, December 10, 1997, applicable to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that begin after 1994, except that

(a) the amendments apply to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that end after 1994 where there has been a change in the taxation year of the foreign affiliate in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, unless

(i) the foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation, or

(ii) the first taxation year of the foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time when that taxation year would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation year of the foreign affiliate.

For earlier history, see at end of s. 5905.

(4) For the purposes of paragraph (3)(a), the exempt surplus, exempt deficit, taxable surplus, taxable deficit and underlying foreign tax of each predecessor corporation immediately before the foreign merger shall be deemed to be the proportion of the amount thereof otherwise determined that

(a) the surplus entitlement percentage of the corporation resident in Canada immediately before the merger in respect of the predecessor corporation, determined on the assumption that the taxation year of the predecessor corporation that otherwise would have included the time of the merger had ended immediately before that time,

is of

(b) the percentage that would be the surplus entitlement percentage of the corporation resident in Canada immediately after the merger in respect of the foreign affiliate of the corporation formed as a result of the merger if the net surplus of such foreign affiliate were the aggregate of all amounts, each of which is the net surplus of a predecessor corporation immediately before the merger.

(5) Where at any time

(a) there is a disposition by a corporation resident in Canada (in this subsection referred to as the "predecessor corporation") of any of the shares owned by it of the capital stock of a particular foreign affiliate of it to a taxable Canadian corporation with which the predecessor corporation was not dealing at arm's length (in this subsection referred to as the "acquiring corporation"),

(b) there is an amalgamation, to which section 87 of the Act applies, of two or more corporations (each of which in this subsection is referred to as a "predecessor corporation") to form a new corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "acquiring corporation") as a result of which shares of the capital stock of a particular foreign affiliate of a predecessor corporation become the property of the acquiring corporation, or

(c) there is a winding-up, to which subsection 88(1) of the Act applies, of a corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "predecessor corporation") into another corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "acquiring corporation") as a result of which shares of the capital stock of a particular foreign affiliate of the predecessor corporation become the property of the acquiring corporation, the following rules apply for the purposes of this Part in respect of the particular affiliate and each other foreign affiliate of the predecessor corporation in which the particular affiliate has an equity percentage:

(d) its opening exempt surplus in respect of the acquiring corporation shall be the amount, if any, by which the aggregate of its exempt surplus in respect of each predecessor corporation and in respect of the acquiring corporation immediately before any of the transactions referred to in paragraph (a), (b) or (c) exceeds the aggregate of its exempt deficit in respect of each predecessor corporation and in respect of the acquiring corporation immediately before any of the transactions referred to in paragraph (a), (b) or (c);

(e) its opening exempt deficit in respect of the acquiring corporation shall be the amount, if any, by which the aggregate of its exempt deficit in respect of each predecessor corporation and in respect of the acquiring corporation immediately before any of the transactions referred to in paragraph (a), (b) or (c) exceeds the aggregate of its exempt surplus in respect of each predecessor corporation and in respect of the acquiring corporation immediately before any of the transactions referred to in paragraph (a), (b) or (c);

(f) its opening taxable surplus in respect of the acquiring corporation shall be the amount, if any, by which the aggregate of its taxable surplus in respect of each predecessor corporation and in respect of the acquiring corporation immediately before any of the transactions referred to in paragraph (a), (b) or (c) exceeds the aggregate of its taxable deficit in respect of each predecessor corporation and in respect of the acquiring corporation immediately before any of the transactions referred to in paragraph (a), (b) or (c);

(g) its opening taxable deficit in respect of the acquiring corporation shall be the amount, if any, by which the aggregate of its taxable deficit in respect of each predecessor corporation and in respect of the acquiring corporation immediately before any of the transactions referred to in paragraph (a), (b) or (c) exceeds the aggregate of its taxable surplus in respect of each predecessor corporation and in respect of the acquiring corporation immediately before any of the transactions referred to in paragraph (a), (b) or (c); and

(h) its opening underlying foreign tax in respect of the acquiring corporation shall be the aggregate of its underlying foreign tax in respect of each predecessor corporation and in respect of the acquiring corporation immediately before any of the transactions referred to in paragraph (a), (b) or (c).

(6) For the purposes of subsection (5), the following rules apply:

(a) where paragraph (5)(a) is applicable and the predecessor corporation is, by virtue of an election made under subsection 93(1) of the Act, deemed to have received a dividend on one or more of the shares of the particular affiliate disposed of in the transaction, for the purposes of the adjustment required by paragraph (b),

(i) immediately before the time of the transaction there shall be included under subparagraph (v) of the description of B in the definition "exempt surplus" in subsection 5907(1) in computing the particular affiliate's exempt surplus or exempt deficit, as the case may be, in respect of the predecessor corporation an amount equal to the quotient obtained when

(A) such portion of the dividend as is prescribed by paragraph 5900(1)(a) to have been paid out of the exempt surplus of the particular affiliate

is divided by

(B) the surplus entitlement percentage of the predecessor corporation in respect of the particular affiliate immediately before the disposition, determined on the assumption that the shares disposed of by the predecessor corporation were the only shares owned by it immediately before the time of the transaction,

(ii) immediately before the time of the transaction there shall be included under subparagraph (v) of the description of B in the definition "taxable surplus" in subsection 5907(1) in computing the particular affiliate's taxable surplus or taxable deficit, as the case may be, in respect of the predecessor corporation an amount equal to the quotient obtained when

(A) such portion of the dividend as is prescribed by paragraph 5900(1)(b) to have been paid out of the taxable surplus of the particular affiliate

is divided by

(B) the surplus entitlement percentage referred to in clause (i)(B), and

(iii) immediately before the time of the transaction there shall be deducted from the amount, if any, otherwise determined to be the underlying foreign tax of the particular affiliate in respect of the predecessor corporation an amount equal to the quotient obtained when

(A) the amount prescribed by paragraph 5900(1)(d) to be the foreign tax applicable to such portion of the dividend as is prescribed by paragraph 5900(1)(b) to have been paid out of the taxable surplus of the particular affiliate

(B) the surplus entitlement percentage referred to in clause (i)(B); and

(b) the exempt surplus, exempt deficit, taxable surplus, taxable deficit and underlying foreign tax of an affiliate in respect of a predecessor corporation (within the meaning assigned by subsection (5)) and the acquiring corporation (within the meaning assigned by subsection (5)) shall be deemed to be the proportion of the amount thereof otherwise determined that

(i) the surplus entitlement percentage immediately before the time of the latest of the transactions referred to in paragraph (5)(a), (b) or (c) of the predecessor corporation or the acquiring corporation, as the case may be, in respect of the affiliate, determined on the assumption

(A) that the taxation year of the affiliate that otherwise would have included that time had ended immediately before that time, and

(B) where the transaction is one referred to in paragraph (5)(a), that the shares referred to therein were the only shares owned by the predecessor corporation immediately before that time,

is of

(ii) the surplus entitlement percentage immediately after the time of the latest of the transactions referred to in paragraph (5)(a), (b) or (c) of the acquiring corporation in respect of the affiliate, determined on the assumption that the taxation year of the affiliate that otherwise would have included that time had ended immediately after that time.

History: The opening words of subparas. 5905(6)(a)(i), (ii) amended by P.C. 1997-1670, subsecs. 7(5), (6), November 20, 1997, Canada Gazette, Part II, December 10, 1997, applicable to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that begin after 1994, except that

(a) the subparas. as amended apply to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that end after 1994 where there has been a change in the taxation year of the foreign affiliate in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, unless

(i) the foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation, or

(ii) the first taxation year of the foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time when that taxation year would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation year of the foreign affiliate.

For earlier history, see at end of s. 5905.

(7) Where at any time there has been a dissolution of a foreign affiliate (in this subsection referred to as the "dissolved affiliate") of a corporation resident in Canada and paragraph 95(2)(e.1) of the Act is applicable in respect of the dissolution, each other foreign affiliate of the corporation that had a direct equity percentage in the dissolved affiliate immediately before that time shall, for the purposes of computing its exempt surplus or exempt deficit, taxable surplus or taxable deficit and underlying foreign tax in respect of the corporation, be deemed to have received dividends immediately before that time the aggregate of which is equal to the amount it might reasonably have expected to receive if the dissolved affiliate had, immediately before that time, paid dividends the aggregate of which on all shares of its capital stock was equal to the amount of its net surplus in respect of the corporation immediately before that time, determined on the assumption that the taxation year of the dissolved affiliate that otherwise would have included that time had ended immediately before that time.

(8) Where at any time a dividend is, by virtue of an election made by a corporation under subsection 93(1) of the Act, deemed to have been received on one or more shares of a class of the capital stock of a particular foreign affiliate of the corporation disposed of to the corporation or another foreign affiliate of the corporation, the following rules apply:

(a) for the purposes of the adjustment required by paragraph (b),

(i) immediately before that time there shall be included under subparagraph (v) of the description of B in the definition "exempt surplus" in subsection 5907(1 in computing the particular affiliate's exempt surplus or exempt deficit, as the case may be, in respect of the corporation an amount equal to the product obtained when the specified adjustment factor in respect of the disposition is multiplied by the total of all amounts each of which is the portion of any such dividend that is prescribed by paragraph 5900(1)(a) to have been paid out of the exempt surplus of the particular affiliate,

(ii) immediately before that time there shall be included under subparagraph (v) of the description of B in the definition "taxable surplus" in subsection 5907(1) in computing the particular affiliate's taxable surplus or taxable deficit, as the case may be, in respect of the corporation an amount equal to the product obtained when the specified adjustment factor in respect of the disposition is multiplied by the total of all amounts each of which is the portion of any such dividend that is prescribed by paragraph 5900(1)(b) to have been paid out of the taxable surplus of the particular affiliate, and

(iii) immediately before that time there shall be deducted from the amount, if any, otherwise determined to be the underlying foreign tax of the particular affiliate in respect of the corporation an amount equal to the product obtained when the specified adjustment factor in respect of the disposition is multiplied by the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the amount prescribed by paragraph 5900(1)(d) to be the foreign tax applicable to such portion of any such dividend as is prescribed by paragraph 5900(1)(b) to have been paid out of the taxable surplus of the particular affiliate, and, for the purposes of subparagraphs (i) to (iii), the specified adjustment factor in respect of the disposition is the amount equal to the quotient obtained when

(iv) where the person disposing of the shares is the corporation, 100 per cent, and

(v) where the person disposing of the shares is another foreign affiliate of the corporation, the surplus entitlement percentage of the corporation in respect of that affiliate immediately before the disposition,

is divided by

(vi) the surplus entitlement percentage of the corporation in respect of the particular foreign affiliate immediately before that disposition;

(b) the exempt surplus or exempt deficit, the taxable surplus or taxable deficit and the underlying foreign tax in respect of the corporation of the particular affiliate and of each other foreign affiliate of the corporation in which the particular affiliate has an equity percentage (in this subsection referred to as the "other affiliate") shall at that time be adjusted to the proportion of the amount thereof otherwise determined that

(i) the surplus entitlement percentage immediately before that time of the corporation in respect of the particular affiliate or the other affiliate, as the case may be, determined on the assumption that the taxation year of the particular affiliate or the other affiliate, as the case may be, that otherwise would have included that time had ended immediately before that time,

(ii) the surplus entitlement percentage immediately after that time of the corporation in respect of the particular affiliate or the other affiliate, as the case may be, determined on the assumption that the taxation year of the particular affiliate or the other affiliate, as the case may be, that otherwise would have included that time had ended immediately after that time; and

(c) for the purposes of the definitions "exempt deficit", "exempt surplus", "taxable deficit", "taxable surplus" and "underlying foreign tax" in subsection 5907(1), the amounts determined under paragraph (b) are referred to as the opening exempt deficit, opening exempt surplus, opening taxable deficit, opening taxable surplus and opening underlying foreign tax, as the case may be, of the particular affiliate and each other affiliate in respect of the corporation resident in Canada.

History: Subparas. 5905(8)(a)(i), (ii) and para. (8)(c), amended by P.C. 1997-1670, subsecs. 7(7), (8), November 20, 1997, Canada Gazette, Part II, December 10, 1997, applicable to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that begin after 1994, except that

(a) the subparas. and para. as amended apply to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that end after 1994 where there has been a change in the taxation year of the foreign affiliate in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, unless

(i) the foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation, or

(ii) the first taxation year of the foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time when that taxation year would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation year of the foreign affiliate.

For earlier history, see at end of s. 5905.

(9) Where at any time a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada (in this subsection referred to as the "issuing affiliate") issues shares of a class of its capital stock to a person other than the corporation or another foreign affiliate of the corporation and as a result thereof the surplus entitlement percentage of the corporation in respect of the issuing affiliate decreases, for the purposes of this Part, the exempt surplus or exempt deficit, the taxable surplus or taxable deficit and the underlying foreign tax, in respect of the corporation, of the issuing affiliate and of each other foreign affiliate of the corporation in which the issuing affiliate has an equity percentage (in this subsection referred to as the "other affiliate") shall at that time be increased to the proportion of the amount thereof otherwise determined that

(a) the surplus entitlement percentage immediately before that time of the corporation in respect of the issuing affiliate or the other affiliate, as the case may be, determined on the assumption that the taxation year of the issuing affiliate or the other affiliate, as the case may be, that otherwise would have included that time had ended immediately before that time,

(b) the surplus entitlement percentage immediately after that time of the corporation in respect of the issuing affiliate or other affiliate, as the case may be, determined on the assumption that the taxation year of the issuing affiliate or the other affiliate, as the case may be, that otherwise would have included that time had ended immediately after that time,

and, for the purposes of the definitions "exempt deficit", "exempt surplus", "taxable deficit", "taxable surplus" and "underlying foreign tax" in subsection 5907(1), those increased amounts are referred to as the opening exempt deficit, opening exempt surplus, opening taxable deficit, opening taxable surplus and opening underlying foreign tax, as the case may be, of each of those affiliates in respect of the corporation resident in Canada.

History: The closing words of 5905(9) amended by P.C. 1997-1670, subsec. 7(9), November 20, 1997, Canada Gazette, Part II, December 10, 1997, applicable to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that begin after 1994, except that

(a) the portion as amended applies to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that end after 1994 where there has been a change in the taxation year of the foreign affiliate in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, unless

(i) the foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation, or

(ii) the first taxation year of the foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time when that taxation year would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation year of the foreign affiliate.

For earlier history, see at end of s. 5905.

(10) For the purposes of this section, the surplus entitlement at any time of a share owned by a corporation resident in Canada of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation in respect of a particular foreign affiliate of the corporation is the portion of

(a) the amount that would have been received on the share if the foreign affiliate had at that time paid dividends the aggregate of which on all shares of its capital stock was equal to the amount that would be its net surplus in respect of the corporation at that time assuming that

(i) each other foreign affiliate of the corporation in which the foreign affiliate had an equity percentage had immediately before that time paid a dividend equal to its net surplus in respect of the corporation immediately before the dividend was paid, and

(ii) any dividend referred to in subparagraph (i) that would be received by another foreign affiliate was received by such other foreign affiliate immediately before any such dividend that it would have paid,

that may reasonably be considered to relate to

(b) the amount that would be the net surplus of the particular affiliate in respect of the corporation at that time assuming that

(i) each other foreign affiliate of the corporation in which the particular affiliate had an equity percentage had immediately before that time paid a dividend equal to its net surplus in respect of the corporation immediately before the dividend was paid, and

(ii) any dividend referred to in subparagraph (i) that would be received by another foreign affiliate was received by such other foreign affiliate immediately before any such dividend that it would have paid.

(11) For the purposes of subsection (10),

(a) in determining the net surplus of, or the amount of a dividend received by, a particular foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada in which any other foreign affiliate of the taxpayer has an equity percentage, no amount shall be included in respect of any distribution that would be received by the particular affiliate from such other affiliate; and

(b) if any foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada has issued shares of more than one class of its capital stock, the amount that would be paid as a dividend on the shares of any class is such portion of its net surplus as, in the circumstances, it might reasonably be expected to have paid on all the shares of that class.

(12) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Part, for the purposes of determining under subsection (10) the net surplus of a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada in respect of the corporation at any time in a taxation year of the affiliate that would otherwise have included that time (in this subsection referred to as the "normal year"), the exempt earnings or loss and the taxable earnings or loss required to be included in computing the net surplus in respect of any taxation year of the affiliate that is assumed for the purposes of a provision of this section to have ended at that time shall be deemed to be that proportion of such amounts determined for the normal year that the number of days in the taxation year assumed to have ended at that time is of the number of days in the normal year.

(13) For the purposes of the definition "surplus entitlement percentage" in subsection 95(1) of the Act and of this Part, the surplus entitlement percentage at any time of a corporation resident in Canada in respect of a particular foreign affiliate of the corporation is,

(a) where the particular affiliate and each corporation that is relevant to the determination of the corporation's equity percentage in the particular affiliate have only one class of issued shares at that time, the percentage that is the corporation's equity percentage in the particular affiliate at that time, and

(b) in any other case, the proportion of 100 that

(i) the aggregate of all amounts, each of which is the surplus entitlement at that time of a share owned by the corporation of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation in respect of the particular foreign affiliate of the corporation

is of

(ii) the amount determined under paragraph (10)(b) to be the net surplus of the particular affiliate in respect of the corporation at that time, except that where the amount determined under subparagraph (ii) is nil, the percentage determined under this paragraph shall be the corporation's equity percentage in the particular affiliate at that time, and, for the purposes of this subsection, "equity percentage" has the meaning that would be assigned by subsection 95(4) of the Act if the reference in paragraph (b) of the definition "equity percentage" in that subsection to any corporation" were read as a reference to "any corporation other than a corporation resident in Canada".

5906. Carrying on business in a country — (1) For the purposes of this Part, where a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada carries on an active business, it shall be deemed to carry on that business

(a) in a country other than Canada only to the extent that such business is carried on through a permanent establishment situated therein; and

(b) in Canada only to the extent that its income therefrom is subject to tax under Part I of the Act.

(2) Where the Government of Canada has concluded an agreement or convention with the government of another country for the avoidance of double taxation that has the force of law in Canada and in which the expression "permanent establishment" is given a particular meaning, for the purposes of subsection (1), that expression has that meaning with respect to a business carried on in that country and, in any other case, has the meaning assigned by subsection 400(2).

5907. Interpretation — (1) For the purposes of this Part,

"active business" has the meaning assigned by subsection 95(1) of the Act;

"controlled foreign affiliate" has the meaning assigned by subsection 95(1) of the Act;

"earnings" of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada for a taxation year of the affiliate from an active business means

(a) in the case of an active business carried on by it in a country,

(i) the income or profit from the active business for the year computed in accordance with the income tax law of the country in which the affiliate is resident, in any case where the affiliate is required by that law to compute that income or profit,

(ii) the income or profit from the active business for the year computed in accordance with the income tax law of the country in which the business is carried on, in any case not described in subparagraph (i) where the affiliate is required by that law to compute that income or profit, and

(iii) in any other case, the amount that would be the income from the active business for the year under Part I of the Act if the business were carried on in Canada, the affiliate were resident in Canada and the Act were read without reference to subsections 80(3) to (12), (15) and (17) and 80.01(5) to (11) and sections 80.02 to 80.04, adjusted in each case in accordance with subsections (2), (2.1), (2.2) and (2.9) and, for the purposes of this Part, to the extent that the earnings of an affiliate from an active business carried on by it cannot be attributed to a permanent establishment in any particular country, they shall be attributed to the permanent establishment in the country in which the affiliate is resident and, if the affiliate is resident in more than one country, to the permanent establishment in the country that may reasonably be regarded as the affiliate's principal place of residence, and

(b) in any other case, the total of the amounts by which the income for the year from an active business of an affiliate is increased because of paragraph 95(2)(a) of the Act;

"exempt deficit" of a foreign affiliate of a corporation in respect of the corporation at any time means the amount, if any, by which

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount determined at that time under any of subparagraphs (i) to (vi) of the description of B in the definition "exempt surplus" in this subsection

"exempt earnings" of a particular foreign affiliate of a particular corporation for a taxation year of the particular affiliate is the total of all amounts each of which is

(a) the amount by which the capital gains of the particular affiliate for the year exceed the total of

(i) the amount of the taxable capital gains for the year referred to in the description of B in the definition "foreign accrual property income" in subsection 95(1) of the Act,

(ii) the amount of the taxable capital gains for the year referred to in subparagraphs (c)(i) and (d)(iii) of the definition "net earnings" in this subsection, and

(iii) the portion of any income or profits tax paid to the government of a country for the year by the particular affiliate that can reasonably be regarded as tax in respect of the amount by which the capital gains of the particular affiliate for the year exceed the total of the amounts referred to in subparagraphs (i) and (ii),

and for the purpose of this paragraph, where the particular affiliate has disposed of capital property that was shares of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the particular corporation to any corporation that was, immediately after the disposition, a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation, the capital gains of the particular affiliate for the year shall not include the portion of those gains that is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount equal to the excess of the fair market value at the end of the particular affiliate's 1975 taxation year of one of those shares disposed of over the adjusted cost base of that share,

(b) where the year is the 1975 or any preceding taxation year of the particular affiliate, the total of all amounts each of which is the particular affiliate's net earnings for the year,

(c) where the year is the 1975 or any preceding taxation year of the particular affiliate, the earnings as determined in paragraph (b) of the definition "earnings" in this subsection to the extent that those earnings have not been included because of paragraph (b) or deducted in determining an amount included in subparagraph (b)(i) of the definition "exempt loss" in this subsection,

(d) where the year is the 1976 or any subsequent taxation year of the particular affiliate and the particular affiliate is resident in a designated treaty country, each amount that is

(i) the particular affiliate's net earnings for the year from an active business carried on by it in Canada or a designated treaty country, or

(ii) the earnings of the particular affiliate for the year from an active business to the extent that they derive from

(A) amounts by which the income of the particular affiliate from an active business for the year is increased because of subparagraph 95(2)(a)(i) of the Act that are derived by the particular affiliate from activities that could reasonably be considered to be directly related to business activities carried on by a non-resident corporation, to which the particular affiliate and the particular corporation are related throughout the year, in the course of an active business carried on by the non-resident corporation the income from which would, if the non-resident corporation were a foreign affiliate of a corporation, be included in computing the non-resident corporation's exempt earnings or exempt loss,

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 6201(5) opening words

(5) For the purpose of paragraph (f) of the definition "term preferred share" in subsection 248(1) of the Act, a share of a class of the capital stock of a corporation that is listed on a stock exchange referred to in section 3200 is a prescribed share at any particular time with respect to another corporation that is registered or licensed under the laws of a province to trade in securities and that holds the share for the purpose of sale in the course of the business ordinarily carried on by it unless

Technical Notes: Subsections 6201(5) and (5.1) prescribe certain shares held by securities dealers as shares that are excluded from being "term preferred shares" and "taxable RFI shares". One of the requirements for the exclusion to apply to a share is that it be held as inventory of the business ordinarily carried on by the securities dealer. This requirement is replaced by a requirement that the share be held for the purpose of sale in the course of the business ordinarily carried on by the securities dealer. This amendment is made as a consequence of the introduction of subsection 142.6(3) of the Act, which provides that certain property held by a financial institution is considered not to be inventory. The new requirement is intended to be the same, in substance, as the former requirement.

The amendments to subsections 6201(5) and (5.1) apply to dividends received in taxation years that begin after October 1994.

(a) it may reasonably be considered that the share was acquired as part of a series of transactions or events one of the main purposes of which was to avoid or limit the application of subsection 112(2.1) of the Act; or

(b) the share was not acquired by the other corporation in the course of an underwriting of shares of that class to be distributed to the public and

(i) dividends are received at the particular time by the other corporation or by the other corporation and corporations controlled by the other corporation in respect of more than 10 per cent of the issued and outstanding shares of that class,

(ii) the other corporation is a restricted financial institution and

(A) the share is not a taxable preferred share,

(B) dividends are received at the particular time by the other corporation or by the other corporation and corporations controlled by the other corporation in respect of more than 5 per cent of the issued and outstanding shares of that class, and

(C) a dividend is received at the particular time by the other corporation or a corporation controlled by the other corporation in respect of a share of that class acquired after December 15, 1987 and before the particular time, or

(iii) the other corporation is a restricted financial institution and the share

(A) is not a taxable preferred share,

(B) was acquired after December 15, 1987 and before the particular time, and

(C) was, by reason of subparagraph (h)(i), (ii), (iii) or (v) of the definition "term preferred share" in subsection 248(1) of the Act, deemed to have been issued after December 15, 1987 and before the particular time.

(5.1) For the purposes of the definition "taxable RFI share" in subsection 248(1) of the Act, a share of a class of the capital stock of a corporation that is listed on a stock exchange referred to in section 3200 is a prescribed share at any particular time with respect to another corporation that is registered or licensed under the laws of a province to trade in securities and that holds the share as inventory of the business ordinarily carried on by it unless

(a) where a taxpayer is a beneficiary of a trust and an amount in respect of the beneficiary has been designated by the trust in a taxation year pursuant to subsection 104(19) of the Act, the taxpayer shall be deemed to have received the amount so designated at the time it was received by the trust; and

6202.1 (1) For the purposes of paragraph 66(15)(d.1) [66(15)"flow-through share"] of the Act, a new share of the capital stock of a corporation is a prescribed share if, at the time it is issued,

(a) under the terms or conditions of the share or any agreement in respect of the share or its issue,

(i) the amount of the dividends that may be declared or paid on the share (in this section referred to as the "dividend entitlement") may reasonably be considered to be, by way of a formula or otherwise,

(A) fixed,

(B) limited to a maximum, or

(B) all the consideration receivable by the holder on the conversion or exchange of the share is the share described in subclause (A)(I) or the right or warrant described in subclause (A)(II), or both, as the case may be, or

(iv) the corporation has, either absolutely or contingently, an obligation to reduce, or any person or partnership has, either absolutely or contingently, an obligation to cause the corporation to reduce, the paid-up capital in respect of the share (other than pursuant to a conversion or exchange of the share, where the right to so convert or exchange does not cause the share to be a prescribed share under subparagraph (iii));

(b) any person or partnership has, either absolutely or contingently, an obligation (other than an excluded obligation in relation to the share)

(i) to provide assistance,

(ii) to make a loan or payment,

(iii) to transfer property, or

(iv) otherwise to confer a benefit by any means whatever, including the payment of a dividend, either immediately or in the future, that may reasonably be considered to be, directly or indirectly, a repayment or return by the corporation or a specified person in relation to the corporation of all or part of the consideration for which the share was issued or for which a partnership interest was issued in a partnership that acquires the share;

(c) any person or partnership has, either absolutely or contingently, an obligation (other than an excluded obligation in relation to the share) to effect any undertaking, either immediately or in the future, with respect to the share or the agreement under which the share is issued (including any guarantee, security, indemnity, covenant or agreement and including the lending of funds to or the placing of amounts on deposit with, or on behalf of, the holder of the share or, where the holder is a partnership, the members thereof or specified persons in relation to the holder or the members of the partnership, as the case may be) that may reasonably be considered to have been given to ensure, directly or indirectly, that

(i) any loss that the holder of the share and, where the holder is a partnership, the members thereof or specified persons in relation to the holder or the members of the partnership, as the case may be, may sustain by reason of the holding, ownership or disposition of the share or any other property is limited in any respect, or

(ii) the holder of the share and, where the holder is a partnership, the members thereof or specified persons in relation to the holder or the members of the partnership, as the case may be, will derive earnings, by reason of the holding, ownership or disposition of the share or any other property;

(d) the corporation or a specified person in relation to the corporation may reasonably be expected

(i) to acquire or cancel the share in whole or in part otherwise than on a conversion or exchange of the share that meets the conditions set out in clauses (a)(iii)(A) and (B),

(ii) to reduce the paid-up capital of the corporation in respect of the share otherwise than on a conversion or exchange of the share that meets the conditions set out in clauses (a)(iii)(A) and (B), or

(iii) to make a payment, transfer or other provision (otherwise than pursuant to an excluded obligation in relation to the share), directly or indirectly, by way of a dividend, loan, purchase of shares, financial assistance to any purchaser of the share or, where the purchaser is a partnership, the members thereof or in any other manner whatever, that may reasonably be considered to be a repayment or return of all or part of the consideration for which the share was issued or for which a partnership interest was issued in a partnership that acquires the share, within 5 years after the date the share is issued, otherwise than as a consequence of an amalgamation of a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation, a winding-up of a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation to which subsection 88(1) of the Act applies or the payment of a dividend by a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation to its parent;

(e) any person or partnership can reasonably be expected to effect, within 5 years after the date the share is issued, any undertaking which, if it were in effect at the time the share was issued, would result in the share being a prescribed share by reason of paragraph (c); or

(f) it may reasonably be expected that, within 5 years after the date the share is issued,

(i) any of the terms or conditions of the share or any existing agreement relating to the share or its issue will thereafter be modified, or

(ii) any new agreement relating to the share or its issue will be entered into,

in such a manner that the share would be a prescribed share if it had been issued at the time of the modification or at the time when the new agreement is entered into.

(2) For the purposes of paragraph 66(15)(d.1) [66(15)"flow-through share"] of the Act, a new share of the capital stock of a corporation is a prescribed share if

(b) the corporation or a specified person in relation to the corporation, directly or indirectly,

(i) provided assistance,

(ii) made or arranged for a loan or payment,

(iii) transferred property, or

(iv) otherwise conferred a benefit by any means whatever, including the payment of a dividend, for the purpose of assisting any person or partnership in acquiring the share or any person or partnership in acquiring an interest in a partnership acquiring the share (otherwise than by reason of an excluded obligation in relation to the share); or

(c) the holder of the share or, where the holder is a partnership, a member thereof, has a right under any agreement or arrangement entered into under circumstances where it is reasonable to consider that the agreement or arrangement was contemplated at or before the time when the agreement to issue the share was entered into,

(i) to dispose of the share, and

(ii) through a transaction or event or a series of transactions or events contemplated by the agreement or arrangement, to acquire a share (referred to in this paragraph as the "acquired share") of the capital stock of another corporation that would be a prescribed share under subsection (1) if the acquired share were issued at the time the share was issued, other than a share that would not be a prescribed share if subsection (1) were read without reference to subparagraphs (a)(iv) and (d)(i) and (ii) thereof where the acquired share is a share

(A) of a mutual fund corporation, or

(B) of a corporation that becomes a mutual fund corporation within 90 days after the acquisition of the acquired share.

(3) For the purposes of subsection (1),

(a) the dividend entitlement of a share of the capital stock of a corporation shall be deemed not to be fixed, limited to a maximum or established to be not less than a minimum where all dividends on the share are determined solely by reference to a multiple or fraction of the dividend entitlement of another share of the capital stock of the corporation, or of another corporation that controls the corporation, where the dividend entitlement of that other share is not described in subparagraph (1)(a)(i); and

(b) the liquidation entitlement of a share of the capital stock of a corporation shall be deemed not to be fixed, limited to a maximum or established to be not less than a minimum where all the liquidation entitlement is determinable solely by reference to the liquidation entitlement of another share of the capital stock of the corporation, or of another corporation that controls the corporation, where the liquidation entitlement of that other share is not described in subparagraph (1)(a)(ii).

(4) For the purposes of paragraphs (1)(c) and (e), an agreement entered into between the first holder of a share and another person or partnership for the sale of the share to that other person or partnership for its fair market value at the time the share is acquired by the other person or partnership (determined without regard to the agreement) shall be deemed not to be an undertaking with respect to the share.

(ii) a reduction, under subsection 66(12.73) of the Act, of an amount purported to be renounced to the holder in respect of the share;

Application: The December 5, 1996 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (Appendix C), s. 3, will amend subpara. (b)(ii) of the definition "excluded obligation" in subsec. 6202.1(5) to read as above, applicable to renunciations purported to be made after 1996.

Technical Notes: Section 6202.1 prescribes shares for the purpose of the definition "flow-through share" in subsection 66(15) of the Act. Shares prescribed under this section cannot qualify as "flow-through shares".

An "excluded obligation" is an obligation that does not result in a share not qualifying as a "flow-through share". The definition "excluded obligation" is amended to refer to reductions under subsection 66(12.73) of an amount purported to be renounced, in order to be consistent with the terminology employed in the flow-through share rules.

"specified person", in relation to any particular person, means another person with whom the particular person does not deal at arm's length or any partnership or trust of which the particular person or the other person is a member or beneficiary, respectively.

otherwise than as a consequence of the payment of a dividend paid by a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation to its parent, of an amalgamation of a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation or of a winding-up to which subsection 88(1) of the Act applies;

(c) no person or partnership can reasonably be expected to provide, within two years after the time the share is issued, any form of undertaking with respect to the share (including any guarantee, security, indemnity, covenant or agreement and including the lending of funds to, or the placing of amounts on deposit with, or on behalf of, the holder of the share or any specified person in relation to the holder); and

(d) it cannot reasonably be expected that any of the terms or conditions of the share or any existing agreement in respect of the share or its issue will thereafter be modified or amended, or that any new agreement in respect of the share or its issue will be entered into, within two years after the time the share is issued, in such a manner that the share would not be a prescribed share if it had been issued at the time of such modification or amendment or at the time the new agreement is entered into.

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1),

(a) the dividend entitlement of a share of the capital stock of a corporation shall be deemed not to be limited to a maximum amount or fixed at a minimum amount where it may reasonably be considered that all or substantially all of the dividend entitlement is determinable by reference to the dividend entitlement of another share of the capital stock of the corporation that meets the requirements of subparagraph (1)(a)(i);

(b) the liquidation entitlement of a share of the capital stock of a corporation shall be deemed not to be limited to a maximum amount or fixed at a minimum amount where it may reasonably be considered that all or substantially all of the liquidation entitlement is determinable by reference to the liquidation entitlement of another share of the capital stock of the corporation that meets the requirements of subparagraph (1)(a)(ii);

(c) where a corporation has merged or amalgamated with one or more other corporations, the corporation formed as a result of the merger or amalgamation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each of its predecessor corporations and a share issued on the merger or amalgamation as consideration for another share shall be deemed to be the same share as the share for which it was issued but this paragraph does not apply if the share issued on the merger or amalgamation is not a prescribed share at the time of its issue; and

(d) an agreement entered into between the first purchaser of a share and another person or partnership, other than a specified person in relation to the corporation issuing the share, for the sale of the share to that other person or partnership shall be deemed not to be an undertaking with respect to the share.

(3) For the purposes of subsections (1) and (2), "specified person", in relation to a corporation or a holder of a share, as the case may be (in this subsection referred to as the "taxpayer"), means any person or partnership with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length or any partnership or trust of which the taxpayer (or a person or partnership with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length) is a member or beneficiary, respectively.

History: S. 6203 added by P.C. 1986-2770, s. 8, December 11, 1986, Canada Gazette, Part II, December 24, 1986, effective from May 23, 1985.

6204. (1) For the purposes of paragraph 110(1)(d) of the Act, a share is a prescribed share of the capital stock of a corporation at the time of its sale or issue, as the case may be, where, at that time,

(a) under the terms or conditions of the share or any agreement in respect of the share or its issue,

(i) the amount of the dividends (in this section referred to as the "dividend entitlement") that the corporation may declare or pay on the share is not limited to a maximum amount or fixed at a minimum amount at that time or at any time thereafter by way of a formula or otherwise,

(ii) the amount (in this section referred to as the "liquidation entitlement") that the holder of the share is entitled to receive on the share on the dissolution, liquidation or winding-up of the corporation is not limited to a maximum amount or fixed at a minimum amount by way of a formula or otherwise,

(iii) the share cannot be converted into any other security, other than into another security of the corporation or of another corporation with which it does not deal at arm's length that is, or would be at the date of conversion, a prescribed share,

(iv) the holder of the share cannot at that time or at any time thereafter cause the share to be redeemed, acquired or cancelled by the corporation or any specified person in relation to the corporation, except where the redemption, acquisition or cancellation is required pursuant to a conversion that is not prohibited by subparagraph (iii),

(v) no person or partnership has, either absolutely or contingently, an obligation to reduce, or to cause the corporation to reduce, at that time or at any time thereafter, the paid-up capital in respect of the share, except where the reduction is required pursuant to a conversion that is not prohibited by subparagraph (iii), and

(vi) neither the corporation nor any specified person in relation to the corporation has, either absolutely or contingently, the right or obligation to redeem, acquire or cancel, at that time or any later time, the share in whole or in part other than for an amount that approximates the fair market value of the share (determined without reference to any such right or obligation) or a lesser amount;

(b) the corporation or a specified person in relation to the corporation cannot reasonably be expected to, within two years after the time the share is sold or issued, as the case may be,

(i) redeem, acquire or cancel the share in whole or in part, or

(ii) reduce the paid-up capital of the corporation in respect of the share;

otherwise than as a consequence of an amalgamation of a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation or of a winding-up to which subsection 88(1) of the Act applies; and

(c) it cannot reasonably be expected that any of the terms or conditions of the share or any existing agreement in respect of the share or its sale or issue will be modified or amended, or that any new agreement in respect of the share, its sale or issue will be entered into, within two years after the time the share is sold or issued, in such a manner that the share would not be a prescribed share if it had been sold or issued at the time of such modification or amendment or at the time the new agreement is entered into.

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1),

(a) the dividend entitlement of a share of the capital stock of a corporation shall be deemed not to be limited to a maximum amount or fixed at a minimum amount where it may reasonably be considered that all or substantially all of the dividend entitlement is determinable by reference to the dividend entitlement of another share of the capital stock of the corporation that meets the requirements of subparagraph (1)(a)(i);

(b) the liquidation entitlement of a share of the capital stock of a corporation shall be deemed not to be limited to a maximum amount or fixed at a minimum amount where it may reasonably be considered that all or substantially all of the liquidation entitlement is determinable by reference to the liquidation entitlement of another share of the capital stock of the corporation that meets the requirements of subparagraph (1)(a)(ii); and

(c) the determination of whether a share of the capital stock of a corporation is a prescribed share shall be made without reference to a right or obligation to redeem, acquire or cancel the share or to cause the share to be redeemed, acquired or cancelled where

(i) the share was issued or sold pursuant to an employee share purchase agreement (in this paragraph referred to as "the agreement") to an employee (in this paragraph referred to as "the holder") of the corporation or of another corporation with which the corporation was not dealing at arm's length,

(ii) the holder was dealing at arm's length with each corporation referred to in subparagraph (i) at the time the share was issued or sold, and

(iii) having regard to all the circumstances, including the terms of the agreement, it can reasonably be considered that

(A) the amount payable on the redemption, acquisition or cancellation (in this clause and in clause (B) referred to as the "acquisition") of the share will not exceed

(I) the adjusted cost base to the holder of the share immediately before the acquisition, where the acquisition was provided for in the agreement and the principal purpose for its provision was to protect the holder against any loss in respect of the share, or

(II) the fair market value of the share immediately before the acquisition, where the acquisition was provided for in the agreement and the principal purpose for its provision was to provide the holder with a market for the share, and

(B) no portion of the amount payable on the acquisition of the share is directly determinable by reference to the profits of the corporation, or of another corporation with which the corporation does not deal at arm's length, for all or any part of the period during which the holder owned the share or had a right to acquire the share, unless the reference to the profits of the corporation or the other corporation is only for the purpose of determining the fair market value of the share pursuant to a formula set out in the agreement.

(3) For the purposes of subsection (1), "specified person", in relation to a corporation, means

(a) any person or partnership with whom the corporation does not deal at arm's length otherwise than because of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b) of the Act that arises as a result of an offer by the person or partnership to acquire all or substantially all of the shares of the capital stock of the corporation, or

(b) any partnership or trust of which the corporation (or a person or partnership with whom the corporation does not deal at arm's length) is a member or beneficiary, respectively.

(4) For the purposes of subsection (3), the Act shall be read without reference to subsection 256(9) of the Act.

6205. (1) For the purposes of subsections 110.6(8) and (9) of the Act and subject to subsection (3), a prescribed share is a share of the capital stock of a corporation where

(a) under the terms or conditions of the share or any agreement in respect of the share or its issue,

(i) at the time the share is issued,

(A) the amount of the dividends (in this section referred to as the "dividend entitlement") that the corporation may declare or pay on the share is not limited to a maximum amount or fixed at a minimum amount at that time or at any time thereafter by way of a formula or otherwise,

(B) the amount (in this section referred to as the "liquidation entitlement") that the holder of the share is entitled to receive on the share on the dissolution, liquidation or winding-up of the corporation is not limited to a maximum amount or fixed at a minimum amount by way of a formula or otherwise,

(C) the share cannot be converted into any other security, other than into another security of the corporation that is, or would be at the date of conversion, a prescribed share,

(D) the holder of the share does not, at that time or at any time thereafter, have the right or obligation to cause the share to be redeemed, acquired or cancelled by the corporation or a specified person in relation to the corporation, except where the redemption, acquisition or cancellation is required pursuant to a conversion that is not prohibited by clause (C),

(E) no person or partnership has, either absolutely or contingently, an obligation to reduce, or to cause the corporation to reduce, at that time or at any time thereafter, the paid-up capital in respect of the share, otherwise than by way of a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of the share that is not prohibited by this section,

(F) no person or partnership has, either absolutely or contingently, an obligation (other than an excluded obligation in relation to the share, as defined in subsection 6202.1(5)) at that time or any time thereafter to

(I) provide assistance to acquire the share,

(II) make a loan or payment,

(III) transfer property, or

(IV) otherwise confer a benefit by any means whatever, including the payment of a dividend, that may reasonably be considered to be, directly or indirectly, a repayment or return by the corporation or a specified person in relation to the corporation of all or part of the consideration for which the share was issued, and

(G) neither the corporation nor any specified person in relation to the corporation has, either absolutely or contingently, the right or obligation to redeem, acquire or cancel, at that time or at any time thereafter, the share in whole or in part, except where the redemption, acquisition or cancellation is required pursuant to a conversion that is not prohibited by clause (C),

(ii) no person or partnership has, either absolutely or contingently, an obligation (other than an excluded obligation in relation to the share, as defined in subsection 6202.1(5)) to provide, at any time, any form of undertaking with respect to the share (including any guarantee, security, indemnity, covenant or agreement and including the lending of funds to or the placing of amounts on deposit with, or on behalf of, the holder of the share or any specified person in relation to that holder) that may reasonably be considered to have been given to ensure that

(A) any loss that the holder of the share may sustain by virtue of the holding, ownership or disposition of the share is limited in any respect, or

(B) the holder of the share will derive earnings by virtue of the holding, ownership or disposition of the share; and

(b) at the time the share is issued, it cannot reasonably be expected, having regard to all the circumstances, that any of the terms or conditions of the share or any existing agreement in respect of the share or its issue will thereafter be modified or amended or that any new agreement in respect of the share or its issue will be entered into, in such a manner that the share would not be a prescribed share if it had been issued at the time of such modification or amendment or at the time the new agreement is entered into.

(2) For the purposes of subsections 110.6(8) and (9) of the Act and subject to subsection (3), a prescribed share is a share of the capital stock of a particular corporation where

(a) it is a particular share that is owned by a person and that was issued by the particular corporation as part of an arrangement to that person, to a spouse or parent of that person or, where the person is a trust described in paragraph 104(4)(a) of the Act, to the person who created the trust or by whose will the trust was created or, where the person is a corporation, to another person owning all of the issued and outstanding shares of the capital stock of the corporation or to a spouse or parent of that other person, and

(i) the main purpose of the arrangement was to permit any increase in the value of the property of the particular corporation to accrue to other shares that would, at the time of their issue, be prescribed shares if this section were read without reference to this subsection, and

(ii) at the time of the issue of the particular share or at the end of the arrangement,

(A) the other shares were owned by

(I) the person to whom the particular share was issued (in this paragraph referred to as the "original holder"),

(II) a person who did not deal at arm's length with the original holder,

(III) a trust none of the beneficiaries of which were persons other than the original holder or a person who did not deal at arm's length with the original holder, or

(IV) any combination of persons described in subclause (I), (II) or (III),

(B) the other shares were owned by employees of the particular corporation or of a corporation controlled by the particular corporation, or

(C) the other shares were owned by any combination of persons each of whom is described in clause (A) or (B); or

(b) it is a share that was issued by a mutual fund corporation.

(3) For the purposes of subsections 110.6(8) and (9) of the Act, a prescribed share does not include a share of the capital stock issued by a mutual fund corporation (other than an investment corporation) the value of which can reasonably be considered to be, directly or indirectly, derived primarily from investments made by the mutual fund corporation in one or more corporations (in this subsection referred to as an "investee corporation") connected with it (within the meaning of subsection 186(4) of the Act on the assumption that the references in that subsection to "payer corporation" and "particular corporation" were read as references to "investee corporation" and "mutual fund corporation", respectively).

(4) For the purposes of this section,

(a) the dividend entitlement of a share of the capital stock of a corporation shall be deemed not to be limited to a maximum amount or fixed at a minimum amount where it may reasonably be considered that

(i) all or substantially all of the dividend entitlement is determinable by reference to the dividend entitlement of another share of the capital stock of the corporation that meets the requirements of clause (1)(a)(i)(A), or

(ii) the dividend entitlement cannot be such as to impair the ability of the corporation to redeem another share of the capital stock of the corporation that meets the requirements of paragraph (2)(a);

(b) the liquidation entitlement of a share of the capital stock of a corporation shall be deemed not to be limited to a maximum amount or fixed at a minimum amount where it may reasonably be considered that all or substantially all of the liquidation entitlement is determinable by reference to the liquidation entitlement of another share of the capital stock of the corporation that meets the requirements of clause (1)(a)(i)(B);

(c) where two or more corporations (each of which is referred to in this paragraph as a "predecessor corporation") have merged or amalgamated, the corporation formed as a result of the merger or amalgamation (in this paragraph referred to as the "new corporation") shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each of the predecessor corporations and a share of the capital stock of the new corporation issued on the merger or amalgamation as consideration for a share of the capital stock of a predecessor corporation shall be deemed to be the same share as the share of the predecessor corporation for which it was issued, but this paragraph does not apply if the share issued on the merger or amalgamation is not a prescribed share at the time of its issue and either

(i) the terms and conditions of that share are not identical to those of the share of the predecessor corporation for which it was issued, or

(ii) at the time of its issue the fair market value of that share is not the same as that of the share of the predecessor corporation for which it was issued;

(d) a reference in clauses (1)(a)(i)(D) and (G) and subparagraph (1)(a)(ii) to a right or obligation of the corporation or a person or partnership does not include a right or obligation provided in a written agreement among shareholders of a private corporation owning more than 50% of its issued and outstanding share capital having full voting rights under all circumstances to which the corporation, person or partnership is a party unless it may reasonably be considered, having regard to all the circumstances, including the terms of the agreement and the number and relationship of the shareholders, that one of the main reasons for the existence of the agreement is to avoid or limit the application of subsection 110.6(8) or (9) of the Act;

(e) where at any particular time after November 21, 1985, the terms or conditions of a share are changed or any existing agreement in respect thereof is changed or a new agreement in respect of the share is entered into, the share shall, for the purpose of determining whether it is a prescribed share, be deemed to have been issued at that particular time; and

(f) the determination of whether a share of the capital stock of a corporation is a prescribed share for the purposes of subsection (1) shall be made without reference to a right or obligation to redeem, acquire or cancel the share or to cause the share to be redeemed, acquired or cancelled where

(i) the share was issued pursuant to an employee share purchase agreement (in this paragraph referred to as "the agreement") to an employee (in this paragraph referred to as "the holder") of the corporation or of a corporation with which it did not deal at arm's length,

(ii) the holder was dealing at arm's length with each corporation referred to in subparagraph (i) at the time the share was issued, and

(iii) having regard to all the circumstances including the terms of the agreement, it may reasonably be considered that

(A) the amount payable on the redemption, acquisition or cancellation (in this clause and in clause (B) referred to as the "acquisition") of the share will not exceed

(I) the adjusted cost base of the share to the holder immediately before the acquisition, where the acquisition was provided for in the agreement and the principal purpose for its provision was to protect the holder against any loss in respect of the share, or

(II) the fair market value of the share immediately before the acquisition, where the acquisition was provided for in the agreement and the principal purpose for its provision was to provide the holder with a market for the share, and for all or any part of the period during which the holder owned the share or had a right to acquire the share, unless the reference to the profits of the corporation or the other corporation is only for the purpose of determining the fair market value of the share pursuant to a formula set out in the agreement.

(5) For the purposes of this section, "specified person", in relation to a corporation or a holder of a share, as the case may be (in this subsection referred to as the "taxpayer"), means any person or partnership with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length or any partnership or trust of which the taxpayer (or a person or partnership with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length) is a member or beneficiary, respectively.

6206. The Class I Special Shares of Reed Stenhouse Companies Limited, issued before January 1, 1986, are prescribed for the purposes of subsection 84(8) of the Act.

History: S. 6206 added by P.C. 1986-2770, s. 8, December 11, 1986, Canada Gazette, Part II, December 24, 1986, effective from May 23, 1985.

6207. (1) For the purposes of paragraph 183.1(4)(c) of the Act (as it read in its application to transactions entered into before September 13, 1988), a share is a prescribed share of the capital stock of an acquiring corporation where, at the time the share is issued

(a) under the terms or conditions of the share or any agreement in respect of the share or its issue,

(i) the amount of the dividends (in this section referred to as the "dividend entitlement") that the corporation may declare or pay on the share is not limited to a maximum amount or fixed at a minimum amount at that time or at any time thereafter by way of a formula or otherwise,

(ii) the amount (in this section referred to as the "liquidation entitlement") that the holder of the share is entitled to receive on the share on the dissolution, liquidation or winding-up of the corporation is not limited to a maximum amount or fixed at a minimum amount by way of a formula or otherwise,

(iii) the share cannot be converted into any other security, other than into another security of the corporation or of another corporation with which it does not deal at arm's length that is, or would be at the date of conversion, a prescribed share,

(iv) the holder of the share does not, at that time or at any time thereafter, have the right or obligation to cause the share to be redeemed, acquired or cancelled by the corporation or any specified person in relation to the corporation, except where the redemption, acquisition or cancellation is required pursuant to a conversion that is not prohibited by subparagraph (iii),

(v) no person or partnership has, either absolutely or contingently, an obligation to reduce, or to cause the corporation to reduce, at that time or at any time thereafter, the paid-up capital in respect of the share, otherwise than by way of a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of the share that is not prohibited by this section, and

(vi) neither the corporation nor any specified person in relation to the corporation has, either absolutely or contingently, the right or obligation to redeem, acquire or cancel, at that time or at any time thereafter, the share in whole or in part, except where the redemption, acquisition or cancellation is required pursuant to a conversion that is not prohibited by subparagraph (iii); and

(b) it cannot reasonably be expected, having regard to all the circumstances, that any of the terms or conditions of the share or any existing agreement in respect of the share or its issue will be modified or amended, or that any new agreement in respect of the share or its issue will be entered into, in such a manner that the share would not be a prescribed share if it had been issued at the time of such modification or amendment or at the time the new agreement is entered into.

(2) For the purposes of this section,

(a) the dividend entitlement of a share of the capital stock of a corporation shall be deemed not to be limited to a maximum amount or fixed at a minimum amount where it may reasonably be considered that all or substantially all the dividend entitlement is determinable by reference to the dividend entitlement of another share of the capital stock of the corporation that meets the requirements of subparagraph (1)(a)(i);

(b) the liquidation entitlement of a share of the capital stock of a corporation shall be deemed not to be limited to a maximum amount or fixed at a minimum amount where it may reasonably be considered that all or substantially all of the liquidation entitlement is determinable by reference to the liquidation entitlement of another share of the capital stock of the corporation that meets the requirements of subparagraph (1)(a)(ii);

(c) where at any particular time after June 3, 1987, the terms or conditions of a share are changed or any existing agreement in respect of the share is changed or a new agreement in respect of the share is entered into, the share shall, for the purpose of determining whether it is a prescribed share, be deemed to have been issued at that particular time;

(d) the determination of whether a share of the capital stock of a corporation owned by an employee of the corporation or another corporation with which it does not deal at arms' length is a prescribed share shall be made without reference to a right or obligation with respect to an acquisition of the share, the consideration for which is described in subparagraph 183.1(4)(c)(i) or (ii) of the Act (as those subparagraphs read in their application to transactions entered into before September 13, 1988) where no portion of the amount payable on the acquisition of the share is directly determinable by reference to the profits of the corporation or the other corporation for all or any part of the period during which the employee owned the share or had a right to acquire the share, unless the reference to the profits of the corporation or the other corporation is only for the purpose of determining the fair market value of the share pursuant to a formula set out in the employee share purchase agreement under which the employee acquired the share; and

(e) a reference in subparagraphs (1)(a)(iv) and (vi) to a right or obligation of the corporation or a person or partnership does not include a right or obligation provided in a written agreement among shareholders of a private corporation owning more than 50% of its issued and outstanding share capital having full voting rights under all circumstances to which the corporation, person or partnership is a party unless it may reasonably be considered, having regard to all the circumstances including the terms of the agreement and the number and relationship of the shareholders, that one of the main reasons for the existence of the agreement is to avoid or limit the application of subsection 183.1(1) of the Act.

(3) For the purposes of subsection (1), "specified person" in relation to a corporation means any person or partnership with whom the corporation does not deal at arm's length or any partnership or trust of which the corporation (or a person or partnership with whom the corporation does not deal at arm's length) is a member or beneficiary, respectively.

S. 6207 added by P.C. 1990-1838, s. 2, August 28, 1990, Canada Gazette, Part II, September 12, 1990, applicable after November 27, 1986, except that it does not apply with respect to transactions entered into on or after September 13, 1988, other than transactions that are part of a series of transactions, determined without reference to subsection 248(10) of the Income Tax Act, commencing before September 13, 1988 and completed before 1989.

6208. (1) For the purposes of clause 212(1)(b)(vii)(E) of the Act, a prescribed security with respect to an obligation of a corporation is

(a) a share of the capital stock of the corporation unless

(i) under the terms and conditions of the share, any agreement relating to the share or any modification of such terms, conditions or agreement, the corporation or a specified person in relation to the corporation is or may, at any time within 5 years after the date of the issue of the obligation, be required to redeem, acquire or cancel, in whole or in part, the share (unless the share is or may be required to be redeemed, acquired or cancelled by reason only of a right to convert the share into, or exchange the share for, another share of the corporation that, if issued, would be a prescribed security) or to reduce its paid-up capital,

(ii) as a result of the modification or establishment of the terms or conditions of the share or the changing or entering into of any agreement in respect of the share, the corporation or a specified person in relation to the corporation may, within 5 years after the date of the issue of the obligation, reasonably be expected to redeem, acquire or cancel, in whole or in part, the share (unless the share is or may be required to be redeemed, acquired or cancelled by reason only of a right to convert the share into, or exchange the share for, another share of the corporation that, if issued, would be a prescribed security) or to reduce its paid-up capital, or

(iii) as a result of the terms or conditions of the share or any agreement entered into by the corporation or a specified person in relation to the corporation or any modification of such terms, conditions or agreement, any person is required, either absolutely or contingently, within 5 years after the date of the issue of the obligation, to effect any undertaking, including any guarantee, covenant or agreement to purchase or repurchase the share, and including a loan of funds to or the placing of amounts on deposit with, or on behalf of, the shareholder or a specified person in relation to the shareholder given

(A) to ensure that any loss that the shareholder or a specified person in relation to the shareholder may sustain, by reason of the ownership, holding or disposition of the share or any other property, is limited in any respect, and

(B) as part of a transaction or event or series of transactions or events that included the issuance or acquisition of the obligation, and for the purposes of this subparagraph, where such an undertaking in respect of a share is given at any particular time after the date of the issue of the obligation, the obligation shall be deemed to have been issued at the particular time and the undertaking shall be deemed to have been given as part of a series of transactions that included the issuance or acquisition of the obligation, and

(b) a right or warrant to acquire a share of the capital stock of the corporation that would, if issued, be a prescribed security with respect to the obligation, where all the consideration receivable upon a conversion or exchange of the obligation or the prescribed security, as the case may be, is a share of the capital stock of the corporation described in paragraph (a) or a right or warrant described in paragraph (b), or both, as the case may be.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-361R3: Exemption from Part XIII tax on interest payments to non-residents.

(2) For the purposes of this section, where a taxpayer may become entitled upon the conversion or exchange of an obligation or a prescribed security to receive consideration in lieu of a fraction of a share, that consideration shall be deemed not to be consideration unless it may reasonably be considered to be receivable as part of a series of transactions or events one of the main purposes of which is to avoid or limit the application of Part XIII of the Act.

(3) In this section, "specified person", in relation to a corporation or a shareholder, means any person with whom the corporation or the shareholder, as the case may be, does not deal at arm's length or any partnership or trust of which the corporation or the shareholder, as the case may be, or the person is a member or beneficiary, respectively.

History: S. 6208 added by P.C. 1990-854, s. 1, May 10, 1990, Canada Gazette, Part II, May 23, 1990, applicable after December 19, 1986.

6209. For the purposes of the definition "lending asset" in subsection 248(1) of the Act,

(a) a share owned by a bank is a prescribed share for a taxation year where it is a preferred share of the capital stock of a corporation that is dealing at arm's length with the bank that may reasonably be considered to be, and is reported as, a substitute or alternative for a loan to the corporation, or another corporation with whom the corporation does not deal at arm's length, in the bank's annual report for the year to the relevant authority or, where the bank was throughout the year subject to the supervision of the relevant authority but was not required to file an annual report for the year with the relevant authority, in its financial statements for the year; and

(b) a security is a prescribed security for a taxation year where

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 6209(b)

(b) a property is a prescribed property for a taxation year where

Application: The November 14, 1997 draft regulations (impaired loans), subsec. 1(1), will amend the opening words of para. 6209(b) to read as above, applicable

(a) to taxation years that end after September 1997; and

(b) to taxation years that end after 1995 and before October 1997 where the taxpayer elects in writing to have para. 20(1)(l) of the Act, as amended, to apply to the year and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue before the end of the third month after the month in which the amending legislation is assented to.

Technical Notes: Section 6209 prescribes certain shares and other securities for the purpose of the definition of "lending asset" in subsection 248(1) of the Act. Securities prescribed by paragraph 6209(b) are considered not to be lending assets. The definition "lending asset" in subsection 248(1) is proposed to be amended to refer to prescribed property rather than prescribed security. Paragraph 6209(b) is therefore amended to refer to prescribed property and also to add new subparagraph (iii). New subparagraph (iii) provides that a direct financing lease or any other financing arrangement that in substance is not unlike a loan is a prescribed property if the taxpayer may deduct an amount under paragraph 20(1)(a) of the Act in respect of the property that is the subject of the lease or arrangement. Because such loans are considered not to be lending assets, they are therefore ineligible for a reserve deduction under paragraph 20(1)(l) of the Act. The amendments to paragraph 6209(b) apply to taxation years that end after September 1997, and also to taxation years that end after 1995 and before October 1997 where the taxpayer elects to have the reserve provisions in new paragraph 20(1)(l) of the Act apply to those years.

(i) in the case of a security held by a bank, the security is reported as part of the bank's trading account in its annual report for the year to the relevant authority or, where the bank was throughout the year subject to the supervision of the relevant authority but was not required to file an annual report for the year with the relevant authority, in its financial statements for the year, or

(ii) in the case of a security held by a taxpayer other than a bank, the security is at any time in the year a property described in an inventory of the taxpayer.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 6209(b)(i), (ii)

(i) the security is a mark-to-market property (as defined in subsection 142.2(1) of the Act) for the year of a financial institution (as defined in that subsection), or

(ii) the security is at any time in the year a property described in an inventory of a taxpayer.

Application: The June 1, 1995 draft regulations (securities held by financial institutions), s. 7, will amend subparas. 6209(b)(i) and (ii) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after February 22, 1994.

Technical Notes: Section 6209 prescribes certain shares and other securities for the purpose of the definition of "lending asset" in subsection 248(1) of the Act. Securities prescribed by paragraph 6209(b) are excluded from being lending assets. Paragraph 6209(b) prescribes a security if it is included in the trading account of a bank or in the inventory of a taxpayer other than a bank.

Paragraph 6209(b) is amended to provide that a security is prescribed if it is a mark-to-market property or is included in a taxpayer's inventory. "Mark-to-market property", which is defined in new subsection 142.2(1) of the Act, includes most shares and some debt obligations.

As a consequence of this amendment, a specified debt obligation (as defined in subsection 142.2(1) of the Act) held by a bank in its trading account will be treated as a lending asset if it is not a mark-to-market property. This observation applies, in particular, to the debt obligations of a country that has been designated by the Office of the Superintendent of Financial Institutions and to the United Mexican States Collateralized Par or Discount Bonds Due 2019.

Proposed Addition — Reg. 6209(b)(iii)

(iii) the property is a direct financing lease, or is any other financing arrangement, of a taxpayer that is reported as a loan in the taxpayer's financial statement for the year prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles and an amount is deductible under paragraph 20(1)(a) of the Act in respect of the property that is the subject of the lease or arrangement in computing the taxpayer's income for the year.

Application: The November 14, 1997 draft regulations (impaired loans), subsec. 1(2), will add subpara. 6209(b)(iii), applicable

(a) to taxation years that end after September 1997; and

(b) to taxation years that end after 1995 and before October 1997 where the taxpayer elects in writing to have para. 20(1)(l) of the Act, as amended, to apply to the year and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue before the end of the third month after the month in which the amending legislation is assented to.

Technical Notes: See under Reg. 6209(b).

History: S. 6209 added by P.C. 1990-2779, s. 3, December 20, 1990, Canada Gazette, Part II, January 16, 1991, applicable to taxation years and fiscal periods commencing after June 17, 1987 that end after 1987.

Part LXIII — Child Tax Benefits

History: Part LXIII (ss. 6300–6302) enacted by P.C. 1992-2714, December 29, 1992, Canada Gazette, Part II, January 13, 1993, applicable after 1992.

6300. Interpretation — In this Part, "qualified dependant" has the meaning assigned by section 122.6 of the Act.

6301. Non-application of presumption — (1) For the purposes of paragraph (g) of the definition "eligible individual" in section 122.6 of the Act, the presumption referred to in paragraph (f) of that definition does not apply in the circumstances where

(a) the female parent of the qualified dependant declares in writing to the Minister of Human Resources Development that the male parent, with whom she resides, is the parent of the qualified dependant who primarily fulfils the responsibility for the care and upbringing of each of the qualified dependants who reside with both parents;

(b) the female parent is a qualified dependant of an eligible individual and each of them files a notice with the Minister of Human Resources Development under subsection 122.62 (1) of the Act in respect of the same qualified dependant;

(c) there is more than one female parent of the qualified dependant who resides with the qualified dependant and each female parent files a notice with the Minister of Human Resources Development under subsection 122.62 (1) of the Act in respect of the qualified dependant; or

(d) more than one notice is filed with the Minister of Human Resources Development under subsection 122.62 (1) of the Act in respect of the same qualified dependant who resides with each of the persons filing the notices where such persons live at different locations.

History: Subsec. 6301(1) amended by 1996, c. 11, s. 96, to substitute "Minister of Human Resources Development" for "Minister of National Health and Welfare", in force July 12, 1996.

(2) For greater certainty, a person who files a notice referred to in paragraph (1)(b), (c) or (d) includes a person who is not required under subsection 122.62(3) of the Act to file such a notice and a person for whom the requirement to file such a notice has been waived by the Minister of Human Resources Development under subsection 122.62(5) of the Act.

History: Subsec. 6301(2) amended by 1996, c. 11, s. 96, to substitute "Minister of Human Resources Development" for "Minister of National Health and Welfare", in force July 12, 1996.

6302. Factors — For the purposes of paragraph (h) of the definition "eligible individual" in section 122.6 of the Act, the following factors are to be considered in determining what constitutes care and upbringing of a qualified dependant:

(a) the supervision of the daily activities and needs of the qualified dependant;

(b) the maintenance of a secure environment in which the qualified dependant resides;

(c) the arrangement of, and transportation to, medical care at regular intervals and as required for the qualified dependant;

(d) the arrangement of, participation in, and transportation to, educational, recreational, athletic or similar activities in respect of the qualified dependant;

(e) the attendance to the needs of the qualified dependant when the qualified dependant is ill or otherwise in need of the attendance of another person;

(f) the attendance to the hygienic needs of the qualified dependant on a regular basis;

(g) the provision, generally, of guidance and companionship to the qualified dependant; and

(h) the existence of a court order in respect of the qualified dependant that is valid in the jurisdiction in which the qualified dependant resides.

(ii) any later date that is acceptable to the Minister, except that an employer is not an electing employer for a year with respect to a foreign plan if the Minister has granted written permission for the employer to revoke, for the year or a preceding calendar year, the election made under paragraph (a) in respect of the foreign plan.

(3) Election by union — Except as otherwise permitted in writing by the Minister, an election made by a trade union for the purpose of subsection (2) is valid only if it is made by the highest-level structural unit of the union.

(4) Contributions made before 1992 — For the purpose of paragraph 207.6(5.1)(a) of the Act, a contribution made under a foreign plan by a person or body of persons in a calendar year before 1992 is a prescribed contribution where

(a) the contribution is paid to a qualifying entity;

(b) each employer (in this subsection referred to as a "contributor") that makes a contribution under the foreign plan in the year is

(i) a non-resident corporation throughout the year,

(ii) a partnership that makes contributions under the foreign plan primarily in respect of services rendered outside Canada to the partnership by non-resident employees, or

(iii) a foreign non-profit organization throughout the year;

(c) if a corporation or partnership (other than a corporation or partnership that is a foreign non-profit organization throughout the year) is a contributor, no individual who is entitled (either absolutely or contingently) to benefits under the foreign plan is a member of a registered pension plan, or a beneficiary under a deferred profit sharing plan, to which a contributor, or a person or body of persons not dealing at arm's length with a contributor, makes, or is required to make, contributions in relation to the year;

(d) contributions made in the year under the foreign plan for the benefit of individuals resident in Canada are reasonable in relation to contributions made under the plan for the benefit of non-resident individuals; and

(e) the foreign plan is not a pension plan the registration of which under the Act has been revoked.

(5) Contributions made in 1992, 1993 or 1994 — For the purpose of paragraph 207.6(5.1)(a) of the Act, a contribution made under a foreign plan by a person or body of persons at any time in 1992, 1993 or 1994 in respect of services rendered by an individual to an employer is a prescribed contribution where

(a) the contribution is paid to a qualifying entity;

(b) the employer is an electing employer for the year with respect to the foreign plan;

(c) if the employer is not at that time a foreign non-profit organization, the individual is not a member of a registered pension plan (other than a specified multi-employer plan, as defined in subsection 147.1(1) of the Act), or a deferred profit sharing plan, in which the employer, or a person or body of persons that does not deal at arm's length with the employer, participates; and

(d) either

(i) the employer is

(A) a corporation that is not resident in Canada at that time,

(B) a partnership that makes contributions under the foreign plan primarily in respect of services rendered outside Canada to the partnership by non-resident employees, or

(C) a foreign non-profit organization at that time, or

(ii) the individual was non-resident at any time before the contribution is made and became a member of the foreign plan before the end of the month after the month in which the individual became resident in Canada.

(6) Contributions made after 1994 — For the purposes of paragraph 207.6(5.1)(a) of the Act, a contribution made under a foreign plan by a person or body of persons at any time in a calendar year after 1994 in respect of services rendered by an individual to an employer is a prescribed contribution where

(a) the contribution is paid to a qualifying entity;

(b) the employer is an electing employer for the year with respect to the foreign plan;

(c) if the employer is at that time a foreign non-profit organization,

(i) the amount that, if subsection 8301(1) were read without reference to paragraph (b) of that subsection, would be the individual's pension adjustment for the year in respect of the employer is nil, or

(ii) the amount that, if all contributions made under the foreign plan in the year in respect of the individual were prescribed by this subsection, would be the individual's pension adjustment for the year in respect of the employer does not exceed the lesser of

(A) the money purchase limit for the year, and

(B) 18% of the individual's compensation (as defined in subsection 147.1(1) of the Act) for the year from the employer;

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 6804(6)(c)(ii)

(ii) the amount that would be the individual's pension adjustment for the year in respect of the employer if

(A) all contributions made under the foreign plan in the year in respect of the individual were prescribed by this subsection,

(B) where the year is 1996, section 8308.1 were read without reference to subsection (4.1), and

(C) where the year is 1997, subparagraph 8308.1(2)(b)(v) were read as:

"(v) the amount, if any, by which 18% of the individual's resident compensation from the employer for the year exceeds $1,000, and"

does not exceed the lesser of

(D) the money purchase limit for the year, and

(E) 18% of the individual's compensation (as defined in subsection 147.1(1) of the Act) for the year from the employer;

Application: The June 26, 1998 draft regulations (retirement savings), s. 2, will amend subpara. 6804(6)(c)(ii) to read as above, applicable after 1995.

Technical Notes: Section 6804 prescribes, for purposes of the definition of "resident's contribution" in subsection 207.6(5.1) of the Income Tax Act, certain contributions made to foreign pension plans. Prescribed contributions are, by definition, not resident's contributions and, consequently, are exempted from the rules in subsection 207.6(5) of the Act which result in foreign pension plan contributions being subject to the retirement compensation arrangement (RCA) rules. Normally, if contributions to a foreign pension plan in respect of a Canadian resident are prescribed under section 6804, a pension credit in respect of the individual and the plan is determined under section 8308.1 of the Regulations. The pension credit is included in the individual's pension adjustment (PA) and, thus, reduces deduction room for contributions to registered retirement savings plans (RRSPs). The pension credit determined under existing section 8308.1 for a year is generally the lesser of (i) the money purchase limit for the year minus $1,000, and (ii) 18% of the individual's compensation for the year minus $1,000. These rules for determining foreign plan pension credits are amended to reduce the $1,000 offsets to $600 for years after 1996, and to provide that, from 1996 to 2003, there is no offset applied to the money purchase limit.

Subsection 6804(6) sets out conditions that a contribution made after 1994 to a foreign pension plan must satisfy in order to be prescribed. Subparagraph 6804(6)(c)(ii) deals with contributions made in respect of a Canadian resident who is employed by a foreign non-profit employer and who is also participating in a registered pension plan (RPP) of the employer. It provides that the contributions to the foreign plan will be prescribed only if the individual's PA for the year (assuming that a pension credit in respect of the foreign plan is determined under section 8308.1) does not exceed the lesser of the money purchase limit for the year and 18% of the individual's compensation for the year. In effect, for years before 1996, only an RPP pension credit of more than $1,000 would result in a foreign plan contribution failing to comply with the requirements of subparagraph 6804(6)(c)(ii). However, with the changes made to the rules for determining foreign plan pension credits after 1995, a lesser RPP pension credit could result in contributions to a foreign pension plan failing to comply.

Subparagraph 6804(6)(c)(ii) is amended to ensure that the changes made to the rules for determining foreign plan pension credits are disregarded for the first year in which the changes apply. Thus, if a foreign non-profit employer provided RPP benefits to a high-income employee in 1996 on the assumption that the employee's foreign plan pension credit would be equal to the money purchase limit minus $1,000 (rather than the money purchase limit), the provision of the RPP benefits will not result in contributions made to the foreign plan being subject to the RCA rules. Similarly, if such an employer provided RPP benefits in 1997 to a low- or middle-income employee assuming that the employee's foreign plan pension credit would be equal to 18% of compensation minus $1,000 (rather than $600), the provision of the benefits will not result in contributions made to the foreign plan being subject to the RCA rules.

(d) if

(i) the employer is at that time a foreign non-profit organization, and

(ii) a period in the year throughout which the individual rendered services to the employer would be, under paragraph 8507(3)(a), a qualifying period of the individual with respect to another employer if that paragraph were read without reference to subparagraph (iv) of that paragraph, subsection 8308(7) applies with respect to the determination of the individual's pension adjustment for the year with respect to each employer; and

(e) if the employer is not at that time a foreign non-profit organization,

(i) the individual was non-resident at any time before the contribution is made,

(ii) the individual became a member of the foreign plan before the end of the month after the month in which the individual became resident in Canada, and

(iii) the individual is not a member of a registered pension plan, or a deferred profit sharing plan, in which the employer, or a person or body of persons that does not deal at arm's length with the employer, participates.

(7) Replacement plan — For the purposes of subparagraphs (5)(d)(ii) and (6)(e)(ii), where benefits provided to an individual under a particular plan or arrangement are replaced by benefits under another plan or arrangement, the other plan or arrangement is deemed, in respect of the individual, to be the same plan or arrangement as the particular plan or arrangement.

7000. (1) Prescribed debt obligations — For the purpose of subsection 12(9) of the Act, each of the following debt obligations (other than a debt obligation that is an indexed debt obligation) in respect of which a taxpayer has at any time acquired an interest is a prescribed debt obligation:

(a) a particular debt obligation in respect of which no interest is stipulated to be payable in respect of its principal amount;

(b) a particular debt obligation in respect of which the proportion of the payments of principal to which the taxpayer is entitled is not equal to the proportion of the payments of interest to which he is entitled;

(c) a particular debt obligation, other than one described in paragraph (a) or (b), in respect of which it can be determined, at the time the taxpayer acquired the interest therein, that the maximum amount of interest payable thereon in a year ending after that time is less than the maximum amount of interest payable thereon in a subsequent year; and

(d) a particular debt obligation, other than one described in paragraph (a), (b) or (c), in respect of which the amount of interest to be paid in respect of any taxation year is, under the terms and conditions of the obligation, dependent on a contingency existing after the year, and, for the purposes of this subsection, a debt obligation includes, for greater certainty, all of the issuer's obligations to pay principal and interest under that obligation.

Advance Tax Ruling: ATR-61: Interest accrual rules.

(2) For the purposes of subsection 12(9) of the Act, the amount determined in prescribed manner that is deemed to accrue to a taxpayer as interest on a prescribed debt obligation in each taxation year during which he holds an interest in the obligation is,

(a) in the case of a prescribed debt obligation described in paragraph (1)(a), the amount of interest that would be determined in respect thereof if interest thereon for that year were computed on a compound interest basis using the maximum of all rates each of which is a rate computed

(i) in respect of each possible circumstance under which an interest of the taxpayer in the obligation could mature or be surrendered or retracted, and

(ii) using assumptions concerning the interest rate and compounding period that will result in a present value, at the date of purchase of the interest, of all the maximum payments thereunder, equal to the cost thereof to the taxpayer;

(b) in the case of a prescribed debt obligation described in paragraph (1)(b), the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the amount of interest that would be determined in respect of his interest in a payment under the obligation if interest thereon for that year were computed on a compound interest basis using the specified cost of his interest therein and the specified interest rate in respect of his total interest in the obligation, and for the purposes of this paragraph,

(i) the "specified cost" of his interest in a payment under the obligation is its present value at the date of purchase computed using the specified interest rate, and

(ii) the "specified interest rate" is the maximum of all rates each of which is a rate computed

(A) in respect of each possible circumstance under which an interest of the taxpayer in the obligation could mature or be surrendered or retracted, and

(B) using assumptions concerning the interest rate and compounding period that will result in a present value, at the date of purchase of the interest, of all the maximum payments to the taxpayer in respect of his total interest in the obligation, equal to the cost of that interest to the taxpayer;

(c) in the case of a prescribed debt obligation described in paragraph (1)(c), other than an obligation in respect of which paragraph (c.1) applies, the greater of

(i) the maximum amount of interest thereon in respect of the year, and

(ii) the maximum amount of interest that would be determined in respect thereof if interest thereon for that year were computed on a compound interest basis using the maximum of all rates each of which is a rate computed

(A) in respect of each possible circumstance under which an interest of the taxpayer in the obligation could mature or be surrendered or retracted, and

(B) using assumptions concerning the interest rate and compounding period that will result in a present value, at the date of issue of the obligation, of all the maximum payments thereunder, equal to its principal amount;

(c.1) in the case of a prescribed debt obligation described in paragraph (1)(c) for which

(i) the rate of interest stipulated to be payable in respect of each period throughout which the obligation is outstanding is fixed at the date of issue of the obligation, and

(ii) the stipulated rate of interest applicable at each time is not less than each stipulated rate of interest applicable before that time, the amount of interest that would be determined in respect of the year if interest on the obligation for that year were computed on a compound interest basis using the maximum of all rates each of which is the compound interest rate that, for a particular assumption with respect to when the taxpayer's interest in the obligation will mature or be surrendered or retracted, results in a present value (at the date the taxpayer acquires the interest in the obligation) of all payments under the obligation after the acquisition by the taxpayer of the taxpayer's interest in the obligation equal to the principal amount of the obligation at the date of acquisition; and

(d) in the case of a prescribed debt obligation described in paragraph (1)(d), the maximum amount of interest thereon that could be payable thereunder in respect of that year.

7001. Indexed debt obligations — (1) For the purpose of subparagraph 16(6)(a)(i) of the Act, where at any time in a taxation year a taxpayer holds an interest in an indexed debt obligation, there is prescribed as interest receivable and received by the taxpayer in the year in respect of the obligation the total of

(a) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which the amount payable in respect of the taxpayer's interest in an indexed payment under the obligation (other than a payment that is an excluded payment with respect to the taxpayer for the year) has, because of a change in the purchasing power of money, increased over an inflation adjustment period of the obligation that ends in the year

exceeds the total of

(ii) that portion of the total, if any, determined under subparagraph (i) that is required, otherwise than by subsection 16(6) of the Act, to be included in computing the taxpayer's income for the year or a preceding taxation year, and

(iii) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which the amount payable in respect of the taxpayer's interest in an indexed payment under the obligation (other than a payment that is an excluded payment with respect to the taxpayer for the year) has, by reason of a change in the purchasing power of money, decreased over an inflation adjustment period of the obligation that ends in the year, and

(b) where the non-indexed debt obligation associated with the indexed debt obligation is an obligation that is described in any of paragraphs 7000(1)(a) to (d), the amount of interest that would be determined under subsection 7000(2) to accrue to the taxpayer in respect of the non-indexed debt obligation in the particular period that

(i) begins at the beginning of the first inflation adjustment period of the indexed debt obligation in respect of the taxpayer that ends in the year, and

(ii) ends at the end of the last inflation adjustment period of the indexed debt obligation in respect of the taxpayer that ends in the year

if the particular period were a taxation year of the taxpayer and the taxpayer's interest in the indexed debt obligation were an interest in the non-indexed debt obligation.

(2) For the purposes of subparagraph 16(6)(a)(ii) of the Act, where at any time in a taxation year a taxpayer holds an interest in an indexed debt obligation, there is prescribed as interest payable and paid by the taxpayer in the year in respect of the obligation the amount, if any, by which

(a) the total of the amounts, if any, determined under subparagraphs (1)(a)(ii) and (iii) for the year in respect of the taxpayer's interest in the obligation

exceeds

(b) the amount, if any, determined under subparagraph (1)(a)(i) for the year in respect of the taxpayer's interest in the obligation.

(3) For the purposes of subparagraph 16(6)(b)(i) of the Act, where at any time in a taxation year an indexed debt obligation is an obligation of a taxpayer, there is prescribed as interest payable in respect of the year by the taxpayer in respect of the obligation the amount, if any, that would be determined under paragraph (1)(a) in respect of the taxpayer for the year if, at each time at which the obligation is an obligation of the taxpayer, the taxpayer were the holder of the obligation and not the debtor under the obligation.

(4) For the purposes of subparagraph 16(6)(b)(ii) of the Act, where at any time in a taxation year an indexed debt obligation is an obligation of a taxpayer, there is prescribed as interest receivable and received by the taxpayer in the year in respect of the obligation the amount, if any, that would be determined under subsection (2) in respect of the taxpayer for the year if, at each time at which the obligation is an obligation of the taxpayer, the taxpayer were the holder of the obligation and not the debtor under the obligation.

(5) For the purpose of determining the amount by which an indexed payment under an indexed debt obligation has increased or decreased over a period because of a change in the purchasing power of money, the amount of the indexed payment at any time shall be determined using the method for computing the amount of the payment at the time it is to be made, adjusted in a reasonable manner to take into account the earlier date of computation.

(6) For the purposes of this section, the non-indexed debt obligation associated with an indexed debt obligation is the debt obligation that would result if the indexed debt obligation were amended to eliminate all adjustments determined by reference to changes in the purchasing power of money.

(7) In this section,

"excluded payment" with respect to a taxpayer for a taxation year means an indexed payment under an indexed debt obligation where

(a) the non-indexed debt obligation associated with the indexed debt obligation provides for the payment, at least annually, of interest at a single fixed rate, and

(b) the indexed payment corresponds to one of the interest payments referred to in paragraph (a),

but does not include payments under an indexed debt obligation where, at any time in the year, the taxpayer's proportionate interest in a payment to be made under the obligation after that time differs from the taxpayer's proportionate interest in any other payment to be made under the obligation after that time;

"indexed payment" means, in relation to an indexed debt obligation, an amount payable under the obligation that is determined by reference to the purchasing power of money;

"inflation adjustment period" of an indexed debt obligation means, in relation to a taxpayer,

(a) where the taxpayer acquires and disposes of the taxpayer's interest in the obligation in the same regular adjustment period of the obligation, the period that begins when the taxpayer acquires the interest in the obligation and ends when the taxpayer disposes of the interest, and

(b) in any other case, each of the following consecutive periods:

(i) the period that begins when the taxpayer acquires the taxpayer's interest in the obligation and ends at the end of the regular adjustment period of the obligation in which the taxpayer acquires the interest in the obligation,

(ii) each succeeding regular adjustment period of the obligation throughout which the taxpayer holds the interest in the obligation, and

(iii) where the taxpayer does not dispose of the interest in the obligation at the end of a regular adjustment period of the obligation, the period that begins immediately after the last period referred to in subparagraphs (i) and (ii) and that ends when the taxpayer disposes of the interest in the obligation;

"regular adjustment period" of an indexed debt obligation means

(a) where the terms or conditions of the obligation provide that, while the obligation is outstanding, indexed payments are to be made at regular intervals not exceeding 12 months in length, each of the following periods:

(i) the period that begins when the obligation is issued and ends when the first indexed payment is required to be made, and

(ii) each succeeding period beginning when an indexed payment is required to be made and ending when the next indexed payment is required to be made,

(b) where paragraph (a) does not apply and the obligation is outstanding for less than 12 months, the period that begins when the obligation is issued and ends when the obligation ceases to be outstanding, and

(c) in any other case, each of the following periods:

(i) the 12-month period that begins when the obligation is issued,

(ii) each succeeding 12-month period throughout which the obligation is outstanding, and

(iii) where the obligation ceases to be outstanding at a time other than the end of a 12-month period referred to in subparagraph (i) or (ii), the period that commences immediately after the last period referred to in those subparagraphs and that ends when the obligation ceases to be outstanding.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 7305

Department of Agriculture and Agri-Food news release, November 17, 1997: Tax Deferral on 1997 Income from Drought-Induced Sales

Owners of breeding livestock in Nova Scotia who were forced to sell all or part of their herd this year because of drought conditions will be eligible for a one-year tax deferral on 1997 income made from those sales.

The eligibility for deferral was made on the advice of federal Minister of Agriculture and Agri-Food Lyle Vanclief to the Minister of Finance Paul Martin.

Nova Scotia's eligibility for the deferral under the Income Tax Act is based on an initial review of precipitation levels and forage yield during the 1997 growing season. The review showed significant drought impact on forage yields throughout Nova Scotia.

A final assessment of eligible areas across the country will be made in December. Other eligible areas currently include south-eastern Saskatchewan and south-western Manitoba.

The deferral provides a management option to owners of breeding livestock forced to sell all or part of their herd due to drought conditions affecting feed or water supplies. It allows producers in designated areas to defer income tax on the sale of breeding livestock for one year to replenish breeding stock in the following year.

Producers in designated areas will be able to request this deferral when filing their 1997 income tax returns. Livestock producers are asked to contact their local Revenue Canada Tax Services Office for details on the income tax provisions.

The announcement of the additional areas was made today by federal Minister of Agriculture and Agri-Food Ralph Goodale. [See list below.]

The deferral was made after reviewing soil moisture, precipitation levels and forage yield for the 1995 growing season, and provides a management option to owners of breeding livestock forced to sell all or part of their herd due to drought conditions affecting feed or water supplies.

In designated areas of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the deferral allows eligible producers to exclude a portion of the proceeds from the sale of breeding livestock from their income for one year to replenish breeding hers in the following year.

Eligible producers will be able to request this deferral when filing their 1995 income tax returns. Livestock producers are asked to contact their district taxation office to determine eligibility for the program.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 7305

Department of Agriculture and Agri-Food news release, November 17, 1996: Income from Drought Induced Sales

Owners of breeding livestock in designated areas of Saskatchewan and Manitoba who were forced to sell all or part of their herd this year because of drought conditions will be eligible for a one-year tax deferral on 1997 income made from these sales.

The designation of eligible areas was made on the advice of federal Minister of Agriculture and Agri-Food Lyle Vanclief to the Minister of Finance Paul Martin. The initial designation was made after reviewing soil moisture, precipitation levels and forage yield during the 1997 growing season. The review showed significant drought impact on forage yields in southeastern areas of Saskatchewan and southwestern and west central areas of Manitoba. A final designation of eligible areas will be made in December.

The deferral provides a management option to owners of breeding livestock forced to sell all or part of their herd due to drought conditions affecting feed or water supplies. It allows producers in designated areas to defer income tax on the sale of breeding livestock for one year to replenish breeding stock in the following year.

Producers in designated areas will be able to request this deferral when filing their 1997 income tax returns. Livestock producers are asked to contact their local Revenue Canada Tax Services Office for details on the income tax provisions.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 7305.1

Department of Finance news release, December 12, 1995:
Prescribed Rates for the Automobile Operating Expense Benefit

These are the rates used to determine the value of the benefit to the employee of having the personal portion of automobile operating expenses paid by the employer when a vehicle is provided to an employee. Employees must include this benefit as income in their tax returns. For 1996, the general prescribed rate will be increased by one cent per kilometre to 13 cents per kilometre of personal driving while, in the case of taxpayers employed principally in selling or leasing automobiles, the prescribed rate will be increased by one cent per kilometre to 10 cents per kilometre of personal driving. These rates reflect only operating expenses and do not include depreciation and financing costs. The additional benefit of having an employer-owned vehicle available for personal use (i.e., the automobile standby charge) is calculated separately and is also included in the employee's income.

Employees must include this benefit as income in their tax returns. For 1997, the general prescribed rate is increased by one cent per kilometre to 14¢ per kilometre of personal driving while, in the case of taxpayers employed principally in selling or leasing automobiles, the prescribed rate is increased by one cent per kilometre to 11¢ per kilometre of personal driving.

(a) in respect of kilometres driven after 1987 for the purpose of earning income of the individual, the aggregate of

(i) 27 cents multiplied by the number of such kilometres, up to and including 5,000, driven in the year,

(ii) 21 cents multiplied by the number of such kilometres in excess of 5,000 driven in the year, and

(iii) 4 cents multiplied by the number of such kilometres driven in the year in the Yukon Territory or the Northwest Territories, and

(b) in respect of kilometres driven after August 1989 for the purpose of earning income of the individual, 4 cents multiplied by the number of such kilometres driven in the year.

Department of Finance news release, December 12, 1995: Tax-Exempt Kilometre Limit

This limit restricts the amount that an employer can deduct for tax-free allowances paid to employees who use their personal vehicles for business purposes. The limit reflects the key cost components of owning and operating an automobile, such as depreciation, financing, and operating expenses (i.e., gas, maintenance, insurance and license fees). For 1996, the limit is increased by two cents a kilometre to 33 cents for the first 5,000 kilometres driven and 27 cents for each kilometre thereafter. The limits are four cents per kilometre higher in the Yukon and Northwest Territories to reflect the higher cost of maintaining and operating a vehicle in those regions.

The limits provide a system which is simple to administer for both businesses and their employees by permitting the deduction by businesses of reasonable reimbursement costs without requiring employees to include the amounts in income or to justify their actual automobile operating expenses. These rates do not limit the amount that employers can pay to employees who use their personal vehicles for business purposes. However, for employers to be able to deduct higher rates, the allowance must be judged reasonable by Revenue Canada and be included in the employee's income. In such circumstances, employees fulfilling certain conditions, such as those who are required to use a vehicle to accomplish their work (e.g., salespersons), could then claim the actual automobile expenses they incur.

Department of Finance news release, December 4, 1997: Interest Expense Limit

This limit restricts the deductibility of interest expenses on funds borrowed to finance the purchase of a vehicle. It reflects the reasonable cost of financing a vehicle that is generally acceptable for business purposes. For 1998 this limit will remain at $250 per month.

(3) For the purpose of the description of A in paragraph 67.3(c) of the Act, the amount prescribed in respect of a taxation year of a lessee is, with respect to an automobile leased under a lease entered into

(a) after August 1989 and before 1991, $650; and

(b) after 1990, the amount equal to the aggregate of

(i) $650, and

(ii) the greatest amount of federal and provincial sales taxes that would have been payable on a monthly payment under the lease in the taxation year of the lessee, if the lease has required monthly payments, before those taxes, of $650.

Department of Finance news release, December 12, 1995: Leasing limit

The deductibility of automobile leasing costs is restricted to the lesser of:

- actual lease payments (adjusted downward if the manufacturer's list price of the automobile exceeds the capital cost ceiling); and
- a prescribed rate per month.

Department of Finance news release, December 23, 1996: Leasing limit

The deductibility of automobile leasing costs is restricted to the lesser of:

- actual lease payments (adjusted downward if the manufacturer's list price of the automobile exceeds the capital cost ceiling); and
- a prescribed rate per month.

The prescribed rate per month reflects the cost of leasing a vehicle that is generally acceptable for business purposes. For 1997, this prescribed rate is reduced by $100 per month to $550 plus the applicable federal and provincial sales taxes.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 7307(3)

Department of Finance news release, December 4, 1997: Leasing Limit

The deductibility of automobile leasing costs is restricted to the lesser of two amounts:

- actual lease payments (adjusted downward if the value of the automobile exceeds the capital cost ceiling); and
- a prescribed rate per month.

The first restriction automatically limits the deductibility of the lease payment where the cost of the vehicle, if purchased, would have exceeded the capital cost ceiling. The second amount, the prescribed rate per month, further limits the deduction of lease payments to ensure that the timing of deductions for leased vehicles is comparable to that for purchased vehicles.

For leases entered into after 1997, this prescribed rate will be increased by $100 per month to $650 per month, plus the applicable federal and provincial sales taxes. This increase will ensure that payments under shorter term commercial vehicle leases are not unduly restricted while still limiting the deductibility of lease costs to reasonable levels.

I.T. Technical News: No. 9 (life insurance policy used as security for indebtedness); No. 12 (1998 deduction limits and benefit rates for automobiles).

(4) For the purpose of the description of C in paragraph 67.3(d) of the Act, the amount prescribed in respect of an automobile leased under a lease entered into after August 1989 is the amount equal to 100/85 of the amount determined in accordance with subsection (1) in respect of the automobile.

Part LXXX — Prescribed Reserve Amount and Recovery Rate

History: Part LXXX (ss. 8000–8005) added by P.C. 1990-2779, s. 4, December 20, 1990, Canada Gazette, Part II, January 16, 1991, applicable to taxation years and fiscal periods commencing after June 17, 1987 that end after 1987.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 8000 opening words

8000. For the purpose of clause 20(1)(l)(ii)(C) of the Act, the prescribed reserve amount for a taxation year means the aggregate of

Application: The November 14, 1997 draft regulations (impaired loans), subsec. 2(1), will amend the opening words of s. 8000 to read as above, applicable

(a) to taxation years that end after September 1997, and

(b) to taxation years that end after 1995 and before October 1997 where the taxpayer elects in writing to have para. 20(1)(l) of the Act, as amended, to apply to the year and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue before the end of the third month after the month in which the amending legislation is assented to.

Technical Notes: See under Reg. 8000(a.1).

(a) where the taxpayer is a bank, an amount equal to the lesser of

(i) the amount of the reserve reported in its annual report for the year that is filed with and accepted by the relevant authority or, where the taxpayer was throughout the year subject to the supervision of the relevant authority but was not required to file an annual report for the year with the relevant authority, in its financial statements for the year, as general provisions or as specific provisions, in respect of exposures to designated countries in respect of loans or lending assets of the taxpayer made or acquired by it in the ordinary course of its business, and

(ii) an amount in respect of the loans or lending assets of the taxpayer at the end of the year that were made or acquired by the taxpayer in the ordinary course of its business and reported for the year by the taxpayer to the relevant authority, in accordance with the guidelines established by the relevant authority, as part of the taxpayer's total exposure to designated countries for the purpose of determining the taxpayer's general provisions or specific provisions referred to in subparagraph (i) or that were acquired by the taxpayer after August 16, 1990 and reported for the year by the taxpayer to the relevant authority, in accordance with the guidelines established by the relevant authority, as an exposure to a designated country (in this subparagraph referred to as the "loans") equal to the positive or negative amount, as the case may be, determined by the formula

$$45\% (A + B) - (B + C)$$

where

A is the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the amount that would be the amortized cost of a loan to the taxpayer at the end of the year if the definition "amortized cost" in section 248 of the Act were read without reference to paragraphs (e) and (i) thereof,

B is the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, by which the principal amount of a loan outstanding at the time it was acquired by the taxpayer exceeds the amortized cost of the loan to the taxpayer immediately after the time it was acquired by the taxpayer, and

C is the aggregate of all amounts each of which is

(A) an amount deducted in respect of a loan under clause 20(1)(l)(ii)(B) of the Act in computing the taxpayer's income for the year, or

(B) an amount in respect of a loan determined as the amount, if any, by which

(I) the aggregate of all amounts in respect of the loan deducted under paragraph 20(1)(p) of the Act in computing the taxpayer's income for the year or a preceding taxation year

exceeds

(II) the aggregate of all amounts in respect of the loan included under paragraph 12(1)(i) of the Act in computing the taxpayer's income for the year or a preceding taxation year, and

Proposed Addition — Reg. 8000(a.1)

(a.1) where the taxpayer is a bank, the positive or negative amount that would be determined under the formula in subparagraph (a)(ii) in respect of the specified loans owned by the taxpayer at the end of the year if that subparagraph applied to those loans, and

Application: The November 14, 1997 draft regulations (impaired loans), subsec. 2(2), will add para. 8000(a.1), applicable

(a) to the 1997 et seq.; and

(b) to taxation years that end after 1991 and before 1997 where the taxpayer elects in writing to have paragraph 8000(a.1), apply to those years and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue before the end of the third month after the month in which that paragraph is published in the Canada Gazette Part II.

Technical Notes: Section 8000 sets out rules for determining, amongst other things, "historical loss experience", the prescribed reserve amount and the prescribed recovery rate for the purposes of the reserve deduction under subparagraph 20(1)(l)(ii) of the Act. The prescribed reserve amount includes the method for calculating the reserve for doubtful loans and lending assets in respect of exposure to certain highly indebted countries (designated countries). Paragraph 8000(a) provides the rules for determining the reserve in respect of loans to a designated country. Countries are designated by the Office of the Superintendent of Financial Institutions and are set out in the Guidelines issued by that Office. After October 1995, the Superintendent will not designate any new countries and will exempt any new loan exposure to countries already designated. Consequently, paragraph 8000(a) will be relevant only in respect of loans made before November 1995 to countries designated before that time. Paragraph 8000(b) provides rules for determining reserves in respect of classes of loans that are determined by reference to the length of time interest and principal payments are in arrears.

Mexican Brady Bonds

Effective July 1992 Mexico ceased to be listed as a designated country by the Superintendent of Financial Institutions and, as a result, banks are no longer able to claim a prescribed reserve amount, as determined under existing section 8000 in respect of their Mexican loans and securities. The government undertook to propose amendments to the income tax provisions which would continue to treat Mexico as a designated country in respect of certain loans or lending assets. These loans and lending assets are commonly referred to as the Mexican Brady Par and Discount Bonds due in 2019 which were substituted for Mexican loans and securities previously covered by the prescribed reserve rules in section 8000.

The amendment to section 8000 is consequential on the introduction of new clause 20(1)(l)(ii)(C) of the Act which replaces clause 20(1)(l)(ii)(A). New paragraph 8000(a.1) will permit a bank to claim a reserve in respect of its Mexican bonds described in the new definition "specified loan" in section 8006. This reserve is equal to the reserve previously available under subparagraph 8000(a)(ii) in respect of the loans that the Mexican bonds replaced.

The amendments to section 8002 are strictly consequential on the introduction of new paragraph 8000(a.1) which allows for a reserve in respect of Mexican bonds described in the new definition "specified loan" in section 8006. A specified loan means a United Mexican States Collateralized Par Bond due in 2019 or a United Mexican States Collateralized Discount Bond due 2019.

New section 8007 is also consequential on the introduction of new paragraph 8000(a.1). New section 8007 ensures that a paragraph 8000(b) reserve does not apply to a bank in respect of a specified loan to which new paragraph 8000(a.1) applies. Paragraph 8000(b) applies in respect of the reserve calculation for loans that can be grouped according to type, such as, credit card debt and consumer mortgages, and in respect of which a reserve reduction factor can be applied.

New paragraphs 8000(a.1) and 8002(b) and sections 8006 and 8007 are effective for the 1997 and subsequent taxation years and to taxation years that end after 1991 and before 1997 where the taxpayer makes an election to have new paragraph 8000(a.1) apply to those years. Where the taxpayer so elects, the election must be filed with the Minister of National Revenue by the end of the third month after the month in which paragraph 8000(a.1) is published in the Canada Gazette Part II.

(b) an amount, not exceeding a reasonable amount, of a reserve for the year in respect of doubtful loans or lending assets of the taxpayer (other than a loan or lending described in subparagraph (a)(ii)) computed by

(i) identifying loans or lending assets of the taxpayer with respect to which a reserve could be claimed under clause 20(1)(l)(ii)(B) of the Act,

(ii) segregating particular types of loans or lending assets of the taxpayer referred to in subparagraph (i) into different classes based on the length of time that interest or principal payable to the taxpayer in respect thereof has been in arrears, and

(iii) determining the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the amount determined by multiplying the amortized cost to the taxpayer at the end of the year of loans or lending assets of a class described in subparagraph (ii) by the historical loss experience of the taxpayer in respect of that class.

Proposed Repeal — Reg. 8000(b)

Application: The November 14, 1997 draft regulations (impaired loans), subsec. 2(3), will repeal para. 8000(b), applicable

(a) to taxation years that end after September 1997; and

(b) to taxation years that end after 1995 and before October 1997 where the taxpayer elects in writing to have para. 20(1)(l) of the Act, as amended, to apply to the year and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue before the end of the third month after the month in which the amending legislation is assented to.

Technical Notes: Clause 20(1)(l)(ii)(A) of the Act refers to the prescribed reserve amount for a taxpayer for a year. This amount is determined as the aggregate of the reserve amounts determined under paragraphs 8000(a) and (b). The reserve under paragraph 8000(b) applies in respect of loans that can be grouped according to type, such as, credit card debt and consumer mortgages and in respect of which can be applied a "historical loss experience" factor. Section 8004 sets out the meaning of "historical loss experience". Section 8001 sets out the prescribed recovery rate for the purposes of subclause 20(1)(l)(ii)(B)(II) and subparagraph 20(1)(l.1)(ii) of the Act. The reference to prescribed recovery rate is no longer relevant to that subclause and subparagraph. Paragraph 8000(b) and sections 8001 and 8004 are repealed effective for taxation years that end after September 1997 and to taxation years that end after 1995 and before October 1997 where the taxpayer elects to have new paragraph 20(1)(l) of the Act apply to those years. The impaired loans previously subject to the "historical loss experience" calculation will now be included with all other loans in the reserve amount determined under new clause 20(1)(l)(ii)(D) of the Act.

8001. For the purposes of subclause 20(1)(l)(ii)(B)(II) and subparagraph 20(1)(l.1)(ii) of the Act, the prescribed recovery rate is 10 per cent.

Proposed Repeal — Reg. 8001

Application: The November 14, 1997 draft regulations (impaired loans), s. 3, will repeal s. 8001, applicable

(a) to taxation years that end after September 1997; and

(b) to taxation years that end after 1995 and before October 1997 where the taxpayer elects in writing to have para. 20(1)(l) of the Act, as amended, to apply to the year and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue before the end of the third month after the month in which the amending legislation is assented to.

Technical Notes: See under Reg. 8000(b).

8002. For the purposes of paragraph 8000(a),

(a) the principal amount outstanding at any time of a lending asset of a taxpayer that is a share of the capital stock of a corporation is the part of the consideration received by the corporation for the issue of the share that is outstanding at that time; and

(b) where a taxpayer

(i) realized a loss on the disposition of a loan or lending asset that was an exposure to a designated country (in this paragraph referred to as the "former loan") for consideration that included another loan or lending asset that was an exposure to that designated country (in this paragraph referred to as the "new loan"), and

(ii) included the loss referred to in subparagraph (i) in the calculation of its provisionable assets as reported in its annual report for the year to the relevant authority, in accordance with the guidelines established by the relevant authority, for the purposes of determining the taxpayer's general provisions or specific provisions in respect of exposures to designated countries, the principal amount outstanding of the new loan at the time it was acquired by the taxpayer shall be deemed to be equal to the principal amount outstanding of the former loan immediately before that time.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 8002(b), (c)

(b) where

(i) a taxpayer realizes a loss from the disposition of a loan or lending asset described in subparagraph 8000(a)(ii) or a specified loan described in paragraph 8000(a.1) (in this paragraph referred to as the "former loan") for consideration that included another loan or lending asset that was a loan or lending asset described in that subparagraph or that paragraph (in this paragraph referred to as the "new loan"), and

(ii) in the case of a former loan that is not a specified loan, the loss is included in computing the taxpayer's provisionable assets as reported for the year to the relevant authority, in accordance with the guidelines established by the relevant authority, for the purpose of determining the taxpayer's general provisions or specific provisions in respect of exposures to designated countries, the principal amount of the new loan outstanding at the time it was acquired by the taxpayer is deemed to be equal to the principal amount of the former loan outstanding immediately before that time; and

(c) where at the end of a particular taxation year a taxpayer owns a specified loan that, at the end of the preceding taxation year, was described in an inventory of the taxpayer, the amortized cost of the specified loan to the taxpayer at the end of the particular year is its value determined under section 10 of the Act at the end of the preceding year for the purpose of computing the taxpayer's income for the preceding year.

Application: The November 14, 1997 draft regulations (impaired loans), s. 4, will amend para. 8002(b) to read as above, and add para. (c), applicable

(a) to the 1997 et seq.; and

(b) to taxation years that end after 1991 and before 1997 where the taxpayer elects in writing to have paragraph 8000(a.1) apply to those years and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue before the end of the third month after the month in which that paragraph is published in the Canada Gazette Part II.

Technical Notes: See under Reg. 8000(a.1).

8003. Where a taxpayer elects to have this section apply by notifying the Minister in writing within 90 days after the day on which this section is published in the Canada Gazette, the loans or lending assets of the taxpayer that are described in subparagraph 8000(a)(ii) shall not include any loan or lending asset acquired by the taxpayer before November 1988 from a person with whom the taxpayer was dealing at arm's length.

8004. For the purposes of paragraph 8000(b), "historical loss experience" of a taxpayer, in respect of a class of loans or lending assets, means a reasonable percentage of the amortized cost to the taxpayer of the loans or lending assets of that class that are included in determining the amount under subparagraph 8000(b)(iii), where that percentage is a representation of the prior years losses net of recoveries in respect of the loans or lending assets of that class.

Proposed Repeal — Reg. 8004

Application: The November 14, 1997 draft regulations (impaired loans), s. 5, will repeal s. 8004, applicable

(a) to taxation years that end after September 1997; and

(b) to taxation years that end after 1995 and before October 1997 where the taxpayer elects in writing to have para. 20(1)(l) of the Act, as amended, to apply to the year and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue before the end of the third month after the month in which the amending legislation is assented to.

Technical Notes: See under Reg. 8000(b).

8005. For the purposes of subparagraph 8000(a)(ii), where a loan or lending asset of a person (in this section referred to as the "holder") related to a taxpayer

(a) was reported for the year by the taxpayer to the relevant authority, in accordance with the guidelines established by the relevant authority, as an exposure to a designated country,

(b) was acquired by the holder or another person related to the taxpayer after August 16, 1990 as part of a series of transactions or events in which the taxpayer or a person related to the taxpayer disposed of a loan or lending asset that

(i) for the taxation year immediately preceding the particular year in which it was disposed of, was a loan or lending asset that was reported by the taxpayer to the relevant authority, in accordance with the guidelines established by the relevant authority, as an exposure to a designated country, and

(ii) was a loan or lending asset a loss arising on the disposition of which would be a loss in respect of which a deduction is permitted under Part I of the Act to the taxpayer or a person related to the taxpayer, and

(c) had an amortized cost to the holder, immediately after the time it was acquired by the holder, that was less than 55 per cent of its principal amount,

the following rules apply:

(d) the loan or lending asset shall be deemed

(i) to be a loan or lending asset of the taxpayer at the end of the year,

(ii) to be a loan or lending asset of the taxpayer that was acquired by the taxpayer at the time it was acquired by the holder, and

(iii) to have an amortized cost to the taxpayer, at any time, that is equal to its amortized cost to the holder at that time, and

(e) any amount in respect of the loan or lending asset deducted under paragraph 20(1)(p) of the Act or included under paragraph 12(1)(i) of the Act in computing the holder's income for a particular year shall be deemed to have been so deducted or included, as the case may be, in computing the income of the taxpayer for the year in which the particular year ends.

8006. For the purposes of this Part,

(c) in any other case, the total of all amounts each of which is the maximum amount that would, because of paragraph 1400(e) or (e.1), have been deductible under paragraph 20(7)(c) of the Act in respect of an insurance policy in computing the insurer's income for its last taxation year that ended before February 23, 1994 if paragraph 1400(e.1) had applied to that year and paragraphs 1400(e) and (e.1) were read in their application to that year as they read in their application to the insurer's taxation year that includes February 23, 1994.

History: Ss. 8100 and 8101 substituted for ss. 8100 to 8105 by P.C. 1996-1452, s. 3, September 17, 1996, Canada Gazette, Part II, October 2, 1996, applicable to taxation years that end after February 22, 1994.

8101. Inclusion of transition amount in respect of unpaid claims reserve — (1) In this section, "transition deduction" of an insurer means the amount deducted under subsection 20(26) of the Act in computing the insurer's income for its taxation year that includes February 23, 1994.

(2) Subject to subsection (3), there is prescribed for the purpose of section 12.3 of the Act in respect of an insurer for a taxation year that ends after February 22, 1994 the amount determined by the formula

$$\left(\frac{(0.05A + 0.10B + 0.15C)}{365}\right) \times D$$

where

A is the total of

(a) the number of days in the taxation year that are in 1994 or 1995, and

(b) where the taxation year includes February 23, 1994, the number of days in 1994 that are before the first day of the taxation year,

B is the number of days in the taxation year (other than February 29) that are in any of 1996 to 2001,

C is the number of days in the taxation year that are in 2002 or 2003, and

D is the insurer's transition deduction minus the amount, if any, required by subsection (4) or paragraph (5)(b) to be subtracted.

(3) Where subsection 88(1) of the Act has applied to the winding-up of an insurer (in this subsection referred to as the "subsidiary"),

(a) the values of A, B, and C in subsection (2) shall be determined in respect of the subsidiary without including any days that are after the day on which the subsidiary's assets were distributed to its parent on the winding-up; and

(b) there is prescribed for the purpose of section 12.3 of the Act in respect of the parent for its taxation year that includes the day referred to in paragraph (a) the total of

(i) the amount that would be determined under subsection (2) in respect of the parent for the year if the parent's transition deduction did not include the subsidiary's transition deduction, and

(ii) the amount that would be determined under subsection (2) in respect of the parent for the year if

(A) the values of A, B, and C in that subsection were determined without including the day referred to in paragraph (a) and any days before that day, and

(B) the value of D in that subsection were equal to the subsidiary's transition deduction.

(4) Where subsection 138(11.5) or (11.94) of the Act has applied to the transfer of an insurance business by an insurer, there shall be subtracted, in determining the value of D in subsection (2) in respect of the insurer for a taxation year ending after the insurer ceased to carry on all or substantially all of the business, the part of the insurer's transition deduction that can reasonably be attributed to the business.

(5) Where an insurer ceases to carry on all or substantially all of an insurance business, otherwise than as a result of a merger to which subsection 87(2) of the Act applies, a winding-up to which subsection 88(1) of the Act applies or a transfer of the business to which subsection 138(11.5) or (11.94) of the Act applies,

(a) there is prescribed for the purpose of section 12.3 of the Act in respect of the insurer for its taxation year in which the cessation of business occurs, in addition to the amount prescribed by subsection (2), the amount, if any, by which

(i) the part of the insurer's transition deduction that can reasonably be attributed to the business

exceeds

(ii) that part of the total of the amounts included under section 12.3 of the Act in computing the income of the insurer for preceding taxation years that can reasonably be considered to be in respect of the amount determined under subparagraph (i); and

(b) there shall be subtracted, in determining the value of D in subsection (2) in respect of the insurer for the year or a subsequent taxation year, the amount determined under subparagraph (a)(i).

Proposed Addition — Reg. 8102–8105

Technical Notes: Part LXXXI contains transition rules for the 1987 tax reform changes to the reserves available to financial institutions. On December 8, 1994, draft amendments were announced that would repeal these rules and introduce (in sections 8100 and 8101) new transition rules relating to unpaid claims reserves for non-life insurance policies.

New transition rules are added in sections 8102 to 8105 in connection with the introduction of the mark-to-market requirement for shares and certain debt obligations held by financial institutions. These new rules apply to taxation years ending after October 30, 1994.

Section 8102 prescribes the maximum transition deduction that may be claimed under subsection 142.5(4) of the Act in respect of non-capital properties.

8102. Mark-to-market — transition deduction — (1) In this section,

"excluded property" of a taxpayer means a mark-to-market property used in a business of the taxpayer in its taxation year that includes October 31, 1994 where it is reasonable to expect that the property would have been valued at its fair market value for the purpose of computing the taxpayer's income from the business for the year if

(a) the Act were read without reference to subsection 142.5(2), and

(b) the property were held at the end of the year;

Technical Notes: "Excluded property" of a taxpayer is property that it is reasonable to consider would have been marked to market for tax purposes in the taxpayer's taxation year that includes October 31, 1994, even if a requirement to do so had not been introduced. The determination of whether property that has been sold during the year is excluded property is to be made assuming that the taxpayer continued to hold the property throughout the year.

"mark-to-market property" has the meaning assigned by subsection 142.2(1) of the Act.

Technical Notes: "Mark-to-market property" of a taxpayer has the meaning given by subsection 142.2(1) of the Act. In general terms, it comprises most shares held by the taxpayer and debt obligations that are marked to market for financial statement purposes.

(2) For the purpose of subsection 142.5(4) of the Act, the prescribed amount for a taxpayer's taxation year that includes October 31, 1994 is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is the taxpayer's profit from the disposition in the year, because of subsection 142.5(2) of the Act, of a property other than a capital property or an excluded property

exceeds the total of

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is the taxpayer's loss from the disposition in the year, because of subsection 142.5(2) of the Act, of a property other than a capital property or an excluded property, and

(c) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is the taxpayer's loss from the disposition in the year of a mark-to-market property (other than a capital property, an excluded property or a property disposed of because of subsection 142.5(2) of the Act)

exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is the taxpayer's profit from the disposition in the year of a mark-to-market property (other than a capital property, an excluded property or a property disposed of because of subsection 142.5(2) of the Act).

Technical Notes: Subsection 142.5(4) of the Act contains a transition deduction in respect of the introduction of the requirement that certain property be marked to market for tax purposes. It permits a taxpayer to deduct an amount not exceeding a prescribed amount in its taxation year that includes October 31, 1994. Subsection 8102(2) prescribes the following maximum amount for this purpose:

- the taxpayer's total profits from the disposition of non-capital mark-to-market properties (other than excluded properties, as defined in subsection 8102(1)) that the mark-to-market rules deem the taxpayer to have disposed of in the year

- the taxpayer's total losses from the disposition of non-capital mark-to-market properties (other than excluded properties) that the mark-to-market rules deem the taxpayer to have disposed of in the year, and
- the taxpayer's net losses (i.e., losses minus profits) from actual dispositions in the year of non-capital mark-to-market properties (other than excluded properties) and from deemed dispositions of such properties otherwise than because of the mark-to-market rules.

8103. Mark-to-market — transition inclusion — (1) In this section, "transition deduction" of a taxpayer means the amount deducted under subsection 142.5(4) of the Act in computing the taxpayer's income for its taxation year that includes October 31, 1994.

Technical Notes: Section 8103 applies where a taxpayer has claimed a deduction under subsection 142.5(4) of the Act in respect of the introduction of the mark-to-market requirement. It prescribes the amount to be included in income each year under subsection 142.5(5) of the Act in respect of the deducted amount. Generally, the deducted amount is required to be included in income over a 5-year period. Section 8103 also contains rules for the income inclusion after certain corporate reorganizations have occurred or where a taxpayer ceases to carry on a business or to be a financial institution.

Subsection 8103(1) defines the "transition deduction" of a taxpayer to be the amount deducted under subsection 142.5(4) of the Act in computing the taxpayer's income for its taxation year that includes October 31, 1994.

Where a taxpayer has been formed by amalgamation, the continuity rule in paragraph 87(2)(g.2) of the Act ensures that any amount deducted by a predecessor corporation under subsection 142.5(4) of the Act is considered to have been deducted by the taxpayer. Therefore, the taxpayer's transition deduction is the sum of the transition deductions of its predecessors.

Similarly, the transition deduction of a taxpayer to which a business has been transferred in a transaction to which subsection 88(1) (winding-up), 138(11.5) (transfer of insurance business by a non-resident insurer) or 138(11.94) (transfer of insurance business by a resident insurer) of the Act applies will include the amount deducted by the transferor under subsection 142.5(4) in respect of the business. The relevant continuity rules are in paragraph 87(2)(g.2) (which applies to a winding-up by reason of paragraph 88(1)(e.2)) and paragraph 138(11.5)(k).

(2) Subject to subsections (3), (5) and (7), there is prescribed for the purpose of subsection 142.5(5) of the Act in respect of a taxpayer for a taxation year that ends after October 30, 1994 the amount determined by the formula

$$\frac{A}{1825} \times B$$

where

A is the number of days (other than February 29) in the year that are before the day that is 5 years after the first day of the taxation year of the taxpayer that includes October 31, 1994, and

B is the taxpayer's transition deduction minus the amount, if any, required by subsection (4) or paragraph (6)(b) to be subtracted.

Technical Notes: Subsection 8103(2) prescribes the amount to be included in income each year under subsection 142.5(5) of the Act by a taxpayer that has claimed a transition deduction under subsection 142.5(4). The first taxation year for which an amount is prescribed is the taxation year that includes October 31, 1994. The prescribed amount for a taxation year is given by the formula:

$$\frac{A}{1825} \times B$$

where

A = the number of days in the year that are not more than 5 years after the start of the taxpayer's taxation year that includes October 31, 1994 — February 29th is disregarded for this purpose, and

B = the taxpayer's transition deduction minus the amounts specified by subsection 8103(4) and paragraph 8103(6)(b).

Subsections 8103(3), (5) and (7) contain rules that override the determination of the prescribed amount under subsection 8103(2) when a taxpayer undergoes a reorganization, ceases to be a financial institution or ceases to carry on a business.

(3) Where subsection 88(1) of the Act has applied to the winding-up of a taxpayer (in this subsection referred to as the "subsidiary"),

(a) the value of A in subsection (2) shall be determined in respect of the subsidiary without including any days that are after the day on which the subsidiary's assets were distributed to its parent on the winding-up; and

(b) there is prescribed for the purpose of subsection 142.5(5) of the Act in respect of the parent for its taxation year that includes the day referred to in paragraph (a) the total of

(i) the amount that would be determined under subsection (2) in respect of the parent for the year if the parent's transition deduction did not include the subsidiary's transition deduction, and

(ii) the amount that would be determined under subsection (2) in respect of the parent for the year if

(A) the value of A in that subsection were determined without including the day referred to in paragraph (a) and any days before that day, and

(B) the value of B in that subsection were equal to the subsidiary's transition deduction.

Technical Notes: As noted in the commentary on subsection 8103(1), where a subsidiary is wound up into its parent corporation and subsection 88(1) of the Act applies to the winding-up, the parent will be considered to have deducted the amount deducted by the subsidiary under subsection 142.5(4) of the Act. Thus, this amount will be taken into account in determining the amounts prescribed by subsection 8103(2) in respect of the parent.

Subsection 8103(3) contains additional rules relating to the winding-up of a subsidiary. These rules ensure that no part of the subsidiary's transition deduction is required to be included in both the parent's and the subsidiary's income.

Paragraph 8103(3)(a) provides that the amounts prescribed by subsection 8103(1) for the subsidiary are to be determined ignoring any days after the day on which the subsidiary's assets are distributed to its parent. This rule is relevant only if the subsidiary has a taxation year that ends after the day on which the distribution occurs.

Paragraph 8103(3)(b) prescribes the amount to be included in the parent's income under subsection 142.5(5) of the Act for the taxation year in which it receives the subsidiary's assets. The prescribed amount is equal to the sum of

- the amount that would otherwise be prescribed by subsection 8103(2) if the parent's transition deduction did not include any amount in respect of the subsidiary's transition deduction, and
- the part of the subsidiary's transition deduction that must be recognized in respect of the days in the taxation year after the parent receives the subsidiary's assets.

(4) Where subsection 138(11.5) or (11.94) of the Act has applied to the transfer of an insurance business by an insurer, there shall be subtracted, in determining the value of B in subsection (2) in respect of the insurer for a taxation year that ends after the insurer ceased to carry on all or substantially all of the business, the part of the insurer's transition deduction that is included, because of paragraph 138(11.5)(k) of the Act, in the transition deduction of the person to whom the business was transferred.

Technical Notes: Subsection 8103(4) applies where an insurer has transferred an insurance business to another corporation on a rollover basis pursuant to subsection 138(11.5) or (11.94) of the Act. It provides that after the transfer of the business, the portion of the transferor's transition deduction that is considered a transition deduction of the transferee because of paragraph 138(11.5)(k) of the Act is to be disregarded in determining the amount prescribed by subsection 8103(2) in respect of the transferor. Paragraph 138(11.5)(k) contains a continuity rule for the portion of the transition amount that is reasonably attributable to the transferred business. Since paragraph 138(11.5)(h) of the Act deems the transferor and transferee to have taxation year ends immediately before the business is transferred, special rules are not required for the taxation year of transfer.

(5) Where subsection 98(6) of the Act deems a partnership (in this subsection referred to as the "new partnership") to be a continuation of another partnership (in this subsection referred to as the "predecessor partnership"),

(a) the value of A in subsection (2) shall be determined in respect of the predecessor partnership without including any days that are after the day on which the predecessor partnership's property was transferred to the new partnership; and

(b) there is prescribed for the purpose of subsection 142.5(5) of the Act in respect of the new partnership for its taxation year that includes the day referred to in paragraph (a) the total of

(i) the amount that would be determined under subsection (2) in respect of the new partnership for the year if its transition deduction did not include the predecessor partnership's transition deduction, and

(ii) the amount that would be determined under subsection (2) in respect of the new partnership for the year if

(A) the value of A in that subsection were determined without including the day referred to in paragraph (a) and any days before that day, and

(B) the value of B in that subsection were equal to the predecessor partnership's transition deduction.

Technical Notes: Subsection 8103(5) contains rules that apply where a partnership ceases to exist and another partnership replaces it, in circumstances such that the continuity rule in subsection 98(6) of the Act applies. The rules are similar to those in subsection 8103(3) for the winding-up of a taxpayer into its parent corporation.

(6) Where a taxpayer ceases to carry on all or substantially all of a business, otherwise than as a result of a merger to which subsection 87(2) of the Act applies, a winding-up to which subsection 88(1) of the Act applies or a transfer of the business to which subsection 98(6) or 138(11.5) or (11.94) of the Act applies,

(a) there is prescribed for the purpose of subsection 142.5(5) of the Act in respect of the taxpayer for its taxation year in which the cessation of business occurs, in addition to the amount prescribed by subsection (2), the amount, if any, by which

(i) the part of the taxpayer's transition deduction that can reasonably be attributed to the business

exceeds

(ii) that part of the total of the amounts included under subsection 142.5(5) of the Act in computing the income of the taxpayer for preceding taxation years that can reasonably be considered to be in respect of the amount determined under subparagraph (i); and

(b) there shall be subtracted, in determining the value of B in subsection (2) in respect of the taxpayer for the year or a subsequent taxation year, the amount determined under subparagraph (a)(i).

Technical Notes: Subsection 8103(6) applies where a taxpayer ceases to carry on all or substantially all of a business otherwise than because of a merger, winding-up or transfer of the business to which the rollover rules in subsection 87(2), 88(1), 98(6) or 138(11.5) or (11.94) of the Act apply. In general terms, it accelerates the inclusion in income of the portion of the taxpayer's transition deduction that relates to the business.

Subsection 8103(6) prescribes an amount for inclusion, under subsection 142.5(5) of the Act, in the taxpayer's income for its taxation year in which it ceases to carry on the business. The prescribed amount, which is in addition to the amount prescribed for the year by subsection 8103(2), is equal to the portion of the taxpayer's transition deduction that is attributable to the business minus the amount of that portion that has already been included in the taxpayer's income. Subsection 8103(6) also provides that the portion of the taxpayer's transition deduction that is attributable to the business is to be disregarded in determining the amount prescribed by subsection 8103(2) in respect of the taxpayer for the taxation year in which it ceases to carry on the business and for subsequent taxation years.

(7) Where a taxpayer ceases at any time to be a financial institution otherwise than because it ceases to carry on a business,

(a) there is prescribed for the purpose of subsection 142.5(5) of the Act in respect of the taxpayer for its taxation year that ended immediately before that time, the amount, if any, by which

(i) the taxpayer's transition deduction

exceeds

(ii) the total of the amounts included under subsection 142.5(5) of the Act in computing the taxpayer's income for preceding taxation years; and

(b) the amount prescribed for the purpose of subsection 142.5(5) of the Act in respect of the taxpayer for taxation years after the taxation year referred to in paragraph (a) is nil.

Technical Notes: Subsection 8103(7) applies where a taxpayer ceases to be a financial institution (as defined in subsection 142.2(1) of the Act) otherwise than because it has ceased to carry on a business. This subsection would apply, for example, where a taxpayer ceases to be a financial institution because of a change in control. Subsection 8103(7) requires the taxpayer to include the remaining amount of its transition deduction in income in the taxation year that ends immediately before it ceases to be a financial institution. (There will always be such a taxation year because of paragraph 142.6(1)(a) of the Act.)

8104. Mark-to-market — transition capital loss — (1) In this section,

"excluded property" of a taxpayer means a mark-to-market property of the taxpayer for its taxation year that includes October 31, 1994 where

(a) the taxpayer had a taxable capital gain or an allowable capital loss for the year from the disposition of the property to which section 142 of the Act applied, or

(b) in the case of a taxpayer that was non-resident in the year, the property was a capital property other than a taxable Canadian property;

Technical Notes: Section 8104 prescribes the maximum amount that a taxpayer may claim under subsection 142.5(6) of the Act as an allowable capital loss in respect of the introduction of the mark-to-market requirement.

"Excluded property" of a taxpayer is certain mark-to-market property held by the taxpayer in its taxation year that includes October 31, 1994. This definition is relevant for a taxpayer that is a resident multinational life insurer or a non-resident insurer. In the case of a resident multinational life insurer, excluded property is capital property disposed of by the insurer in the year that was used by the insurer in a foreign insurance business. Excluded property of a non-resident insurer is capital property that is not taxable Canadian property (as defined in subsection 115(1) of the Act). Taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses from excluded property are disregarded in determining the insurer's income.

"mark-to-market property" has the meaning assigned by subsection 142.2(1) of the Act.

Technical Notes: "Mark-to-market property" of a taxpayer has the meaning given by subsection 142.2(1) of the Act. In general terms, it comprises most shares held by the taxpayer and debt obligations that are marked to market for financial statement purposes.

(2) For the purpose of subsection 142.5(6) of the Act, the prescribed amount for a taxpayer's taxation year that includes October 31, 1994 is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is the taxable capital gain of the taxpayer for the year from the disposition, because of subsection 142.5(2) of the Act, of a property other than an excluded property

exceeds the total of

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is the allowable capital loss of the taxpayer for the year from the disposition, because of subsection 142.5(2) of the Act, of a property other than an excluded property, and

(c) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is the allowable capital loss of the taxpayer for the year from the disposition of a mark-to-market property (other than an excluded property or a property disposed of because of subsection 142.5(2) of the Act)

exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is the taxable capital gain of the taxpayer for the year from the disposition of a mark-to-market property (other than an excluded property or a property disposed of because of subsection 142.5(2) of the Act).

Technical Notes: Subsection 142.5(6) of the Act contains a transition rule in respect of the introduction of the requirement that certain property be marked to market for tax purposes. It permits a taxpayer to claim, for its taxation year that includes October 31, 1994, an allowable capital loss not exceeding a prescribed amount. Subsection 8104(2) prescribes the following maximum amount for this purpose:

- the taxpayer's total taxable capital gains from the disposition of mark-to-market properties (other than excluded properties, as defined in subsection 8101(1)) that the mark-to-market rules deem the taxpayer to have disposed of in the year

- the taxpayer's total allowable capital losses from the disposition of mark-to-market properties (other than excluded properties) that the mark-to-market rules deem the taxpayer to have disposed of in the year, and
- the taxpayer's net allowable capital losses (i.e., allowable capital losses minus taxable capital gains) from actual dispositions in the year of mark-to-market properties (other than excluded properties) and from deemed dispositions of such properties otherwise than because of the mark-to-market rules.

8105. Mark-to-market — transition capital gains — (1) In this section, "transition loss" of a taxpayer means the amount elected by the taxpayer under subsection 142.5(6) of the Act to be an allowable capital loss of the taxpayer for its taxation year that includes October 31, 1994.

Technical Notes: Section 8105 applies where a taxpayer has elected to claim an allowable capital loss under subsection 142.5(6) of the Act in respect of the introduction of the mark-to-market requirement. It prescribes the amount that is deemed by subsection 142.5(7) of the Act to be a taxable capital gain for each year. Generally, the prescribed amount for a year is a proportionate amount of the allowable capital loss that was claimed, based on a 5-year transition period.

Subsection 8105(1) defines the "transition loss" of a taxpayer to be the amount claimed by the taxpayer under subsection 142.5(6) of the Act as an allowable capital loss for the taxation year that includes October 31, 1994. The commentary on subsection 8103(1) regarding the effect of various restructurings on the "transition deduction" also applies to the transition loss.

(2) There is prescribed for the purpose of subsection 142.5(7) of the Act in respect of a taxpayer for a taxation year that ends after October 30, 1994 the amounts that would be prescribed in respect of the taxpayer for the year by section 8103 if the references in subsections 8103(2) to (7) to

(a) "subsection 142.5(5)" were read as "subsection 142.5(7)", and

(b) "transition deduction" were read as "transition loss (as defined in subsection 8105(1))".

Technical Notes: Subsection 8105(2) provides that prescribed amounts are determined using the rules in section 8103. For this purpose, the references in that section to "transition deduction" are replaced by "transition loss" and to "142.5(5)" are replaced by "142.5(7)". For information on section 8103, see the commentary on that provision.

Application: The June 1, 1995 draft regulations (securities held by financial institutions), s. 8, will add ss. 8102 to 8105, applicable to taxation years that end after October 30, 1994.

Part LXXXII — Prescribed Properties and Permanent Establishments

History: The heading of Part LXXXII amended by P.C. 1994-139, s. 14, January 27, 1994, Canada Gazette, Part II, February 9, 1994, applicable after 10:00 p.m. EDST, April 26, 1989.

8200. Prescribed properties — For the purposes of subsection 16.1(1) of the Act, "prescribed property" means

(a) exempt property, within the meaning assigned by paragraph 1100(1.13)(a), other than property leased on or before February 2, 1990 that is

(i) a truck or tractor that is designed for use on highways and has a "gross vehicle weight rating" (within the meaning assigned that expression by the Motor Vehicle Safety Regulations) of 11,778 kilograms or more,

Part LXXXIII — Pension Adjustments, Past Service Pension Adjustments and Prescribed Amounts

Proposed Amendment — Part LXXXIII Heading

Pension Adjustments, Past Service Pension Adjustments, Pension Adjustment Reversals and Prescribed Amounts

Application: The June 26, 1998 draft regulations (retirement savings), s. 3, will amend the heading of Part LXXXIII to read as above, applicable after 1996.

Technical Notes: Part LXXXIII provides rules for calculating PAs, past service pension adjustments (PSPAs) and other prescribed amounts. These amounts reduce an individual's RRSP deduction room.

Part LXXXIII is amended to:

- introduce rules for calculating pension adjustment reversals (PARs) for individuals who terminate from DPSPs and from benefit provisions of RPPs;
- modify the rules for calculating PSPAs to reflect the introduction of PAR;
- reduce to $600 the $1,000 offset that is used in calculating pension credits and other prescribed amounts for individuals who accrue benefits under defined benefit RPPs and certain unregistered pension plans;
- restrict the portion of a transfer that may be counted as a qualifying transfer for PSPA purposes to the portion of the transfer made to fund post-1989 past service benefits; and
- implement measures relating to retirement savings announced in the 1995 and 1996 federal budgets.

Overview of PAR

PAR is a measure of the extent to which an individual's RRSP deduction room has been reduced on account of RPP or DPSP benefits that will not be paid to the individual.

When an individual participates in an RPP or DPSP, the individual's employer is required to report a PA each year to Revenue Canada. The PA is the total of the individual's pension credits for the year under any DPSP or benefit provision of an RPP of which the individual is a member. Under a DPSP, the pension credit is the total of all contributions and forfeited amounts allocated to the individual in the year. Under a money purchase provision of an RPP, the pension credit is the total of all contributions, forfeited amounts and surplus allocated to the individual in the year. Under a defined benefit provision of an RPP, the pension credit is a standardized measure of the value of benefits that accrued to the individual under the provision in the year (determined in accordance with prescribed rules). An individual's PA for a year reduces the individual's RRSP deduction room for the following year. Similarly, when benefits are provided to an individual under a defined benefit provision of an RPP on a past service basis, the individual's RRSP deduction room is reduced by the PSPA associated with those benefits.

If an individual terminates from a DPSP or from a money purchase provision of an RPP before becoming vested, the individual's entitlement to amounts allocated under the plan or provision (other than the individual's contributions plus earnings) is forfeited. The individual's PAR will restore the RRSP deduction room previously given up on account of the allocation of the amounts that are now being forfeited. If an individual terminates from a defined benefit provision of an RPP, the termination benefit paid from the plan could be less than the total pension credits and PSPAs reported while the individual was a plan member. Generally, PAR will increase the individual's RRSP deduction room by the amount of the shortfall, thereby restoring RRSP deduction room that would otherwise be lost permanently.

PARs will be determined for individuals who terminate membership in a DPSP or under a benefit provision of an RPP after 1996 and before retirement benefits have commenced. This means, for example, that a PAR will be determined for an individual who, on conversion of an RPP from defined benefit to money purchase, ceases to have any entitlement to benefits under the defined benefit provision. However, a PAR will not be determined for an individual who, on terminating employment, elects to receive a deferred annuity under a benefit provision of an RPP since membership has not terminated.

DPSP trustees and RPP administrators will be required to calculate and report PARs to Revenue Canada. The first PAR information returns will not have to be filed before the end of 1998. Thereafter, PARs will normally be required to be reported on a quarterly basis.

PARs for terminations in 1997 will be added to an individual's RRSP deduction room for 1998. PARs for terminations in 1998 and subsequent years will be added to the individual's RRSP deduction room for the year in which the individual terminates membership. If an individual does not take advantage of the RRSP deduction room created by PAR in the year that it arises, it will be carried forward (like all other unused RRSP deduction room) for use in subsequent years.

As noted above, an individual's PAR under a defined benefit provision is generally the total of the individual's pension credits and PSPAs under the provision less any amounts paid from the provision in respect of the individual. However, some modifications will apply to the basic PAR calculation in certain situations. The following are the most notable:

- Amounts paid in respect of benefits for periods before 1990 — the first year for which PAs were determined — will not reduce PAR.
- In determining the amount of a PSPA that is to be included in PAR, certain adjustments will be made to ensure that the PA value of past service benefits is not understated. In particular, where a PSPA had been reduced by an amount transferred from an RRSP or money purchase provision of an RPP to fund past service benefits (i.e. a "qualifying transfer"), that reduction will be disregarded. If, by virtue of the modified PSPA rules in subsection 8304(5), a PSPA had been reduced by the PA value of defined benefits previously provided to the individual, that reduction will also be disregarded.
- An amount transferred between defined benefit provisions under a portability or reciprocal arrangement will not reduce the PAR determined for the individual under the exporting plan. However, there will be a reduction in the individual's PAR to reflect the extent to which the PA value of benefits provided to the individual under the exporting plan reduces the individual's PSPA under the importing plan.
- If an individual ceased in 1997 to be entitled to benefits under a defined benefit provision of an RPP and, by virtue of the modified PSPA rules, the PA value of those benefits reduced a PSPA determined in connection with a past service event occurring later that year, there will be a corresponding reduction in the individual's PAR for 1997.

Effect of PARs on PSPAs

PSPAs arise when benefits are provided to an individual under a defined benefit provision of an RPP on a past service basis. Past service benefits are usually provided by upgrading benefits for prior years of pensionable service or by crediting additional periods of pensionable service. As noted earlier, PSPAs reduce an individual's RRSP deduction room. In many instances, past service benefits cannot be provided unless Revenue Canada has certified that the individual has enough RRSP deduction room to support the associated PSPA.

Presently, there are special rules (the "modified PSPA rules") for calculating PSPAs when:

- an individual transfers from one defined benefit provision of an RPP to another defined benefit provision of an RPP — as would be the case when an individual changes jobs and transfers past service benefits under a reciprocal or portability arrangement, or when an individual's benefits under a defined benefit provision of an RPP are replaced with benefits under another defined benefit provision of an RPP of the same employer;
- benefits previously forfeited or cashed-out by an individual under a defined benefit provision of an RPP are reinstated under the provision; or
- benefits are provided to an individual under a defined benefit provision of an RPP in respect of a period that had previously been pensionable service of the individual under another defined benefit provision of an RPP.

The modified PSPA rules allow the individual's PSPA to be offset by the PA value of benefits previously provided to the individual in respect of the past service period. This is because those benefits have previously been reflected in pension credits or PSPAs and, thus, have already reduced the individual's RRSP deduction room. This reduction in the PSPA calculation ensures that there is no further reduction in the individual's RRSP deduction room. It also ensures that the individual is not prevented from acquiring the past service benefits due to a lack of RRSP deduction room to support the PSPA. To ensure that there is no doubling-up on tax assistance, amounts transferred to an RRSP or other money purchase type of registered plan in satisfaction of the benefits previously provided to the individual are included in the individual's PSPA.

With the introduction of PAR, an individual who ceases to be entitled to benefits under a defined benefit provision should normally have sufficient RRSP deduction room (including additional room created by PAR) and RRSP funds (including amounts transferred in satisfaction of those benefits) to support any PSPA associated with a subsequent reinstatement or replacement of the benefits. Under these circumstances, the rationale for the offset provided for under the modified PSPA rules no longer applies. Accordingly, the modified PSPA rules are being modified so that they no longer apply under these circumstances.

The modified PSPA rules will, however, continue to apply in the following two situations. First, for administrative reasons, they will apply when an individual transfers from one defined benefit provision of an RPP to another defined benefit provision of an RPP. To ensure that there is no doubling-up on tax assistance, the PAR determined under the exporting provision will be reduced to reflect the fact that the PSPA determined under the importing provision is offset by the PA value of the benefits provided to the individual under the exporting provision. In this situation, PAR and PSPA will often be nil. However, if there is a difference in the level of benefits provided under the two defined benefit provisions, a residual PAR or PSPA may have to be reported.

The modified PSPA rules will also continue to apply where an individual had terminated from a defined benefit provision before 1997 (i.e., before the introduction of PAR) and then re-establishes the past service benefits under the provision or under another defined benefit provision of an RPP. The continued application of the modified PSPA rules in this situation ensures that the individual's former benefits can be reinstated or replaced, and that this can be done with no further reduction in the individual's RRSP deduction room.

The changes to the PSPA rules will apply only with respect to past service events occurring after 1997. This means that individuals who terminated from a defined benefit provision of an RPP in 1997 and who, later that year, had their benefits reinstated or replaced will have had their PSPAs determined under the modified PSPA rules. Accordingly, as is the case when an individual transfers from one defined benefit provision to another, the PAR determined in connection with the individual's termination in 1997 will be reduced to reflect the fact that the PA value of benefits previously provided to the individual has reduced the PSPA determined in connection with the reinstatement or replacement of benefits.

The heading to Part LXXXIII is amended, effective after 1996, as a consequence of the amendments to that Part to provide for the determination of PARs.

Proposed Addition — Pension Adjustment Reversal (PAR)

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, February 18, 1997: Pension adjustment reversal

(17) That, for individuals terminating participation under a deferred profit sharing plan or a provision of a registered pension plan after 1996, measures relating to pension adjustment reversals be introduced for the 1998 and subsequent taxation years in accordance with the proposals described in the Budget Papers tabled by the Minister of Finance in the House of Commons on February 18, 1997.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, February 18, 1997: Improving the Retirement Income System

Pension adjustment reversal (PAR)

For individuals who leave registered pension plans (RPPs) or deferred profit sharing plans (DPSPs) before retirement, the budget proposes to introduce a pension adjustment reversal (PAR) which will restore lost RRSP contribution room. The government announced its intention to examine this issue in the 1995 budget.

PAR will improve the fairness of the system of tax assistance for retirement saving by ensuring that individuals who receive low termination benefits from such plans — because of job changes early in their career, for example — have the opportunity to make up for this shortfall through additional RRSP contributions.

Lost RRSP room

When an individual is a member of an employer-sponsored RPP or DPSP, the employer is required to report a pension adjustment (PA) amount that reflects the individual's participation in the plan. The PA amount reduces the individual's RRSP deduction room dollar for dollar. If the individual leaves the plan before retirement, the termination benefit paid by the plan could be less than the total PAs reported while the individual was a plan member - i.e. less than the RRSP deduction room given up during the years of plan membership. Generally, PAR will increase the individual's RRSP deduction limit by the amount by which the PAs exceed the termination benefit - thereby restoring the RRSP room that would otherwise be lost permanently.

PAR reporting requirements

PARs will have to be calculated whenever an individual ceases, after 1996 and before retirement (i.e. before receiving periodic payments), to have any entitlement to benefits under a DPSP or under a benefit provision of an RPP (other than a specified multi-employer plan). When PAR is greater than zero, the RPP administrator or the DPSP trustees will have to report it to Revenue Canada within a specified period of time. In order to give administrators and trustees time to adjust to the new reporting requirements, PARs for terminations in 1997 and 1998 will not have to be reported before the end of 1998. PARs for terminations after 1997 will be added to an individual's RRSP deduction room for the year of termination. PARs for terminations in 1997 will be added to RRSP deduction room for 1998.

Calculating PARs

An individual's PAR under a money purchase provision of an RPP will generally be equal to the total of all amounts included in the individual's pension credits under the provision since 1990 but not vested in the individual. PAR under a DPSP will be determined in the same manner.

An individual's PAR under a defined benefit RPP provision will generally be equal to the individual's total pension credits plus past service pension adjustments (PSPAs) under the provision since 1990, minus any lump sum payments made to the individual, or transferred to an RRSP or other money purchase-type registered plan, in respect of the individual's post-1989 benefits under the provision. Modifications to this basic rule are discussed in the section entitled "PARs and past service events".

Defined benefit pension credit offset and other changes

The 1995 budget indicated that any measure to restore lost RRSP deduction room would be revenue neutral. To accomplish this, the budget proposes to modify the way in which pension credits are calculated for individuals who accrue benefits under a defined benefit provision of an RPP. Currently, the calculation contains a $1,000 offset which reduces an RPP member's PA and increases the RRSP deduction room available to the member. For pension credits calculated for 1997 and future years, the $1,000 offset will be reduced to $600.

Similarly, the $1,000 offset that applies to the determination of amounts that reduce RRSP deduction room for individuals participating in certain unregistered pension arrangements (e.g., federal judges and Canadians who are members of foreign pension plans) will be reduced to $600 for 1998 and future RRSP years. (It should be noted that, as set out in the 1996 budget, the RRSP deduction room for high-income earners in such arrangements will continue to be nil during those years in which the RRSP limit is less than $15,500.)

Currently, there are special rules for determining an individual's pension credit under a DPSP or benefit provision of an RPP, if the individual terminates from the plan before becoming vested. These rules ensure that the individual's pension credit for the year of termination does not exceed the individual's contributions in that year. In effect, this precludes any loss in RRSP deduction room for the year of termination. With the introduction of PAR, these rules will become redundant and will be eliminated in determining pension credits for 1997 and future years.

PARs and past service events

This section describes the framework for proposed changes to the Income Tax Regulations dealing with the impact of PARs on the determination of PSPAs and vice versa. This information is for administrators of RPPs with defined benefit provisions, and is intended to assist them in making preparations for the introduction of PAR.

The information in this section relates primarily to past service events as a result of which an individual's benefits under a defined benefit provision are reinstated or are replaced with benefits under another defined benefit provision. There are special rules in subsection 8304(5) of the regulations for calculating PSPAs for such past service events. These rules (the "modified PSPA rules") provide an offset in the PSPA calculation for pension credits and PSPAs associated with the benefits being reinstated or replaced.

Generally speaking, with the introduction of PAR, an individual's PSPA will be determined without any offset for prior pension credits and PSPAs if the individual ceased to be entitled to the prior benefits before the past service event. However, the offset will continue to apply if the individual ceased to be entitled to the prior benefits before 1997, reflecting the fact that there is no PAR to support the additional amount of PSPA that would be determined without the offset. The offset will also continue to apply if the past service event occurred before the individual ceased to be entitled to the prior benefits, and any PAR subsequently determined in connection with the prior benefits will be modified to take this into account. These changes are discussed in more detail below.

Effect of PAR on PSPAs

For past service events that occur before 1998, there will be no changes to the PSPA rules. This will ensure that the introduction of PAR will not disrupt the processing of past service events in 1997.

(However, as noted below, such a past service event may affect the calculation of a PAR.)

For past service events that occur after 1997, the regular PSPA rules in subsection 8303(3) of the regulations will replace the modified PSPA rules where:

- the individual had previously been entitled to benefits (the "prior benefits"), either under the current provision or under another defined benefit RPP provision, in respect of the past service period; and
- the individual had ceased to have any entitlement to the prior benefits after 1996 and before the past service event.

The fact that the regular PSPA rules apply means that there is no offset in the PSPA calculation for pension credits and PSPAs associated with the prior benefits, reflecting the fact that credit has already been given for those pension credits and PSPAs in determining the individual's PAR in connection with the prior benefits.

Furthermore, the regular PSPA rules will be amended to include in the PSPA calculation an additional amount where the termination benefit paid in connection with the prior benefits was greater than the total pension credits and PSPAs associated with the benefits — that is, where PAR was zero — and all or part of the termination benefit was transferred to an RRSP or other money purchase-type registered plan. In general terms, the amount that will be added to the PSPA is the amount by which the transfer exceeds the total prior pension credits and PSPAs. This may result in the excess having to be withdrawn, or transferred to the defined benefit provision to fund the new benefits, in order for those benefits to be provided, thus ensuring that there is no doubling up of tax assistance.

Effect of past service events on PAR

As noted above, when the modified PSPA rules apply, the PSPA is offset by the amount of any pension credits and PSPAs associated with benefits previously provided to the individual for the period of past service. Thus, in determining PARs, it is appropriate to take into account the extent to which such offsets have reduced PSPAs.

Accordingly, the rules for determining PAR will require that the PAR that would otherwise be determined in such circumstances be reduced by the amount that would have been the PSPA for the new benefits if the PSPA had been determined using the regular PSPA rules — that is, ignoring any prior pension credits and PSPAs — and there had been no qualifying transfers from a money purchase-type registered plan to fund the new benefits. (A PSPA determined in this manner is referred to in the remainder of these notes as a "grossed-up PSPA".) This recognizes that the prior benefits have not been lost, they have been replaced. Usually in this situation, PARs will be nil.

Where, in this situation, PSPA is being determined under one particular RPP and PAR is being determined under another, the administrator of the particular RPP will be required, within 60 days of the past service event, to advise the other RPP administrator of the existence of the event and, where the associated PSPA is exempt from certification (for example, where the PSPA is nil), of the amount of the grossed-up PSPA. Where the PSPA is not exempt from certification, the particular RPP administrator will be required to advise the other administrator of the amount of the grossed-up PSPA within 60 days of certification. However, no notification in respect of past service events occurring in 1997 will be required before the end of 1997. These notification requirements will ensure that the other RPP administrator is aware that PAR must be reduced, and that he or she is able to determine the reduced PAR amount.

To summarize, these special PAR rules will apply in the following circumstances:

- whenever an individual's benefits under a defined benefit provision are replaced with benefits under another defined benefit provision and the past service event occurs before or at the time the individual ceases to be entitled to the prior benefits; and
- when an individual's benefits under a defined benefit provision are reinstated, or are replaced with benefits under another defined benefit provision, and the past service event occurs after the individual ceases to be entitled to the prior benefits but before the end of 1997.

Reflection of past service benefits in PAR

As noted above, the basic PAR calculation under a defined benefit provision is, in general terms, the amount by which the individual's pension credits and PSPAs under the provision exceed the individual's termination benefit. Where benefits have been provided on a past service basis, the associated PSPA may not fully reflect the "PA value" of the past service benefits. This would be the case when the modified PSPA rules had applied or the individual had made qualifying transfers from a money purchase type registered plan to fund the benefits (which reduce PSPA under both the modified and the regular PSPA rules). To ensure that PAR does not underestimate the loss of benefits on termination in this situation, the PAR calculation will take into account the grossed-up PSPA amount (rather than the actual PSPA amount) associated with any past service benefits provided under the plan.

"flat benefit provision" of a pension plan means a defined benefit provision of the plan under which the amount of lifetime retirement benefits provided to each member is based on the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the product of a fixed rate and either the duration of service of the member or the number of units of output of the member, and, for the purposes of this definition, where

> (a) the amount of lifetime retirement benefits provided under a defined benefit provision to each member is subject to a limit based on the remuneration received by the member, and
> (b) the limit may reasonably be considered to be included to ensure that the amount of lifetime retirement benefits provided to each member does not exceed the maximum amount of such benefits that may be provided by a registered pension plan, the limit shall be disregarded for the purpose of determining whether the provision is a flat benefit provision;

Proposed Addition — Reg. 8300(1)"member"

"member", in relation to a deferred profit sharing plan or a benefit provision of a registered pension plan, means an individual who has a right (either immediate or in the future and either absolute or contingent) to receive benefits under the plan or the provision, as the case may be, other than an individual who has such a right only because of the participation of another individual in the plan or under the provision, as the case may be;

Application: The June 26, 1998 draft regulations (retirement savings), subsec. 4(1), will add the definition "member" to subsec. 8300(1), applicable after 1989.

Technical Notes: Section 8300 contains several interpretative provisions that apply for the purposes of determining amounts under Part LXXXIII.

Subsection 8300(1) is amended to add definitions for "member" in relation to a DPSP or benefit provision of an RPP, "PA offset" and an individual's "resident compensation" from an employer for a year. These definitions apply after 1989, which is when Part LXXXIII came into force.

Subsection 8300(1) defines "member" in relation to a DPSP or benefit provision of an RPP as an individual who has a right to receive benefits under the plan or provision. This right may be to an immediate benefit, such as a pension-in-pay, or to a future benefit, such as a deferred pension. The right may be contingent, as would be the case, for example, when vesting requirements have not been satisfied, or it may be absolute. However, by virtue of new subsection 8300(13), it does not include a right to benefits that are to be or may be provided to an individual as a consequence of an allocation of surplus under a defined benefit provision of an RPP until such time as the benefits are provided; nor does it include a right to benefits, such as survivor benefits, that an individual has acquired only by virtue of the participation of another individual in the plan or under the provision.

This definition of "member" is similar to the definition of "member" of a pension plan set out in subsection 147.1(1) of the Act, but differs in two significant ways. First, it applies to DPSPs as well as to RPPs. Second, in the case of RPPs, it applies on a provision-by-provision basis, rather than to the plan as a whole.

The definition of "member" is relevant to the determination of whether an individual has terminated from a DPSP or from a benefit provision of an RPP and, as such, may be eligible for a PAR. (For further details on termination, see the commentary on new subsections 8300(10) to (12).)

Proposed Addition — Reg. 8300(1)"PA offset"

"PA offset" for a calendar year means,

> (a) for years before 1997, $1,000, and
> (b) for years after 1996, $600;

Application: The June 26, 1998 draft regulations (retirement savings), subsec. 4(1), will add the definition "PA offset" to subsec. 8300(1), applicable after 1989.

Technical Notes: Subsection 8300(1) defines the term "PA offset" to be $1,000 for 1990 to 1996, and $600 for 1997 and future years. It is relevant in the calculation of pension credits for individuals who accrue benefits under a defined benefit provision of an RPP. It is also relevant in determining pension credits and prescribed amounts for individuals who participate in certain unregistered retirement arrangements, such as foreign pension plans and the pension arrangement for federal judges.

This definition is added for clarity and, except for the reduction to $600 after 1996, it does not represent a change in policy.

"past service event" means any transaction, event or circumstance that occurs after 1989 and as a consequence of which

> (a) retirement benefits become provided to an individual under a defined benefit provision of a pension plan in respect of a period before the time that the transaction, event or circumstance occurs,
> (b) there is a change to the way in which retirement benefits provided to an individual under a defined benefit provision of a pension plan in respect of a period before the time that the transaction, event or circumstance occurs are determined, including a change that is applicable only in specified circumstances, or
>
> (c) there is a change in the value of an indexing or other automatic adjustment that enters into the determination of the amount of an individual's retirement benefits under a defined benefit provision of a pension plan in respect of a period before the time that the value of the adjustment changes;

"period of reduced services" of an individual means, in connection with a defined benefit or money purchase provision of a registered pension plan, a period that consists of one or more periods each of which is

(a) an eligible period of reduced pay or temporary absence of the individual with respect to an employer who participates under the provision, or

(b) a period of disability of the individual;

"refund benefit" means

(a) with respect to an individual and a money purchase or defined benefit provision of a pension plan, a return of contributions made by the individual under the provision, and

(b) with respect to an individual and a deferred profit sharing plan, a return of contributions made by the individual to the plan, and includes any interest (computed at a rate not exceeding a reasonable rate) payable in respect of those contributions.

Proposed Addition — Reg. 8300(1)"resident compensation"

"resident compensation" of an individual from an employer for a calendar year means the amount that would be the individual's compensation from the employer for the year if the definition "compensation" in subsection 147.1(1) of the Act were read without reference to paragraphs (b) and (c) of that definition;

Application: The June 26, 1998 draft regulations (retirement savings), subsec. 4(1), will add the definition "resident compensation" to subsec. 8300(1), applicable after 1989.

Technical Notes: Subsection 8300(1) defines an individual's "resident compensation" from an employer for a year to have the same meaning as the definition of "compensation" in subsection 147.1(1) of the Act, but without including amounts referred to in paragraphs (b) and (c) of that definition. Consequently, resident compensation includes only those amounts referred to in paragraph (a) of that definition. This means that resident compensation includes remuneration received for services rendered while resident in Canada. It also includes remuneration received for services rendered while not resident in Canada, if the services were performed in Canada and the remuneration is not exempt from income tax in Canada by virtue of a tax convention.

Resident compensation does not include compensation that is prescribed under section 8507 in respect of periods of leave or disability, as referred to in paragraph (b) of the definition of "compensation" in subsection 147.1(1). Nor does it include non-resident, non-taxable remuneration that is otherwise approved by Revenue Canada for inclusion under paragraph (c) of the definition of "compensation" in subsection 147.1(1).

The definition of "resident compensation" is used in sections 8308.1 to 8308.3. It is added for clarity and does not represent a change in policy.

(2) The definition "past service event" in subsection (1) is applicable for the purposes of subsection 147.1(1) of the Act.

(3) All words and expressions used in this Part that are defined in sections 147 or 147.1 of the Act or in Part LXXXV have the meanings assigned in those provisions unless a definition in this Part is applicable.

(4) For the purposes of this Part, an officer who receives remuneration for holding an office shall, for any period that the officer holds the office, be deemed to render services to, and to be in the service of, the person from whom the officer receives the remuneration.

(5) For the purposes of this Part, where an individual has received an interest in an annuity contract in full or partial satisfaction of the individual's entitlement to benefits under a defined benefit provision of a pension plan, any rights of the individual under the contract shall be deemed to be rights under the defined benefit provision.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 8300(5)

(5) For the purposes of this Part (other than the definition "member" in subsection (1)), where an individual has received an interest in an annuity contract in full or partial satisfaction of the individual's entitlement to benefits under a defined benefit provision of a pension plan, any rights of the individual under the contract are deemed to be rights under the defined benefit provision.

Application: The June 26, 1998 draft regulations (retirement savings), subsec. 4(2), will amend subsec. 8300(5) to read as above, applicable after 1989.

Technical Notes: Subsection 8300(5) provides that, where an individual acquires an interest in an annuity contract in lieu of benefits under a defined benefit provision of an RPP, the rights of the individual under the contract are considered to be rights under the defined benefit provision.

This subsection is amended to provide that it does not apply for purposes of the new definition of "member" in subsection 8300(1) of the Regulations. This amendment is consequential on the introduction of new subsections 8304.1(5) and (15), which provide for a nil PAR if an individual who ceases to be a member in relation to a defined benefit provision of an RPP has acquired an interest in an annuity contract in full or partial satisfaction of benefits otherwise provided under the provision.

(6) For the purposes of this Part and subsection 147.1(10) of the Act, and subject to subsection 8308(1), the following rules apply in respect of the determination of the benefits that are provided to an individual under a defined benefit provision of a pension plan at a particular time:

(a) where a term of the defined benefit provision, or an amendment to a term of the provision, is not applicable with respect to the individual before a specified date, the term shall be considered to have been added to the provision, or the amendment shall be considered to have been made to the term, on the specified date;

(b) where an alteration to the benefits provided to the individual is conditional on the requirements of subsection 147.1(10) of the Act being met,

those requirements shall be assumed to have been met;

(c) benefits that will be reinstated if the individual returns to employment with an employer who participates in the plan shall be considered not to be provided until the individual returns to employment; and

(d) where benefits under the provision depend on the individual's job category or other circumstances, the only benefits provided to the individual are the benefits that are relevant to the individual's circumstances at the particular time.

(7) For the purposes of subsections 8301(3) and (8), paragraph 8302(3)(c) and subsections 8302(5) and 8304(5), the benefits to which an individual is entitled at any time under a deferred profit sharing plan or pension plan include benefits to which the individual has only a contingent right because the conditions for the vesting of the benefits have not yet been satisfied.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 8300(7)

(7) For the purposes of subsections 8301(3) and (8), paragraph 8302(3)(c), subsections 8302(5) and 8304(5) and (5.1), paragraphs 8304.1(10)(c) and (11)(c), subparagraph 8306(4)(a)(ii) and subsection 8308(3), the benefits to which an individual is entitled at any time under a deferred profit sharing plan or pension plan include benefits to which the individual has only a contingent right because a condition for the vesting of the benefits has not been satisfied.

Application: The June 26, 1998 draft regulations (retirement savings), subsec. 4(3), will amend subsec. 8300(7) to read as above, applicable after 1989.

Technical Notes: Several provisions in Part LXXXIII refer to the benefits to which an individual is entitled under a pension plan or DPSP. Subsection 8300(7) clarifies that an individual is considered to be entitled to benefits even though the individual's right to the benefits is contingent on satisfying the plan's vesting requirements.

Subsection 8300(7) is amended to add references to new subsection 8304(5.1) (modified PSPA rules for past service events occurring after 1997) and new paragraphs 8304.1(10)(c) and (11)(c) (special PAR rules for transfers). Subsection 8300(7) is also amended to clarify its application to existing subparagraph 8306(4)(a)(ii) ("active member" definition for exemption from PSPA certification) and to existing subsection 8308(3) (special PA/PSPA rules regarding remuneration for prior years).

The amendments to subsection 8300(7) apply from the day on which the subsection came into force.

Selected Cases [subsec. 8300(7)]: Osborn v. Canada, [1995] 2 C.T.C. 2215 (TCC) (Non-vested pension amounts treated as if vested for purposes of RRSP contribution limit).

(8) For the purposes of this Part, such portion of an amount allocated to an individual at any time under a money purchase provision of a registered pension plan as

(a) is attributable to

(i) forfeited amounts under the provision or earnings of the plan that are reasonably attributable to those amounts,

(ii) a surplus under the provision, or

(iii) property transferred to the provision in respect of the actuarial surplus under a defined benefit provision of the plan or another registered pension plan, and

(b) can reasonably be considered to be allocated in lieu of a contribution that would otherwise have been made under the provision by an employer in respect of the individual shall be deemed to be a contribution made under the provision by the employer with respect to the individual at that time and not to be an amount attributable to anything referred to in paragraph (a).

History: Subsec. 8300(8) added by P.C. 1995-17, subsec. 1(2), January 11, 1995, Canada Gazette, Part II, January 25, 1995, applicable with respect to amounts allocated after April 5, 1994.

Proposed Addition — Reg. 8300(9)–(13)

(9) For the purposes of this Part and Part LXXXV, where property held in connection with a particular benefit provision of a pension plan is made available at any time to pay benefits under another benefit provision of the plan, the property is deemed to be transferred at that time from the particular benefit provision to the other benefit provision.

Technical Notes: Subclause 4(4) adds a number of new subsections to section 8300. These subsections apply after 1989, which is when Part LXXXIII came into force.

Several provisions in Parts LXXXIII and LXXXV refer to property being transferred from one benefit provision of an RPP to another benefit provision of the same plan. New subsection 8300(9) clarifies that, where property held under one benefit provision of an RPP is made available to pay benefits under another benefit provision of the same plan, the property is considered to have been transferred from the first benefit provision to the second benefit provision.

(10) For the purposes of this Part and Parts LXXXIV and LXXXV, and subject to subsections (11) and (12), an individual is considered to have terminated from a deferred profit sharing plan or a benefit provision of a registered pension plan when the individual has ceased to be a member in relation to the plan or the provision, as the case may be.

Technical Notes: New subsection 8300(10) provides that an individual is considered to have terminated from a DPSP, or from a benefit provision of an RPP, when the individual ceases to be a member in relation to the plan or the provision. If an individual terminates after 1996 from a DPSP or from a benefit provision of an RPP and certain other conditions are satisfied, a PAR is determined for the individual.

By virtue of the definition of "member" in subsection 8300(1), an individual will be considered to have terminated from a DPSP, or from a benefit provision of an RPP, only when the individual has completely ceased to have any rights to benefits under the plan or provision. Normally, this would be when the final payment in respect of the individual is made from the plan or provision or, if no such payments are to be made, when the individual terminates employment. In the case of a conversion of an RPP from defined benefit to money purchase (or vice versa), it would be at the point in time when the individual ceases to have any entitlement to benefits under the original benefit provision — which means that an individual who retains an entitlement to benefits under the original provision after conversion will not qualify for a PAR calculation. (The requirement to calculate PAR on conversion of an RPP from defined benefit to money purchase is illustrated in example 1 following the commentary on subsection 8304.1(16).)

Subsection 8300(10) is subject to new subsections 8300(11) and (12). Those subsections provide special rules for determining if, and when, an individual who ceases to be a member in relation to a particular defined benefit provision may be considered to have terminated from the provision. Subsection 8300(11) deals, in particular, with defined benefit provisions under which benefits are offset by benefits provided under a DPSP or money purchase provision of an RPP. Subsection 8300(12) deals with defined benefit provisions that are inter-dependent.

(11) Where

(a) an individual ceases, at a particular time after 1996, to be a member in relation to a defined benefit provision of a registered pension plan, and

(b) a pension credit of the individual under a deferred profit sharing plan or a money purchase provision of a registered pension plan (each such plan or provision being referred to in this subsection as an "offset provision") is or has been taken into account, under paragraph 8302(2)(c), in determining a benefit accrual of the individual under the defined benefit provision in respect of the year that includes the particular time or in respect of a preceding year, for the purposes of this Part and Parts LXXXIV and LXXXV,

(c) if the individual is, at the particular time, a member in relation to an offset provision, the individual is deemed

(i) not to terminate from the defined benefit provision at the particular time, and

(ii) to terminate from the defined benefit provision at the earliest subsequent time when the individual is no longer a member in relation to any of the offset provisions (unless the individual is, at the subsequent time, a member in relation to the defined benefit provision), and

(d) if the conditions in subsection 8304.1(14) or (15) (read without reference to the words "after 1996 and"), as the case may be, are not satisfied with respect to the individual's termination from an offset provision, the conditions in subsection 8304.1(15) are deemed not to be satisfied with respect to the individual's termination from the defined benefit provision.

Technical Notes: New subsection 8300(11) applies to an individual who ceases, after 1996, to be a member in relation to a defined benefit provision of an RPP where benefits under the provision are offset by benefits payable under a DPSP or under a money purchase provision of an RPP. A DPSP or money purchase provision is considered to be an "offset provision" if, by virtue of paragraph 8302(2)(c) of the Regulations, contributions made to the plan or the provision in respect of the individual had been taken into account in determining a pension credit for the individual under the defined benefit provision. In effect, subsection 8300(11) provides that no defined benefit PAR is determined for the individual until the individual has terminated from each offset provision and then only if no benefits (other than lump sum amounts) were paid with respect to the individual under the offset provisions.

More specifically, paragraph 8300(11)(c) provides that an individual is deemed not to have terminated from a defined benefit provision until the individual has also terminated from all offset provisions. Where an individual is considered to have terminated from a defined benefit provision, paragraph 8300(11)(d) provides that the conditions in subsection 8304.1(15) — which must be satisfied in order for PAR to be determined under the provision — are deemed not to be satisfied unless the termination conditions in subsections 8304.1(14) and (15) are satisfied with respect to the individual's termination from each of the offset provisions. (For this purpose, the condition that the termination must have occurred after 1996 is disregarded.) The application of paragraph 8300(11)(d) is illustrated in the following example.

Example

An employer maintains a money purchase RPP for all employees and a supplementary defined benefit RPP for executives. Benefits under the defined benefit RPP are offset by the benefits that can be purchased at retirement from the member's account under the money purchase RPP. On retirement, Al acquires ownership of an annuity contract in full satisfaction of his entitlement to benefits under the money purchase RPP. In addition, he arranges to have the commuted value of his defined benefit pension transferred to an RRSP. By virtue of paragraphs 8300(11)(d) and 8304.1(15)(c), the defined benefit termination conditions are deemed not to be satisfied because of the acquisition of the annuity. Thus, although Al terminated from the defined benefit RPP and otherwise satisfied the defined benefit termination conditions, Al's defined benefit PAR is zero.

Subsection 8300(11), in conjunction with the rules in new subsection 8304.1(5) for determining defined benefit PARs and the description of "excess money purchase offset" in new subsection 8304.1(12), is intended to ensure that an individual's defined benefit PAR appropriately reflects the value of benefits provided to the individual under an offset provision.

(12) Where benefits provided with respect to an individual under a particular defined benefit provision of a registered pension plan are supplemental to, or otherwise dependent on, benefits provided with respect to the individual under one or more other defined benefit provisions of registered pension plans (each of the particular provision and the other provisions being referred to in this subsection as a "related provision"), for the purposes of this Part and Parts LXXXIV and LXXXV,

(a) if the individual ceases, at any particular time after 1996, to be a member in relation to a specific related provision and is, at the particular time, a member in relation to another related provision, the individual is deemed

(i) not to terminate from the specific provision at the particular time, and

(ii) to terminate from the specific provision at the earliest subsequent time when the individual is no longer a member in relation to any of the related provisions;

(b) if the conditions in subsection 8304.1(15) (read without reference to the words "after 1996 and") are not satisfied with respect to the individual's termination from a related provision, the conditions in that subsection are deemed not to be satisfied with respect to the individual's termination from each of the other related provisions; and

(c) a specified distribution (as defined in subsection 8304.1(8)) made at any particular time in respect of the individual and a related provision is deemed, for the purpose of subsection 8304.1(5), also to be a specified distribution made at the particular time in respect of the individual and each of the other related provisions, except to the extent that the Minister has waived the application of this paragraph with respect to the distribution.

Technical Notes: New subsection 8300(12) applies to an individual who participates in more than one defined benefit provision of an RPP, where benefits provided to the individual under one of the provisions are supplemental to, or otherwise dependent on, benefits provided to the individual under the other provisions. (These provisions — including the dependent provision — are referred to in subsection 8300(12) as "related provisions".)

In effect, subsection 8300(12) provides that no defined benefit PAR is determined for the individual under any of the related provisions until the individual ceases to be a member in relation to all of the related provisions and then only if no benefits (other than lump sum amounts) were paid with respect to the individual under the related provisions. Subsection 8300(12) also contains a rule dealing with lump sum amounts paid under related provisions, the effect of which is to ensure that the sum of the individual's PARs under all related provisions is not more than the PAR that would be determined if the provisions were a single provision.

More specifically, paragraph 8300(12)(a) provides that, where the individual ceases after 1996 to be a member in relation to one of the related provisions and is still a member in relation to one or more other related provisions, the individual is deemed not to have terminated from any of those provisions until the individual has ceased to be a member in relation to all of those provisions. (The deferred termination date provided for under this paragraph does not apply to any related provisions in relation to which the individual had ceased to be a member before 1997.)

Where the individual is considered to have terminated from each of the related provisions, paragraph 8300(12)(b) provides that the conditions in new subsection 8304.1(15) — which must be satisfied in order for a defined benefit PAR to be determined — are deemed not to be satisfied with respect to any of the related provisions unless they are satisfied with respect to all of the related provisions. (For this purpose, the condition that the termination must have occurred after 1996 is disregarded.)

Paragraph 8300(12)(c) provides that a specified distribution made in respect of the individual from one of the related provisions is deemed also to have been made in respect of the individual from each of the other related provisions. "Specified distribution" is defined in new subsection 8304.1(8). In general terms, it is a lump sum amount paid in respect of an individual under a defined benefit provision that may reasonably be considered to relate to benefits provided under the provision in respect of post-1989 pensionable service, and it reduces the individual's PAR under the provision. Thus, the effect of paragraph (c) is that a lump sum payment made under one of the related provisions will reduce the individual's PAR under all of the related provisions.

Revenue Canada is permitted to waive, in whole or in part, the application of the deeming provision in paragraph 8300(12)(c) to a specified distribution made under a defined benefit provision. It is expected that Revenue Canada would exercise this discretion when an individual's total PARs under all related provisions (determined without any waiver under paragraph 8300(12)(c)) is less than the PAR that would have been determined if the related provisions had been a single defined benefit provision. The application of the waiver provided for in paragraph 8300(12)(c) is illustrated in the following example.

Example

An employer participates in a multi-employer pension plan (the "basic plan") that covers all employees. The employer also maintains a supplemental plan for professional staff. The basic plan provides a 1.3% benefit on earnings up to the Year's Maximum Pensionable Earnings, and a 2% benefit on earnings above, with no ancillary benefits. The supplemental plan provides a 2% benefit on all earnings, with some ancillary benefits. Benefits under the supplemental plan are offset by benefits under the basic plan.

After two years, the company's accountant, George, terminates employment. He had been a member of both plans. His total pension credits were $12,140 under the basic plan and $4,660 under the supplemental plan. He receives a lump sum payment of $8,890 from the basic plan and $7,110 from the supplemental plan. Had the two plans been a single plan (and a single provision), George's PAR would have been $800 (= ($12,140 + $4,660) - ($8,890 + $7,110)). However, as separate related plans which are subject to paragraph 8300(12)(c), George's PAR under the basic plan is nil (= $12,140 - $8,890 - $7,110) and, under the supplemental plan, it is also nil (= $4,660 - $7,110 - $8,890).

It is expected that, in this situation, Revenue Canada would exempt from the deeming rule in paragraph 8300(12)(c) the full $8,890 paid from the basic plan and all but $2,450 of the $7,110 paid from the supplemental plan. As a result, George's PAR under the basic plan would be $800 (= $12,140 - $8,890 - $2,450) and, under the supplemental plan, it would be nil (= $4,660 - $7,110), for a total PAR of $800.

(13) For the purposes of this Part and Part LXXXV, where a benefit is to be provided, or may be provided, to an individual under a defined benefit provision of a registered pension plan as a consequence of an allocation that is to be made, or may be made, to the individual of all or part of an actuarial surplus under the provision, the individual is considered not to have any right to receive the benefit under the provision until the time at which the benefit becomes provided under the provision.

Technical Notes: New subsection 8300(13) provides that an individual's right to surplus under a defined benefit provision of an RPP is not considered to be a right to benefits until such time as the surplus is used to provide benefits to the individual.

This rule is relevant in determining whether an individual has terminated from a defined benefit provision for the purpose of determining PAR. If a defined benefit plan is being wound-up, for example, a member might elect to fully commute existing benefits before a final determination is made on the ownership of the plan's surplus. In this case, the individual would be considered to have terminated from the defined benefit provision at the time of commutation of the benefits promised under the terms of the plan. Consequently, a PAR would be determined at that time, even though there is a possibility that surplus will be used in the future to provide additional benefits to the individual.

If surplus is subsequently used to provide additional benefits, the individual would be considered to have again become a member in relation to the provision at the time the benefits are provided. Any subsequent commutation of these additional benefits would constitute another termination from the provision and give rise to another determination of PAR (assuming the conditions in subsection 8304.1(15) are satisfied). As discussed in the commentary on subsection 8304.1(13), this subsequent PAR would be determined without regard for anything that happened during the individual's previous period of membership.

It should be noted that new subsection 8501(7) allows surplus under a defined benefit provision of an RPP to be used on plan wind-up to provide former members with stand-alone ancillary benefits (i.e., ancillary benefits such as indexing and survivor benefits that are associated with previously commuted lifetime retirement benefits). However, if the former member terminated after 1996 and before retirement benefits commenced to be paid (i.e., under conditions which gave rise to a PAR calculation), the application of subsection 8501(7) is restricted to stand-alone ancillary benefits provided in respect of pre-1990 service. (See the commentary on subsection 8501(7) for further details.)

Application: The June 26, 1998 draft regulations (retirement savings), subsec. 4(4), will add subsecs. 8300(9) to (13), applicable after 1989.

8301. Pension adjustment — (1) Pension adjustment with respect to employer — For the purpose of subsection 248(1) of the Act, "pension adjustment" of an individual for a calendar year with respect to an employer means, subject to paragraphs 8308(4)(d) and (5)(c), the total of all amounts each of which is

(a) the individual's pension credit for the year with respect to the employer under a deferred profit sharing plan or under a benefit provision of a registered pension plan;

(b) the individual's pension credit for the year with respect to the employer under a foreign plan, determined under section 8308.1; or

(c) the individual's pension credit for the year with respect to the employer under a specified retirement arrangement, determined under section 8308.3.

Proposed Amendment — Calculating 1997 Pension Adjustments

Revenue Canada special release, December 23, 1997: Calculating 1997 Pension Adjustments

On February 18, 1997, the Minister of Finance Paul Martin tabled the federal budget in the House of Commons. The budget included proposed changes to the retirement savings system which will affect the 1997 Pension Adjustment (PA) calculations. Although these changes have not, to date, been passed into law, Revenue Canada recommends that plan sponsors and administrators calculate and report PAs for 1997 in accordance with the proposed changes. This will avoid public confusion, improve administrative efficiency and may reduce the need for subsequent adjustments for returns. The proposed changes are highlighted below.

The $1,000 offset amount that reduces the PA calculation for all defined benefit provisions of registered pension plans will be reduced to $600 for 1997 and subsequent years. [See Proposed Amendment under Reg. 8301(6) — ed.] This reduction in the $1,000 offset also applies to PA calculations for Canadian residents participating in unregistered foreign pension plans.

The special PA rules for a member of a registered pension plan or a deferred profit sharing plan who terminates employment before becoming vested will be eliminated in calculating PAs for 1997 and future years. [See Proposed Amendment before Reg. 8300 re PARs — ed.] Those rules provided for the member's PA for the year of termination to be based on the member's contributions for the year if the contributions were less than the member's PA determined in the usual way.

The Pension Adjustment Calculation Guide, Form T4084 has been revised, taking these changes into account. (2) Pension credit — deferred profit sharing plan — For the purposes of subsection (1) and Part LXXXV and subsection 147(5.1) of the Act, and subject to subsections (3) and 8304(2), an individual's pension credit for a calendar year with respect to an employer under a deferred profit sharing plan is the aggregate of all amounts each of which is

(a) a contribution made to the plan in the year by the employer with respect to the individual, or

(b) such portion of an amount allocated in the year to the individual as is attributable to forfeited amounts under the plan and earnings of the plan in respect thereof, except to the extent that such portion is

(i) included in determining the individual's pension credit for the year with respect to any other employer who participates in the plan,

(ii) paid to the individual in the year, or

(iii) where the year is 1990, attributable to amounts forfeited before 1990 or earnings of the plan in respect thereof, except that, where the year is before 1990, the individual's pension credit is nil.

History: Part LXXXIII (ss. 8300–8311) added by P.C. 1991-2540, s. 7, December 16, 1991, Canada Gazette, Part II, January 15, 1992, applicable after 1989, except that before 1991, subsec. 8301(2) shall be read without reference to the expression "and subsection 147(5.1) of the Act".

(3) Non-vested termination from DPSP — For the purposes of subsection (1) and Part LXXXV and subsection 147(5.1) of the Act, where

(a) an individual ceased in a calendar year after 1989 to be employed by an employer who participated in a deferred profit sharing plan for the benefit of the individual,

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 8301(3)(a)

(a) an individual ceased in a calendar year after 1989 and before 1997 to be employed by an employer who participated in a deferred profit sharing plan for the benefit of the individual,

Application: The June 26, 1998 draft regulations (retirement savings), subsec. 5(1), will amend para. 8301(3)(a) to read as above, applicable after 1989.

Technical Notes: Section 8301 provides rules for calculating an individual's PA and the various pension credits that are included in determining PAs.

Subsection 8301(3) provides that, where an employee who is participating in a DPSP terminates employment before becoming vested, the employee's pension credit under the plan for the year of termination is nil. Paragraph 8301(3)(a) is amended to restrict the application of subsection 8301(3) to the determination of pension credits for years before 1997. This amendment is consequential on the introduction of PAR and applies from the day on which subsection 8301(3) came into force.

(b) as a consequence of the termination of employment, the individual ceased in the year to have any rights to benefits (other than a right to a refund benefit) under the plan,

(c) the individual was not entitled to benefits under the plan at the end of the year, or was entitled only to a refund benefit, and

(d) no benefit has been paid under the plan with respect to the individual, other than a refund benefit, the individual's pension credit under the plan for the year with respect to the employer is nil.

History: Part LXXXIII (ss. 8300–8311) added by P.C. 1991-2540, s. 7, December 16, 1991, Canada Gazette, Part II, January 15, 1992, applicable after 1989, except that before 1991, subsec. 8301(3) shall be read without reference to the expression "and subsection 147(5.1) of the Act".

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-124R6: Contributions to registered retirement savings plans.

(4) Pension credit — money purchase provision — For the purposes of subsection (1) and Part LXXXV and subsection 147.1(9) of the Act, and subject to subsections (4.1) and (8) and 8304(2), an individual's pension credit for a calendar year with respect to an employer under a money purchase provision of a registered pension plan is the total of all amounts each of which is

(a) a contribution (other than an additional voluntary contribution made by the individual in 1990, an excluded contribution or a contribution described in paragraph 8308(6)(e) or (g)) made under the provision in the year by

(i) the individual, except to the extent that the contribution was not made in connection with the individual's employment with the employer and is included in determining the individual's pension credit for the year with respect to any other employer who participates in the plan, or

(ii) the employer with respect to the individual, or

(b) such portion of an amount allocated in the year to the individual as is attributable to

(i) forfeited amounts under the provision or earnings of the plan in respect thereof,

(ii) a surplus under the provision, or

(ii.1) property transferred to the provision in respect of the actuarial surplus under a defined benefit provision of the plan or another registered pension plan, except to the extent that that portion is

(iii) included in determining the individual's pension credit for the year with respect to any other employer who participates in the plan,

(iv) paid to the individual in the year, or

(v) where the year is 1990, attributable to amounts forfeited before 1990 or earnings of the plan in respect thereof, except that the individual's pension credit is nil where the year is before 1990, and, for the purposes of this subsection, the plan administrator shall determine the portion of a contribution made by an individual or an amount allocated to the individual that is to be included in determining the individual's pension credit with respect to each employer.

History: That portion of subsec. 8301(4) before subpara. (a)(i) amended and subpara. (b)(ii.1) added by P.C. 1995-17, subsecs. 2(1) and (2), January 11, 1995, Canada Gazette, Part II, January 25, 1995. That portion of subsec. 8301(4) before subpara. (a)(i) is applicable with respect to the determination of pension credits for 1990 et seq., except that for years before 1993, it shall be read without reference to subsection 8301(4.1). Subpara. 8301(4)(b)(ii.1) is applicable with respect to the determination of pension credits for 1991 et seq.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-124R6: Contributions to registered retirement savings plans.

(4.1) Money purchase pension credits based on amounts allocated — Where,

(a) under the terms of a money purchase provision of a pension plan, the method for allocating contributions is such that contributions made by an employer with respect to a particular individual may be allocated to another individual, and

(b) the Minister has, on the written application of the administrator of the plan, approved in writing a method for determining pension credits under the provision that, for each individual, takes into account amounts allocated to the individual, each pension credit under the provision is the amount determined in accordance with the method approved by the Minister.

History: Subsec. 8301(4.1) added by P.C. 1995-17, subsec. 2(3), January 11, 1995, Canada Gazette, Part II, January 25, 1995, applicable with respect to the determination of pension credits for 1993 et seq.

(5) Pension credit — defined benefit provision of a specified multi-employer plan — For the purposes of this Part and Part LXXXV and subsection 147.1(9) of the Act, an individual's pension credit for a calendar year with respect to an employer under a defined benefit provision of a registered pension plan that is, in the year, a specified multi-employer plan is the aggregate of

(a) the aggregate of all amounts each of which is a contribution (other than an excluded contribution) made under the provision by the individual

(i) in the year, in respect of

(A) the year, or

(B) a plan year ending in the year (other than in respect of such portion of a plan year as is before 1990), or

(ii) in January of the year (other than in January 1990) in respect of the immediately preceding calendar year, except to the extent that the contribution was not made in connection with the individual's employment with the employer and is included in determining the individual's pension credit for the year with respect to any other employer who participates in the plan,

(b) the aggregate of all amounts each of which is a contribution made in the year by the employer in respect of the provision, to the extent that the contribution may reasonably be considered to be determined by reference to the number of hours worked by the individual or some other measure that is specific to the individual, and

(c) the amount determined by the formula

$$\frac{A}{B} \times (C - B)$$

where

A is the amount determined under paragraph (b) for the purpose of computing the individual's pension credit,

B is the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the amount determined under paragraph (b) for the purpose of computing the pension credit of an individual for the year with respect to the employer under the provision, and

C is the aggregate of all amounts each of which is a contribution made in the year by the employer in respect of the provision, except that, where the year is before 1990, the individual's pension credit is nil.

(6) Pension credit — defined benefit provision — For the purposes of this Part and Part LXXXV and subsection 147.1(9) of the Act, and subject to subsections (7), (8) and (10) and sections 8304 and 8308, an individual's pension credit for a calendar year with respect to an employer under a defined benefit provision of a particular registered pension plan (other than a plan that is, in the year, a specified multi-employer plan) is the amount, if any, by which

(a) 9 times the individual's benefit entitlement under the provision with respect to the employer and the year

exceeds

(b) the amount, if any, by which $1,000 exceeds the aggregate of all amounts each of which is an amount deducted under this paragraph for the purpose of computing the individual's pension credit for the year

(i) with respect to the employer under any other defined benefit provision of a registered pension plan,

(ii) with respect to any other employer who at any time in the year does not deal at arm's length with the employer, under a defined benefit provision of a registered pension plan, or

(iii) with respect to any other employer under a defined benefit provision of the particular plan, except that, where the year is before 1990, the individual's pension credit is nil.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 8301(6)

(6) Pension credit — defined benefit provision — Subject to subsections (7), (8) and (10) and sections 8304 and 8308, for the purposes of this Part and Part LXXXV and subsection 147.1(9) of the Act, an individual's pension credit for a calendar year with respect to an employer under a defined benefit provision of a particular registered pension plan (other than a plan that is, in the year, a specified multi-employer plan) is

(a) if the year is after 1989, the amount determined by the formula

$$A - B$$

where

A is 9 times the individual's benefit entitlement under the provision with respect to the employer and the year, and

B is the amount, if any, by which the PA offset for the year exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is the value of B determined under this paragraph for the purpose of computing the individual's pension credit for the year

(i) with respect to the employer under any other defined benefit provision of a registered pension plan,

(ii) with respect to any other employer who at any time in the year does not deal at arm's length with the employer, under a defined benefit provision of a registered pension plan, or

(iii) with respect to any other employer under a defined benefit provision of the particular plan, and

(b) if the year is before 1990, nil.

Application: The June 26, 1998 draft regulations (retirement savings), subsec. 5(2), will amend subsec. 8301(6) to read as above, applicable after 1989.

Technical Notes: Subsection 8301(6) defines an individual's pension credit under a defined benefit provision of an RPP in respect of an employer for a year after 1989 as the amount by which

(a) 9 times the individual's benefit entitlement (determined in accordance with the rules set out in section 8302) under the provision for the year in respect of the employer

exceeds

(b) $1,000 (or a portion thereof reflecting the extent to which the $1,000 offset has already been used in determining the individual's pension credits for the year under certain other defined benefit provisions or in respect of certain other employers).

Subsection 8301(6) is amended to replace the existing narrative description of the pension credit calculation with the formula:

$$A - B$$

Variables A and B in this formula are the same as the amounts described in paragraphs (a) and (b) above, respectively. However, in the description of B, the reference to $1,000 is replaced by a reference to the "PA offset" for the year for which the pension credit is calculated. "PA offset" is defined, in subsection 8300(1), to be $1,000 for years before 1997, and $600 for 1997 and subsequent years. The effect of the reduction in the PA offset is to reduce the annual RRSP contribution room for defined benefit pension plan members by $400, starting in 1998. This is consequential on the introduction of PAR.

The amendments to subsection 8301(6) are intended to clarify the rules for calculating defined benefit pension credits and, apart from the reduction in the PA offset, do not represent a change in policy. They apply from the day on which subsection 8301(6) came into force.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, February 18, 1997: Defined benefit pension credit offset and other changes

[For the text leading up to the below, which describes the reintroduction of the Pension Adjustment Reversal (PAR), see at beginning of Part LXXXIII, before Reg. 8300 — ed.]

The 1995 budget indicated that any measure to restore lost RRSP deduction room would be revenue neutral. To accomplish this, the budget proposes to modify the way in which pension credits are calculated for individuals who accrue benefits under a defined benefit provision of an RPP. Currently, the calculation contains a $1,000 offset which reduces an RPP member's PA and increases the RRSP deduction room available to the member. For pension credits calculated for 1997 and future years, the $1,000 offset will be reduced to $600.

Similarly, the $1,000 offset that applies to the determination of amounts that reduce RRSP deduction room for individuals participating in certain unregistered pension arrangements (e.g., federal judges [Reg. 8309 — ed.] and Canadians who are members of foreign pension plans) will be reduced to $600 for 1998 and future RRSP years. (It should be noted that, as set out in the 1996 budget, the RRSP deduction room for high-income earners in such arrangements will continue to be nil during those years in which the RRSP limit is less than $15,500.)

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-124R6: Contributions to registered retirement savings plans.

(7) Pension credit — defined benefit provision of a multi-employer plan — Where a registered pension plan is a multi-employer plan (other than a specified multi-employer plan) in a calendar year, the following rules apply, except to the extent that the Minister has waived in writing their application in respect of the plan, for the purpose of determining the pension credit of an individual for the year under a defined benefit provision of the plan:

(a) where the individual is employed in the year by more than one participating employer, the pension credit of the individual for the year under the provision with respect to a particular employer shall be determined as if the individual were not employed by any other participating employer;

(b) paragraph (6)(b) shall be read as follows:

"(b) the amount determined by the formula

$$$1{,}000 \times A - B$$

where

A is

(i) where the member rendered services on a full-time basis throughout the year to the employer, 1, and

(ii) in any other case, the fraction (not greater than 1) that measures the services that, for the purpose of determining the member's lifetime retirement benefits under the provision, the member is treated as having rendered in the year to the employer, expressed as a proportion of the services that would have been rendered by the member in the year to the employer had the member rendered services to the employer on a full-time basis throughout the year, and

B is the aggregate of all amounts each of which is an amount deducted under this paragraph for the purpose of computing the individual's pension credit for the year with respect to the employer under any other defined benefit provision of the plan,";

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 8301(7)(b)

(b) the description of B in paragraph (6)(a) shall be read as:

"B is the amount determined by the formula

$$(C \times D) - E$$

where

C is the PA offset for the year,

(i) where the member rendered services on a full-time basis throughout the year to the employer, one, and

(ii) in any other case, the fraction (not greater than one) that measures the services that, for the purpose of determining the member's lifetime retirement benefits under the provision, the member is treated as having rendered in the year to the employer, expressed as a proportion of the services that would have been rendered by the member in the year to the employer if the member had rendered services to the employer on a full-time basis throughout the year, and

E is the total of all amounts each of which is the value of B determined under this paragraph for the purpose of computing the individual's pension credit for the year with respect to the employer under any other defined benefit provision of the plan, and";

Application: The June 26, 1998 draft regulations (retirement savings), subsec. 5(3), will amend para. 8301(7)(b) to read as above, applicable after 1989.

Technical Notes: Subsection 8301(7) contains special rules for calculating an individual's pension credits for a year in respect of an employer under a defined benefit provision of a multi-employer plan that is not a specified multi-employer plan. Paragraph 8301(7)(b) provides that the individual's pension credit is to be determined in accordance with subsection 8301(6), but it requires that the $1,000 offset provided by paragraph 8301(6)(b) be prorated based on services rendered by the individual to the employer in the year.

Paragraph 8301(7)(b) is amended to reflect the changes made to subsection 8301(6) to introduce a formula for determining pension credits and to reduce the $1,000 offset to $600 in determining pension credits for 1997 and subsequent years.

(c) where a period in the year is a period of reduced services of the individual, the pension credit of the individual for the year under the provision with respect to each participating employer shall be determined as the aggregate of

(i) the pension credit that would be determined if no benefits (other than benefits attributable to services rendered by the individual) had accrued to the individual in respect of periods of reduced services, and

(ii) the pension credit that would be determined if the only benefits that had accrued to the individual were benefits in respect of periods of reduced services, other than benefits attributable to services rendered by the individual during such periods; and

(d) subsection (10) shall not apply.

(8) Non-vested termination from RPP — For the purposes of this Part and Part LXXXV and subsection 147.1(9) of the Act, and subject to subsection (9), where

(a) an individual ceased in a calendar year after 1989 to be employed by an employer who participated in a registered pension plan for the benefit of the individual,

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 8301(8)(a)

(a) an individual ceased in a calendar year after 1989 and before 1997 to be employed by an employer who participated in a registered pension plan for the benefit of the individual,

Application: The June 26, 1998 draft regulations (retirement savings), subsec. 5(4), will amend para. 8301(8)(a) to read as above, applicable after 1989.

Technical Notes: Subsection 8301(8) provides that, where an employee who is participating in an RPP terminates employment before becoming vested, the employee's pension credit under a benefit provision of the plan for the year of termination does not exceed the contributions made by the individual under the provision in the year. Paragraph 8301(8)(a) is amended to restrict the application of subsection 8301(8) to the determination of pension credits for years before 1997. This amendment is consequential on the introduction of PAR and applies from the day on which subsection 8301(8) came into force.

(b) as a consequence of the termination of employment, the individual ceased in the year to have any rights to benefits (other than a right to a refund benefit) under a money purchase or defined benefit provision of the plan,

(c) the individual was not entitled to benefits under the provision at the end of the year, or was entitled only to a refund benefit, and

(d) no benefit has been paid under the provision with respect to the individual, other than a refund benefit, the individual's pension credit under the provision for the year with respect to the employer is

(e) where the provision is a money purchase provision, the total of all amounts each of which is a contribution (other than an additional voluntary contribution made by the individual in 1990, an excluded contribution or a contribution described in paragraph 8308(6)(e)) made under the provision in the year by the individual, except to the extent that the contribution was not made in connection with the individual's employment with the employer and is included in determining the individual's pension credit for the year with respect to any other employer who participates in the plan, and

(f) where the provision is a defined benefit provision, the lesser of

(i) the pension credit that would be determined if this subsection were not applicable, and

(ii) the aggregate of all amounts each of which is a contribution (other than an excluded contribution) made under the provision by the individual in, and in respect of, the year, except to the extent that the contribution was not made in connection with the individual's employment with the employer and is included in determining the individual's pension credit for the year with respect to any other employer who participates in the plan.

History: Para. 8301(8)(e) amended by P.C. 1995-17, subsec. 2(4), January 11, 1995, Canada Gazette, Part II, January 25, 1995, applicable with respect to the determination of pension credits for 1990 et seq.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-124R6: Contributions to registered retirement savings plans.

(9) Multi-employer plans — Subsection (8) is not applicable in respect of a registered pension plan that is a multi-employer plan in a calendar year except, where

(a) the plan is not a specified multi-employer plan in the year;

(b) if the plan contains a defined benefit provision, the Minister has waived in writing the application of paragraph (7)(b) in respect of the plan for the year; and

(c) the Minister has approved in writing the application of subsection (8) in respect of the plan for the year.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-124R6: Contributions to registered retirement savings plans.

(10) Transition rule — money purchase offsets — Where,

(a) throughout the period beginning on January 1, 1981 and ending on December 31 of a particular calendar year after 1989 and before 2000, there has been subtracted, in determining the amount of lifetime retirement benefits under a defined benefit provision of a registered pension plan (other than a specified multi-employer plan), the amount of lifetime retirement benefits under a money purchase provision of the plan or of another registered pension plan,

(b) lifetime retirement benefits under the defined benefit provision are determined, at the end of the particular year, in substantially the same manner as they were determined at the end of 1989, and

(c) for each individual and each calendar year before 1990, the amount of employer contributions made under the money purchase provision for the year with respect to the individual did not exceed $3,500, the pension credit of an individual for the particular year with respect to an employer under the defined benefit provision is equal to the amount, if any, by which

(d) the amount that would, but for this subsection, be the individual's pension credit

exceeds

(e) the lesser of

(i) $2,500, and

(ii) the amount determined by the formula

$$\frac{1}{10} \times \left[A - (B \times C)\right]$$

where

A is the balance in the individual's account under the money purchase provision at the end of 1989,

B is the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the duration (measured in years, including any fraction of a year) of a period ending before 1990 that is pensionable service of the individual under the defined benefit provision and that is not part of a longer period ending before 1990 that is pensionable service of the individual under the provision, and

C is the amount that would be the individual's pension credit for 1989 with respect to the employer under the defined benefit provision if subsection (6) were read without reference to all that portion following subparagraph (b)(iii) thereof.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 8301(10)(e)(ii)C

C is the amount that would be the individual's pension credit for 1989 with respect to the employer under the defined benefit provision if subsection (6) were read without reference to the words "if the year is after 1989" in paragraph (6)(a) and without reference to paragraph (6)(b).

Application: The June 26, 1998 draft regulations (retirement savings), subsec. 5(5), will amend the description of C in subpara. 8301(10)(e)(ii) to read as above, applicable after 1989.

Technical Notes: Subsection 8301(10) provides a special adjustment to the pension credit of an individual under a defined benefit provision of an RPP where benefits under the provision are offset by benefits that can be purchased at retirement from the individual's account under a money purchase provision and where certain other conditions are met. The rules for determining the adjustment contain a reference to subsection 8301(6).

The description of C in subparagraph 8301(10)(e)(ii) is amended to reflect a restructuring of subsection 8301(6). This amendment, which applies after 1989, does not represent a change in policy.

(11) Timing of contributions — Subject to paragraph (12)(b), for the purposes of this Part, a contribution made by an employer in the first two months of a calendar year to a deferred profit sharing plan, in respect of a money purchase provision of a registered pension plan, or in respect of a defined benefit provision of a registered pension plan that was, in the immediately preceding calendar year, a specified multi-employer plan, shall be deemed to have been made by the employer at the end of the immediately preceding calendar year and not to have been made in the year, to the extent that the contribution can reasonably be considered to relate to a preceding calendar year.

(12) Indirect contributions — For the purposes of this Part and Part LXXXIV, where a trade union or association of employers (in this subsection and subsections (13) and (14) referred to as the "contributing entity") makes contributions to a registered pension plan,

(a) such portion of a payment made to the contributing entity by an employer or an individual as may reasonably be considered to relate to the plan (determined in accordance with subsection (13), where that subsection is applicable) shall be deemed to be a contribution made to the plan by the employer or individual, as the case may be, at the time the payment was made to the contributing entity; and

(b) subsection (11) shall not apply in respect of a contribution deemed by paragraph (a) to have been made to the plan.

(13) Apportionment of payments — For the purposes of subsection (12), where employers or individuals make payments in a calendar year to a contributing entity to enable the contributing entity to make contributions to a registered pension plan and the payments are not made solely for the purpose of being contributed to the plan, the contributing entity shall

(a) determine, in a manner that is reasonable in the circumstances, the portion of each payment that relates to the plan;

(b) make the determination in such a manner that all contributions made by the contributing entity to the plan, other than contributions made by the contributing entity as an employer or former employer of members of the plan, are considered to be funded by payments made to the contributing entity by employers or individuals;

(c) in the case of payments remitted to the contributing entity by an employer, notify the employer in writing, by January 31 of the immediately following calendar year, of the portion, or of the method for determining the portion, of each such payment that relates to the plan; and

(d) in the case of payments remitted to the contributing entity by an individual, notify the administrator of the plan in writing, by January 31 of the immediately following calendar year, of the total amount of payments made in the year by the individual that relate to the plan.

(14) Non-compliance by contributing entity — Where a contributing entity does not comply with the requirements of subsection (13) as they apply in respect of payments made to the contributing entity in a calendar year to enable the contributing entity to make contributions to a registered pension plan,

(a) the plan becomes, on February 1 of the immediately following calendar year, a revocable plan; and

(b) the Minister may make any determinations referred to in subsection (13) that the contributing entity failed to make, or failed to make in accordance with that subsection.

(15) Transferred amounts — For the purposes of subparagraphs (2)(b)(ii) and (4)(b)(iv), an amount transferred for the benefit of an individual from a registered pension plan or a deferred profit sharing plan directly to a registered pension plan, a registered retirement savings plan, a registered retirement income fund or a deferred profit sharing plan shall be deemed to be an amount that was not paid to the individual.

History: Subsec. 8301(15) amended by P.C. 1995-17, subsec. 2(5), January 11, 1995, Canada Gazette, Part II, January 25, 1995, applicable with respect to transfers occurring after August 29, 1990.

(16) Subsequent events — Except as otherwise expressly provided in this Part, each pension credit of an individual for a calendar year shall be determined without regard to transactions, events and circumstances that occur subsequent to the year.

8302. Benefit entitlement — (1) For the purposes of subsection 8301(6), the benefit entitlement of an individual under a defined benefit provision of a registered pension plan in respect of a calendar year and an employer is the portion of the individual's benefit accrual under the provision in respect of the year that can reasonably be considered to be attributable to the individual's employment with the employer.

(2) Benefit accrual for year — For the purposes of subsection (1), and subject to subsections (6), (8) and (9), the benefit accrual of an individual under a defined benefit provision of a registered pension plan in respect of a calendar year is the amount computed in accordance with the following rules:

(a) determine the portion of the individual's normalized pension under the provision at the end of the year that can reasonably be considered to have accrued in respect of the year;

(b) where the year is after 1989 and before 1995, determine the lesser of the amount determined under paragraph (a) and

(i) for 1990, $1,277.78,

(ii) for 1991 and 1992, $1,388.89,

(iii) for 1993, $1,500.00, and

(iv) for 1994, $1,611.11; and

(c) where, in determining the amount of lifetime retirement benefits payable to the individual under the provision, there is deducted from the amount of those benefits that would otherwise be payable the amount of lifetime retirement benefits payable to the individual under a money purchase provision of a registered pension plan or the amount of a lifetime annuity payable to the individual under a deferred profit sharing plan, reduce the amount that would otherwise be determined under this subsection by 1/9 of the total of all amounts each of which is the pension credit of the individual for the year under such a money purchase provision or deferred profit sharing plan.

History: Paras. 8302(2)(b) and (c) amended by P.C. 1995-17, subsec. 3(1), January 11, 1995, Canada Gazette, Part II, January 25, 1995, applicable after 1991.

(3) Normalized pensions — For the purposes of paragraph (2)(a), and subject to subsection (11), the normalized pension of an individual under a defined benefit provision of a registered pension plan at the end of a particular calendar year is the amount (expressed on an annualized basis) of lifetime retirement benefits that would be payable under the provision to the individual immediately after the end of the particular year if

(a) where lifetime retirement benefits have not commenced to be paid under the provision to the individual before the end of the particular year, they commenced to be paid immediately after the end of the year;

(b) where the individual had not attained 65 years of age before the time at which lifetime retirement benefits commenced to be paid (or are assumed by reason of paragraph (a) to have commenced to be paid) to the individual, the individual attained that age at that time;

(c) all benefits to which the individual is entitled under the provision were fully vested;

Selected Cases [para. 8302(3)(c)]: Osborn v. Canada, [1995] 2 C.T.C. 2215 (TCC) (Non-vested pension amounts treated as if vested for purposes of RRSP contribution limit).

(d) where the amount of the individual's lifetime retirement benefits would otherwise be determined with a reduction computed by reference to the individual's age, duration of service or both, or with any other similar reduction, no such reduction were applied;

(e) where the amount of the individual's lifetime retirement benefits depends on the remuneration received by the individual in a calendar year (in this paragraph referred to as the "other year") other than the particular year, the remuneration received by the individual in the other year were determined in accordance with the following rules:

(i) where the individual was remunerated for both the particular year and the other year as a person who rendered services on a full-time basis throughout each of the years, the remuneration received by the individual in the other year is identical to the remuneration received by the individual in the particular year,

(ii) where subparagraph (i) is not applicable and the individual rendered services in the particular year, the remuneration received by the individual in the other year is the remuneration that the individual would have received in the other year (or a reasonable estimate thereof determined by a method acceptable to the Minister) had the individual's rate of remuneration in the other year been the same as the individual's rate of remuneration in the particular year, and

(iii) where subparagraph (i) is not applicable and the individual did not render services in the particular year, the remuneration received by the individual in the other year is the remuneration that the individual would have received in the other year (or a reasonable estimate thereof determined by a method acceptable to the Minister) had the individual's rate of remuneration in the other year been the amount that it is reasonable to consider would have been the individual's rate of remuneration in the particular year had the individual rendered services in the particular year;

(f) where the amount of the individual's lifetime retirement benefits depends on the individual's remuneration and all or a portion of the remuneration received by the individual in the particular year is treated under the provision as if it were remuneration received in a calendar year preceding the particular year for services rendered in that preceding year, that remuneration were remuneration for services rendered in the particular year;

(g) where the amount of the individual's lifetime retirement benefits depends on the individual's remuneration and the particular year is after 1989 and before 1995, benefits, to the extent that they can reasonably be considered to be in respect of the following range of annual remuneration, were excluded:

(i) where the particular year is 1990, the range from $63,889 to $86,111,

(ii) where the particular year is 1991 or 1992, the range from $69,444 to $86,111,

(iii) where the particular year is 1993, the range from $75,000 to $86,111, and

(iv) where the particular year is 1994, the range from $80,556 to $86,111;

(h) where

(i) the amount of the individual's lifetime retirement benefits depends on the individual's remuneration,

(ii) the formula for determining the amount of the individual's lifetime retirement benefits includes an adjustment to the individual's remuneration for one or more calendar years,

(iii) the adjustment to the individual's remuneration for a year (in this paragraph referred to as the "specified year") consists of multiplying the individual's remuneration for the specified year by a factor that does not exceed the ratio of the average wage for the year in which the amount of the individual's lifetime retirement benefits is required to be determined to the average wage for the specified year (or a substantially similar measure of the change in the wage measure), and

(iv) the adjustment may reasonably be considered to be made to increase the individual's remuneration for the specified year to reflect, in whole or in part, increases in average wages and salaries from that year to the year in which the amount of the individual's lifetime retirement benefits is required to be determined, the formula did not include the adjustment to the individual's remuneration for the specified year;

(i) where the amount of the individual's lifetime retirement benefits depends on the Year's Maximum Pensionable Earnings for calendar years other than the particular year, the Year's Maximum Pensionable Earnings for each such year were equal to the Year's Maximum Pensionable Earnings for the particular year;

(j) where the amount of the individual's lifetime retirement benefits depends on the actual amount of pension (in this paragraph referred to as the "statutory pension") payable to the individual under the Canada Pension Plan or a provincial plan (as defined in section 3 of that Act), the amount of statutory pension (expressed on an annualized basis) were equal to

(i) 25 per cent of the lesser of the Year's Maximum Pensionable Earnings for the particular year and,

(A) in the case of an individual who renders services throughout the particular year on a full-time basis to employers who participate in the plan, the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the individual's remuneration for the particular year from such an employer, and

(B) in any other case, the amount that it is reasonable to consider would be determined under clause (A) if the individual had rendered services throughout the particular year on a full-time basis to employers who participate in the plan, or

(ii) at the option of the plan administrator, any other amount determined in accordance with a method for estimating the statutory pension that can be expected to result in amounts substantially similar to amounts determined under subparagraph (i);

(k) where the amount of the individual's lifetime retirement benefits depends on a pension (in this paragraph referred to as the "statutory pension") payable to the individual under Part I of the Old Age Security Act, the amount of statutory pension payable for each calendar year were equal to the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the the full monthly pension payable under Part I of the Old Age Security Act for a month in the particular year;

(l) except as otherwise expressly permitted in writing by the Minister, where the amount of the individual's lifetime retirement benefits depends on the amount of benefits (other than public pension benefits or similar benefits of a country other than Canada) payable under another benefit provision of a pension plan or under a deferred profit sharing plan, the amounts of the other benefits were such as to maximize the amount of the individual's lifetime retirement benefits;

(m) where the individual's lifetime retirement benefits would otherwise include benefits that the plan is required to provide by reason of a designated provision of the law of Canada or a province (within the meaning assigned by section 8513), or that the plan would be required to provide if each such provision were applicable to the plan with respect to all its members, such benefits were not included;

(n) where

(i) the individual attained 65 years of age before lifetime retirement benefits commenced to be paid (or are to be assumed by reason of paragraph (a) to have commenced to be paid) to the individual, and

(ii) an adjustment is made in determining the amount of those benefits for the purpose of offsetting, in whole or in part, the decrease in the value of lifetime retirement benefits that would otherwise result by reason of the deferral of those benefits after the individual attained 65 years of age, that adjustment were not made, except to the extent that the adjustment exceeds the adjustment that would be made on an actuarially equivalent basis;

(o) except as otherwise provided by subsection (4), where the amount of the individual's lifetime retirement benefits depends on

(i) the form of benefits provided with respect to the individual under the provision (whether or not at the option of the individual), including

(A) the benefits to be provided after the death of the individual,

(B) the amount of retirement benefits, other than lifetime retirement benefits, provided to the individual, or

(C) the extent to which the lifetime retirement benefits will be adjusted to reflect changes in the cost of living, or

(ii) circumstances that are relevant in determining the form of benefits, the form of benefits and the circumstances were such as to maximize the amount of the individual's lifetime retirement benefits on commencement of payment;

(p) where the amount of the individual's lifetime retirement benefits depends on whether the individual is totally and permanently disabled at the time at which retirement benefits commence to be paid to the individual, the individual were not so disabled at that time; and

(q) where lifetime retirement benefits have commenced to be paid under the provision to the individual before the end of the particular year, benefits payable as a consequence of cost-of-living adjustments described in paragraph 8303(5)(k) were disregarded.

History: Para. 8302(3)(g) amended by P.C. 1995-17, subsec. 3(2), January 11, 1995, Canada Gazette, Part II, January 25, 1995, applicable after 1991.

(4) Optional forms — Where the terms of a defined benefit provision of a registered pension plan permit a member to elect to receive additional lifetime retirement benefits in lieu of benefits that would, in the absence of the election, be payable after the death of the member if the member dies after retirement benefits under the provision commence to be paid to the member, paragraph (3)(o) applies as if the following elections were not available to the member:

(a) an election to receive additional lifetime retirement benefits, not exceeding additional benefits determined on an actuarially equivalent basis, in lieu of all or any portion of a guarantee that retirement benefits will be paid for a minimum period of 10 years or less, and

(b) an election to receive additional lifetime retirement benefits in lieu of retirement benefits that would otherwise be payable to a spouse or former spouse (in this paragraph referred to as the "spouse") of the member for a period commencing after the death of the member and ending with the death of the spouse, where

(i) the election may be made only if the life expectancy of the spouse is significantly shorter than normal and has been so certified in writing by a medical doctor licensed to practise under the laws of a province of Canada or of the place where the spouse resides, and

(ii) the additional benefits do not exceed additional benefits determined on an actuarially equivalent basis and on the assumption that the spouse has a normal life expectancy.

(5) Termination of entitlement to benefits — For the purposes of subsection (3), where an individual ceased in a calendar year to be entitled to all or part of the lifetime retirement benefits provided to the individual under a defined benefit provision of a registered pension plan, the normalized pension of the individual under the provision at the end of the year shall be determined on the assumption that the individual continued to be entitled to those benefits immediately after the end of the year.

(6) Defined benefit offset — Where the amount of lifetime retirement benefits provided under a particular defined benefit provision of a registered pension plan to a member of the plan depends on the amount of lifetime retirement benefits provided to the member under one or more other defined benefit provisions of registered pension plans, the benefit accrual of the member under the particular provision in respect of a calendar year is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the amount that would, but for this subsection, be the benefit accrual of the member under the particular provision in respect of the year if the benefits provided under the other provisions were provided under the particular provision

(b) the amount that would be the benefit accrual of the member under the other provisions in respect of the year if the other provisions were a single provision.

(7) Offset of specified multi-employer plan benefits — Where the amount of an individual's lifetime retirement benefits under a defined benefit provision (in this subsection referred to as the "supplemental provision") of a registered pension plan depends on the amount of benefits payable under a defined benefit provision of a specified multi-employer plan, the defined benefit provision of the specified multi-employer plan shall be deemed to be a money purchase provision for the purpose of determining the benefit accruals of the individual under the supplemental provision.

(8) Transition rule — career average benefits — Where

(a) on March 27, 1988 lifetime retirement benefits under a defined benefit provision of a pension plan were determined as the greater of benefits computed on a career average basis and benefits computed on a final or best average earnings basis,

(b) the method for determining lifetime retirement benefits under the provision has not been amended after March 27, 1988 and before the end of a particular calendar year, and

(c) it was reasonable to expect, on January 1, 1990, that the lifetime retirement benefits to be paid under the provision to at least 75 per cent of the members of the plan on that date (other than members to whom benefits do not accrue under the provision after that date) will be determined on a final or best average earnings basis, at the option of the plan administrator, benefit accruals under the provision in respect of the particular year may, where the particular year is before 1992, be determined without regard to the career average formula.

(9) Transition rule — benefit rate greater than 2 per cent — Subject to subsection (6), where

(a) the amount of lifetime retirement benefits provided under a defined benefit provision of a registered pension plan to a member of the plan is determined, in part, by multiplying the member's remuneration (or a function of the member's remuneration) by one or more benefit accrual rates, and

(b) the largest benefit accrual rate that may be applicable is greater than 2 per cent, the member's benefit accrual under the provision in respect of 1990 or 1991 is the lesser of

(c) the member's benefit accrual otherwise determined, and

(d) 2 per cent of the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the amount that would, if the definition "compensation" in subsection 147.1(1) of the Act were read without reference to subparagraphs (a)(iii) and (iv) and paragraphs (b) and (c) thereof, be the member's compensation for the year from an employer who participated in the plan in the year for the benefit of the member.

(10) Period of reduced remuneration — For the purposes of paragraph (9)(d), where a member of a registered pension plan is provided with benefits under a defined benefit provision of the plan in respect of a period in 1990 or 1991

(a) throughout which, by reason of disability, leave of absence, lay-off or other circumstance, the member rendered no services, or rendered a reduced level of services, to employers who participate in the plan, and

(b) throughout which the member received no remuneration, or a reduced rate of remuneration,

the member's compensation shall be determined on the assumption that the member received remuneration for the period equal to the amount of remuneration that it is reasonable to consider the member would have received if the member had rendered services throughout the period on a regular basis (having regard to the services rendered by the member before the period) and the member's rate of remuneration had been commensurate with the member's rate of remuneration when the member did render services on a regular basis.

(11) Anti-avoidance — Where the terms of a defined benefit provision of a registered pension plan can reasonably be considered to have been established or modified so that a pension credit of an individual for a calendar year under the provision would, but for this subsection, be reduced as a consequence of the application of paragraph (3)(g), that paragraph shall not apply in determining the individual's normalized pension under the provision in respect of the year.

8303. Past service pension adjustment — (1) PSPA with respect to employer — For the purpose of subsection 248(1) of the Act, "past service pension adjustment" of an individual for a calendar year in respect of an employer means the total of

(a) the accumulated past service pension adjustment (in this Part referred to as "accumulated PSPA") of the individual for the year with respect to the employer, determined as of the end of the year,

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is the foreign plan PSPA (determined under subsection 8308.1(5) or (6)) of the individual with respect to the employer associated with a modification of benefits in the year under a foreign plan (as defined in subsection 8308.1(1)), and

(c) the total of all amounts each of which is the specified retirement arrangement PSPA (determined under subsection 8308.3(4) or (5)) of the individual with respect to the employer associated with a modification of benefits in the year under a specified retirement arrangement (as defined in subsection 8308.3(1)).

History: Subsec. 8303(1) amended by P.C. 1996-911, s. 7, June 20, 1996, Canada Gazette, Part II, July 10, 1996, applicable with respect to the determination of past service pension adjustments for 1993 et seq.

(2) Accumulated PSPA for year — For the purposes of this Part and subsection 204.2(1.3) of the Act, the accumulated PSPA of an individual for a calendar year with respect to an employer, determined as of any time, is the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the individual's provisional past service pension adjustment (in this Part referred to as "provisional PSPA") with respect to the employer that is associated with

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 8303(2)

(2) Accumulated PSPA for year — For the purposes of this Part, the accumulated PSPA of an individual for a calendar year with respect to an employer, determined as of any time, is the total of all amounts each of which is the individual's provisional past service pension adjustment (in this Part referred to as "provisional PSPA") with respect to the employer that is associated with Application: The June 26, 1998 draft regulations (retirement savings), subsec. 6(1), will amend the opening words of subsec. 8303(2) to read as above, applicable after 1995.

Technical Notes: Section 8303 provides rules for determining an individual's PSPA for a year in respect of an employer; this amount is relevant in determining the individual's RRSP deduction room for the year.

In general terms, an individual's PSPA for a year in respect of an employer is the individual's accumulated PSPA for the year in respect of the employer. An individual's accumulated PSPA for a year in respect of an employer is the total of all provisional PSPAs of the individual in respect of the employer (i) for which Revenue Canada has, in the year, issued a certification for the purposes of subsection 147.1(10) of the Act, or (ii) that is associated with a past service event occurring in the year and for which a certification of Revenue Canada is not required.

Subsection 8303(2) defines the accumulated PSPA of an individual for a year. The definition applies, in part, for purposes of computing an individual's net past service pension adjustment (net PSPA) under former subsection 204.2(1.3) of the Act.

Subsection 8303(2) is amended to remove the reference to subsection 204.2(1.3). This amendment, which applies after 1995, is consequential on amendments to subsection 204.2(1.3) relating to measures announced in the 1995 federal budget.

(a) a past service event (other than a certifiable past service event with respect to the individual) that occurred in the year and before that time; or

(b) a certifiable past service event with respect to the individual where the Minister has, in the year and before that time, issued a certification for the purposes of subsection 147.1(10) of the Act in respect of the event and the individual.

(2.1) 1991 past service events and certifications — For the purposes of subsection (2),

(a) a past service event that occurred in 1991 (including, for greater certainty, a past service event that is deemed by paragraph 8304(3)(b) to have occurred immediately after the end of 1990) shall be deemed to have occurred on January 1, 1992 and not to have occurred in 1991; and

(b) a certification issued by the Minister in 1991 shall be deemed to have been issued on January 1, 1992 and not to have been issued in 1991.

History: Subsec. 8303(2.1) added by P.C. 1995-17, s. 4, January 11, 1995, Canada Gazette, Part II, January 25, 1995, applicable after 1990.

(3) Provisional PSPA — Subject to subsections (8) and (10) and sections 8304 and 8308, for the purposes of this Part, the provisional PSPA of an individual with respect to an employer that is associated with a past service event that occurs at a particular time in a particular calendar year is the amount determined by the formula

A – B – C

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 8303(3)

A – B – C + D

Application: The June 26, 1998 draft regulations (retirement savings), subsec. 6(2), will amend the formula in subsec. 8303(3) to read as above, applicable with respect to past service events that occur after 1997.

Technical Notes: Subsection 8303(3) sets out the basic rules for determining an individual's provisional PSPA in respect of an employer associated with a past service event. A past service event occurs when benefits are provided to an individual under a defined benefit provision of an RPP in respect of periods before the event occurs, such as when existing benefits are upgraded or when additional periods of pensionable service are credited. In general terms, the provisional PSPA is the sum of the additional pension credits that would have been determined for prior years if the past service benefits had been provided to the individual on a current service basis.

More specifically, an individual's provisional PSPA in respect of an employer associated with a particular past service event is the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of the individual's defined benefit pension credits in respect of the employer, recalculated to reflect all benefits to which the individual is entitled at the time the past service event occurs (i.e., including benefits provided as a consequence of the particular past service event and any prior past service events),

B is the total of the individual's defined benefit pension credits in respect of the employer, recalculated to reflect all benefits to which the individual was entitled immediately before the past service event (i.e., including benefits provided as a consequence of any prior past service events but not the particular past service event), and

C is the amount of the individual's qualifying transfers from RRSPs, RPPs and DPSPs to fund benefits provided as a consequence of the particular past service event (determined in accordance with the rules set out in subsection 8303(6) of the Regulations).

The definition of provisional PSPA in subsection 8303(3) is subject to special rules (referred to as the "modified PSPA rules") in subsection 8304(5), which modify the determination of an individual's provisional PSPA in certain circumstances. The modified PSPA rules apply when

- an individual transfers from one defined benefit provision of an RPP to another defined benefit provision of an RPP — as would be the case when an individual changes jobs and transfers past service benefits under a reciprocal or portability arrangement, or when an individual's benefits under a defined benefit provision of an RPP are replaced with benefits under another defined benefit provision of an RPP of the same employer,
- benefits previously forfeited or cashed-out by an individual under a defined benefit provision of an RPP are reinstated under the provision, or
- benefits are provided to an individual under a defined benefit provision of an RPP in respect of a period that had previously been, but ceased to be, pensionable service of the individual under another defined benefit provision of an RPP.

The effect of the modified PSPA rules is to provide for an individual's provisional PSPA in respect of an employer to be determined under the basic rules in subsection 8303(3), but with two modifications.

- First, the benefits previously provided to the individual in respect of the past service period are taken into account in determining the value of B in the basic PSPA formula — regardless of the fact that, in most cases, the benefits would have been attributable to employment of the individual with a prior employer or would have been previously forfeited or cashed-out by the individual. In effect, this means that the individual's provisional PSPA will be greater than nil only if the new lifetime retirement benefits provided in respect of the past service period exceed the lifetime retirement benefits previously provided to the individual in respect of the past service period.
- Second, any amount transferred to an RRSP or other money purchase type of registered plan in respect of the previously-provided benefits is added to the provisional PSPA. This ensures that the individual is not able to double-up on tax assistance by retaining benefits for the past service period in money purchase form.

With the introduction of PAR, amendments are being made to limit the circumstances in which the modified PSPA rules apply when determining provisional PSPAs associated with past service events occurring after 1997. In particular, the modified PSPA rules will no longer apply

- when benefits previously provided to an individual under a defined benefit provision are reinstated, unless the individual had terminated from the provision before 1997, or
- when benefits are provided to an individual under a defined benefit provision of an RPP in respect of a period that had previously been, but ceased to be, pensionable service of the individual under another defined benefit provision of an RPP, unless the individual had terminated from the other provision before 1997.

The fact that the modified PSPA rules no longer apply in these circumstances means that there is no reduction in the individual's provisional PSPA on account of the recalculated pension credits for benefits previously provided to the individual. This is appropriate given that the individual should have sufficient RRSP deduction room (including any additional room created by PAR on termination) and RRSP funds (including any amount transferred in satisfaction of the previous benefits) to accommodate the reinstatement or replacement of those benefits.

Because the provisional PSPA is determined under the basic PSPA rules in these circumstances, there is no inclusion, in the PSPA calculation, of amounts transferred to an RRSP or other money purchase type of registered plan in respect of the benefits previously provided to the individual. This means that, where such transfers exceeded the PA value of the previous benefits, the individual could retain the excess in money purchase form — which would not have been the case if the modified PSPA rules had applied. Accordingly, to prevent doubling-up on tax assistance in this way, the basic PSPA rules are being amended to include this excess amount in the individual's provisional PSPA. Specifically, the formula in subsection 8303(3) is amended to include in an individual's provisional PSPA associated with a past service event occurring after 1997 the amount of any "excess money purchase transfer" in relation to the individual and the past service event (new variable D) as defined in new subsection 8303(7.1). (See the commentary on subsection 8303(7.1) for further details.)

The determination of an individual's provisional PSPA under subsection 8303(3) is also affected by the amendments made to the rules for determining the amount of an individual's qualifying transfers (variable C in the formula in subsection 8303(3)) made in connection with a past service event. First, the definition of qualifying transfers in subsection 8303(6) is expanded to include transfers from other provisions of the plan under which the past service benefits are being provided (i.e., intra-plan transfers). Second, the definition is narrowed, by virtue of new subsection 8303(6.1), to include only amounts transferred to fund post-1989 past service benefits. These changes generally apply to transfers made on or after June 26, 1998. (See the commentary on subsections 8303(6) and (6.1) for further details.)

The application of the basic PSPA rules in calculating provisional PSPAs is illustrated in examples 5(b) to (d) and example 7 following the commentary on subsection 8304.1(16).

where

A is the aggregate of all amounts each of which is, in respect of a calendar year after 1989 and before the particular year, the amount that would have been the individual's pension credit for the year with respect to the employer under a defined benefit provision of a registered pension plan (other than a plan that is, at the particular time, a specified multi-employer plan) had the individual's benefit entitlement under the provision in respect of the year and the employer been equal to the individual's redetermined benefit entitlement (determined as of the particular time) under the provision in respect of the year and the employer,

B is the aggregate that would be determined for A if the reference in the description of A to "determined as of the particular time" were read as a reference to "determined as of the time immediately before the particular time", and

C is such portion of the amount of the individual's qualifying transfers made in connection with the past service event as is not deducted in computing the provisional PSPA of the individual with respect to any other employer.

Proposed Addition — Reg. 8303(3)D

D is the total of all amounts each of which is an excess money purchase transfer in relation to the individual and the past service event that is not included in determining any other provisional PSPA of the individual that is associated with the past service event.

Application: The June 26, 1998 draft regulations (retirement savings), subsec. 6(3), will add the description of D to subsec. 8303(3), applicable with respect to past service events that occur after 1997.

Technical Notes: See under 8303(3).

Forms: T1004: Application for certification of a provisional past service pension adjustment.

(4) Redetermined benefit entitlement — For the purposes of the description of A in subsection (3), an individual's redetermined benefit entitlement under a defined benefit provision of a registered pension plan in respect of a calendar year and an employer, determined as of a particular time, is the amount that would be determined under section 8302 to be the individual's benefit entitlement under the provision in respect of the year and the employer if, for the purpose of computing the benefit accrual of the individual in respect of the year under the provision and, where subsection 8302(6) is applicable, under any other defined benefit provision, the amount determined under paragraph 8302(2)(a) in respect of a specific provision were equal to such portion of the individual's normalized pension (computed in accordance with subsection (5)) under the specific provision at the particular time, determined with reference to the year, as may reasonably be considered to have accrued in respect of the year.

(5) Normalized pension — For the purposes of subsection (4), the normalized pension of an individual under a defined benefit provision of a registered pension plan at a particular time, determined with reference to a calendar year (in this subsection referred to as the "pension credit year"), is the amount (expressed on an annualized basis) of lifetime retirement benefits, other than excluded benefits, that would be payable to the individual under the provision immediately after the particular time if

(a) where lifetime retirement benefits have not commenced to be paid under the provision to the individual before the particular time, they commenced to be paid immediately after the particular time,

(b) where the individual had not attained 65 years of age before the time at which lifetime retirement benefits commenced to be paid (or are assumed by reason of paragraph (a) to have commenced to be paid) to the individual, the individual attained that age at that time,

(c) the amount of the individual's lifetime retirement benefits were determined with regard to all past service events occurring at or before the particular time and without regard to past service events occurring after the particular time,

(d) paragraphs 8302(3)(c) to (p) (other than paragraph 8302(3)(g), where subsection 8302(11) was applicable in respect of the pension credit year and the provision or would have been applicable had all benefits provided as a consequence of past service events become provided in the pension credit year) were applied for the purpose of determining the amount of the individual's lifetime retirement benefits and, for the purpose of those paragraphs, the pension credit year were the particular year referred to in those paragraphs, and

(e) where

(i) the amount of the individual's lifetime retirement benefits under the provision depends on the individual's remuneration, and

(ii) all or any part of the individual's lifetime retirement benefits in respect of the pension credit year became provided as a consequence of a past service event, pursuant to terms of the provision that enable benefits to be provided to members of the plan in respect of periods of employment with employers who have not participated under the provision, the remuneration received by the individual from each such employer in respect of a period of employment in respect of which the individual is provided with benefits under the provision were remuneration received from an employer who has participated under the provision for the benefit of the individual, and, for the purposes of this subsection, the following benefits are excluded benefits:

(i) provided as a consequence of a second or subsequent increase in the value of the fixed rate after the time that retirement benefits under the provision commenced to be paid to the individual, or

(ii) that would not have become provided had the value of the fixed rate been increased to the amount determined by the formula

$$A \times \frac{B}{C}$$

where

A is the value of the fixed rate immediately before the time of the increase,

B is the average wage for the calendar year that includes the time of the increase, and

C is

(A) if the value of the fixed rate has previously been increased in the calendar year that includes the time of increase, the average wage for that year, or

(B) otherwise, the average wage for the year immediately preceding the calendar year that includes the time of increase,

(g) where

(i) the provision is a flat benefit provision,

(ii) at the particular time, the amount (expressed on an annual basis) of lifetime retirement benefits provided under the provision to each member in respect of pensionable service in each calendar year does not exceed 40 per cent of the defined benefit limit for the year that includes the particular time,

(iii) the conditions in subsection 8306(2) are satisfied in respect of the provision and the past service event in connection with which the normalized pension is being calculated, and

(iv) only one fixed rate is applicable in determining the amount of the individual's lifetime retirement benefits, benefits provided as a direct consequence of an increase in the value of the fixed rate at any time (in this paragraph referred to as the "time of increase") after the pension credit year, other than benefits

(v) provided as a consequence of a second or subsequent increase in the value of the fixed rate after the time that retirement benefits under the provision commenced to be paid to the individual, or

(vi) that would not have become provided had the value of the fixed rate been increased to the greater of

(A) the greatest of all amounts each of which is an amount determined by the formula

$$A \times \frac{B}{C}$$

where

A is a value of the fixed rate in the period beginning on January 1, 1984 and ending immediately before the time of increase,

B is the average wage for the calendar year that includes the time of increase, and

C is the average wage for the later of 1984 and the calendar year in which the value of the fixed rate used for A was first effective, and

(B) the amount determined by the formula

$$D + (E \times F)$$

where

D is the value of the fixed rate immediately before the time of increase,

E is the amount by which the value of the fixed rate used for D would have to be increased to provide an increase in the individual's annual lifetime retirement benefits equal to $18 for each year of pensionable service, and

F is the duration (measured in years, including any fraction of a year) of the period beginning on the later of January 1, 1984 and the day on which the value of the fixed rate used for D was first effective and ending on the day that includes the time of increase;

(h) where the provision is a flat benefit provision, benefits provided as a direct consequence of an increase at any time (in this paragraph referred to as the "time of increase") after the pension credit year in the value of a fixed rate under the provision where

(i) the value of the fixed rate was increased pursuant to an agreement made before 1992, and

(ii) at the time the agreement was made, it was reasonable to expect that the percentage increase in the value of the fixed rate would approximate or be less than the percentage increase in the average wage from the calendar year in which the value of the fixed rate was last increased before the time of increase (or, if the increase is the first increase, the calendar year in which the initial value of the fixed rate was first applicable) to the calendar year that includes the time of increase,

(i) where the provision is a flat benefit provision under which the amount of each member's retirement benefits depends on the member's job category or rate of pay in such a manner that the ratio of the amount of lifetime retirement benefits to remuneration does not significantly increase as remuneration increases, benefits provided as a direct consequence of a change, after the pension credit year, in the individual's job category or rate of pay,

(j) where

(i) the individual's pensionable service under the provision ends before the particular time,

(C) if the amount of the individual's lifetime retirement benefits depends on the individual's remuneration and the remuneration is adjusted as described in paragraph 8302(3)(h), the end of the period in respect of which the adjustment is made, and

(D) if the formula for determining the amount of the individual's lifetime retirement benefits requires the calculation of an amount that is the product of a fixed rate and the duration of all or part of the individual's pensionable service (or other measure of services rendered by the individual), the time as of which the value of the fixed rate applicable with respect to the individual was established, and ending at the earlier of the particular time and the time, if any, at which lifetime retirement benefits commenced to be paid under the provision to the individual, and
